Choosing his text from Matthew 5:16,"Let your light so shine before men that they may see your good work and glorify your Father which is in Heaven," he said. "There were many beautiful illustratione in the Bible regarding Christian life and character but there was none more beautiful than the text. The great value of light in the world of science was only partially known. Vegetation depends on light, and it has been proved that common vegetables grow more rapidly in the Klondyke region than here due to the almost continuous sunshine. Light was also the friend of health and what light means in the physical realm is means in the mental, material and spiritual realm. It is the duty of everyone to let their light shine. When God was set up light in the soul of man that light should shine out in his life as a guide to those with whom he comes in contact and as a warning to those in sin." "I would not give much for the legion that is not seen, he said, "there are passages in the Bible that say it is a duty to bear testimony for Jesus with the mouth but the passage has more reference to our character where our lot is cast. Testimony of words without testimony of life is not worth much." Mr. Going analyzed spiritual light as faith, love and obedience. "These," he said, "constituted light. If a man possesess faith in his soul he has a power that is going to make himself felt. The trouble with the world to-day is not the infidels in it. They may cause an occasional faint heart to doubt but it was the infidelity in the church itself. Moody said, "If God Almighty will only take the infidelity out of the church it will have a great power." "Love which was the second part of the analysis," he said, "the mightiest power in the world and the mightiest instrument God has placed in hands of the Christian Church to-day. Churches dotted all over our land, homes erected in every constituency for the aged, and indigent, hospitals for sick and shelters for children all speak of this power of love. Obedience and love cannot be separated. Obedience is the outcome and evidence of love. The evidence that God had of our love is our readiness to do His will. In concluding, he asked, "How are you letting your light shine? Are you willing to let your faith shine and let love to your fellow men and God be seen and are you willing to obey God, though the heavens fall and you stand alone on the earth?"

The Evening Service.

The evening sermon was based on the last portion of John 19:5, "And Pilate saith unto them, 'Behold the man'." there is a common maxim to-day, that each generation should build on a foundation left by previous generations. If the foundation is adequate it is wise to build on it. But if found unwise it is better that the past should perish than it should cripple the future of some lives. There are customs and habits hanging around the world, like iron chains around the neck of a swimmer, only to hinder progress. In the past religion was something to teach men how to die. To-day the question is being looked at from a different angle. It is a good thing to know how to die but it is far better to know how to live because that means everything. The Gospel understood means life. Christ said, "Because I live ye shall live also." and "He that believeth in Me hath everlasting life." The crucifixion of Christ gives life and without the shedding of blood there is no remission of sin. Blood is emblematic of life. There are diseases in the world in political, social and religious realm, and some are made venerable through customs. Some are passing away and others tightening their grips. There are germs abroad which bring forth an age of skepticism and atheism. The worldy spirit of greed and selfishness are also a constant menace to Christian love. The only remedy is to get back to the foundation principles of the Lord Jesus Christ." Mr. Going said there were still hopeful signs, there were more young men and women studying the word of God than ever before, and he had one exhortation to make, "Take Christ into your life, take Him for your pattern." What the world needs is a right type of an ideal. Before civilization laid its hand on the world, the warrior was the ideal man. To-day there is a tendency to make the man who possesess money the ideal. There are some men struggling to a higher standard of ideal, which is to be found in the Lord Jesus Christ. Jesus is the revelation of God to man and also of man to man. When Pilate said, 'Behold the man' he gave utterance to a far greater truth than he ever realized. Man is worthy of the title of man just so far as they measure up to the pattern of Jesus. Whatever would have been wrong in the Lord Jesus Christ is wrong for the church, the preacher, the church member of the sinner. Too often we put down one code for the minister and another for the people. God puts down one and says, 'Follow it.' The best of all is to have a consciousness in our soul that we build a life and character that will stand as a monument forever."

Church Repaired.

Extensive repairs to the church amounting to about eighteen hundred dollars have just rece ntly been completed. The auditorium is very bright and attractive with its newly decorated walls of French grey and ivory with light grey trimmings and touches of gold. The ceiling being in light oak with dark oak trimming. The pews have been varnished, the floors painted and a new stairway to the basement at the back of the church. The outside appearance is also greatly improved with a new fireproof roof. The entrance steps which were outside were taken down and with the exception of two wide cement steps they have been re-built in the vestibule. Mr. Going at the evening service, congratulated the congregation on the splendid appearance of the church since being renovated and he believed a church ought to be in harmony with the spirit of worship and ought to correspond with the apparent wealth of the people of the community.

Music Given.

The service of song under the leadership of R. Bonney was very attractive. The numbers by the choir were as folows: Vocal solo, "Open the Gates of the Temple", by Mrs. G. W. Chiles; mixed quartette,

Better Days — Better Ways

MAN'S ingenuity has turned the dreams of yesterday into realities of to-day.

A marked contribution to modern progress has been made by Life Insurance. Among the advantages it affords is that it enables a person to "create an estate immediately and pay for it later."

For example: If you desire a $25,000 estate you can guarantee it by depositing 2% per year. (Age 33, London Life Jubilee Annual Dividend Policy). Even if you lived to make only one deposit the London Life would deliver to your heirs the entire $25,000.

Thus Life insurance makes it possible for you to set up an estate sufficient to provide a life income for your wife—a fund for your later years—a monthly cheque if you are disabled—or money for whatever other needs you may have.

The benefits of life insurance can be secured only while you are in good health. For this reason the agent is your friend when he advises you to take life insurance NOW.

Booths were numerous and two long tea tables were set in the central space. The main booth was in charge of Mrs. L. Moncrief, Mrs. S. J. Mackay and Mrs. L. Windrim and contained fancy and useful articles, such as embroidery, crocheting, knitting, sewing and novelties. Mrs. J. Poyser was in charge of the apron booth. The fish pond was in charge of Miss Pearl Blaylock. The parcel post booth, which attracted children and grown-ups alike, was in charge of Mrs. Roy Windrim and Miss Amy Best.

The candy booth, with its splendid assortment of home-made fudge, taffy, maple cream, sea foam and mint nips, did a flourishing business. Mrs. H. Hall and Mrs. Harold Dick were in charge.

The home-made cooking booth and country store looked very refreshing with its tempting array of dainty foods that included home-made bread and buns, biscuits, scones, cakes, pies, pickles, chickens, vegetables and other good things to eat. Mrs. W. Thorne and Miss L. Blaylock were in charge of this booth.

The tea tables looked very attractive with their lighted candles and vases of cut flowers and abundance of good things to eat. The ladies in charge were Mrs. O. G. Williamson, Mrs. Robert Mahood, Mrs. S. Rutherford, Mrs. E. Hayes and Mrs. T. Magee, assisted by Misses Amy Crafton, Bessie Lees, Eileen Rutherford, and Laura Hall. These ladies spared no time or care in catering to the desires of their numerous guests.

Adorning one of the tea tables was a handsome silver flower basket, which is a gift to the church from A. Byers of Toronto, a former resident of Omemee and a member of the Presbyterian Church. Mr. Byers also contributed numerous articles which helped toward the success of the bazaar, thus displaying the interest he still maintains in his home church, and for which the ladies are very grateful.

At a convenient hour in the evening an autograph quilt with the names worked in maple leaf design was sold by auction, Mr. F. Brockley acted as auctioneer. The highest bid was $5.00, by Mr. R. J. Patterson, of Lindsay, who secured the quilt.

This was the first undertaking of this sort for the society, which was only organized in May, and the ladies are justly proud of its success. The proceeds amounted to over $125.

Those who attended from a distance were: Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Windrim, Mrs. L. McGaughey and son, Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Patterson, Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Mitchell and daughter, Miss Emily Mitchell, of Lindsay; Mr. A. Byers of Toronto and Mrs. H. Latchford of Best's Station.

Magician As Well As Actor

Jack Mulhall

Not only does he enact the role of a sleight-of-hand artist in the First National picture, "Lady Be Good," in which he is co-featured with Dorothy Mackaill, but Jack Mulhall proves his real ability as a prestidigitator as well as author in a series of interesting illustrated articles entitled "Simple Tricks in Magic." This fascinating feature, in ten daily instalments, is now running in this paper.

YOUNG'S POINT ANGLICAN

(Examiner Correspondence)

YOUNG'S POINT, Nov. 7.—A very impressive sermon was given in St. Alden's Church on Sunday evening, by Rev. R. T. C. Dwelly. He dealt with the season of All Saints, and the thoughts derived from a meditation upon it. He took his text from Rev. VII, 13-15.

The speaker said, "We approach the meditation upon the season with mingled feelings of joy and sorrow. All have felt the devastating hand of death among members of our families or circle of friends. Time is a great healer of bleeding hearts, caused by the breach created by the presence of death in our midst. There is a joyful note sounded in two thoughts which arise from a study of the season of All Saint. Does man live after death? We realize as true Christians not only that can, but that he does. Man has within himself that vital spark which survives death. In what then, does life in the hereafter consist? It is the taking up of the thread of this life and making it nobler. It is contrary to the conception of God as Righteousness and Love, that all the beauty and goodness in life should cease just as though death was the snuffing out of all existence. We repeat belief in the Communion of Saints, every time we attend the services of the Church. Those living in the life of the hereafter have received just promotion and between them and us then, is an indissoluble bond. This is one of the grandest thoughts presented so beautifully as it is in the religion of Christianity. There being the assurance there of immortality and of communion with those who have passed hence, there is the tremendous thought impresed upon us of the wonderful unity of the whole Church, in spite of its apparent disunion. We must not forget that the church consists of those in this life and also those who have passed on. When our time comes to graduate into the fuller life, we must see to it that we have earned that graduation. To be assured of this we must make this life, which is the preparation, thorough in every aspect and all our work must be done faithfully."

NORHAM UNITED.

(Examiner Correspondence)

NORHAM, Nov. 7—A very interesting service was held in Norham Church on Sunday evening, when Ben Buchanan and Mr. Ewing, laymen of Warkworth, ably assisted the pastor. These gentlemen had been delegates to the Laymen's Conference of the United Church, in Toronto, in October. While there, they had caught the vision of the great need of the church and the wonderful opportunities of the laymen for service. Each gentleman gave a report of what had especially impressed him at the convention. At the close of these addresses the pastor, Rev. D. E. Clare, made a strong appeal for the support of the Missionary and Extension Fund of the church. During the service, Mrs. Douglas Knight and Mrs. Harry Wilson sang very sweetly, "In the Garden."

TRENT RIVER UNITED CHURCH.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

TRENT RIVER, November 7.—Rev. W. R. Archer, preacher at the United Church on Sunday, November 4, chose his text from Luke xii. 34: "For where your treasure is, there will your heart be also." The speaker said, "What is the chief business of man? Occupations differ. We have our varied kinds of work—practice of music. Each of us are fitted for some work. We travel on an ocean-going vessel with little thought of the man down below shovelling coal. His work is just as particular as the captain's duty. Jesus taught us a man's duty was to minister. The Prince of Wales' motto is 'Ich dien,' meaning 'I serve,' which is the highest life." The speaker mentioned three words—vocation, vacation, and avocation. "One's vocation is his calling. Vacation is temporarily off your job—something which pulls you away from business. The real thought is to keep our avocation and vacation in keeping with one another. Vocation is to serve God. Be careful that avocation goes parallel with our business. Bobby Burns, the Scottish poet, understood very well when he wrote, 'A Man's a Man for a' That.' 'Man' to Burns meant a capitalized man. Our business was to serve God. Learn to do by doing When it comes to service to God by humanity, not by dreaming, but by doing. How are we building? Are we laying up treasure in Heaven?"

3.—The Broken Match. Showing how the match is secreted in hem. The hem should be a bit wider, however, than is illustrated.

Spread a handkerchief (a silk one of dark color and with wide hem, should be employed) on the table. Place in center an ordinary wooden match. Then fold the handkerchief corners toward the center covering the match. Let someone feel the match through the handkerchief and ask him to break it in two. Immediately, however, the handkerchief is opened and the match, fully restored, is dropped from it.

This is the secret: A second match, like the one shown, is inserted in the wide hem of the handkerchief secretly prior to exhibiting the experiment. When folding the corners of the handkerchief, the one with the match concealed in it is folded last and a little beyond the visible match which brings the hidden bit of wood in proper position to present to the spectator while the one shown comes naturally just inside the performer's hand. The match (the hidden one) is then broken and at once the handkerchief is opened and the uninjured original match allowed to drop on table.

REV. DIMMITT PREACHES IN KNOX UNITED

Second Service of "United Church Week" Is Held in Knox Church.

SPECIAL MUSIC.

"God Always Works Through Men," Declared Speaker in Fine Address.

In order to accomplish his work, God, clothes Himself in the personalities of His people," said Rev. L. F. Dimmitt, speaking at Knox Church in connection with the United Church Week in the city. Rev. Dimmitt took as his text, Judges, chapter 6, verse 34, "The spirit of the Lord came upon Gideon." It was pointed out that this was not an exact or literal translation of the old Hebrew and in the American revised version of the Bible it gives in the margin this translation "The spirit of the Lord clothed Himself with Gideon". This was said to be the closest translation to the old Hebrew.

At the time referred to in the text the Midianites and the Amalekites were raiding in countless hordes up. on the Jews. The people were afraid and left their homes to live in caves and out-of-the-way places for safety. It was a sore time in history and then God called upon Gideon and clothed Himself with Gideon to go into battle against the invaders. "It was really, God" said the speaker forcefully, "who led that handful of men against the vast army of the enemy. All down through the ages God has been clothing Himself in the personalities of His people. Gideon was no hero in himself, he had no exceptional qualities of leadership, he was but the youngest of a very poor and unknown family. But God used him to clothe Himself to do His will and Gideon gave himself for that purpose.

Works Through Men

"God always works through men," said Rev. Dimmitt. "Moses was God, leading the people through Moses. The Twelve Apostles were a witness to Jesus Christ and God did His work through them. Also in later years, God, did His Work through Luther, Wesley, Lincoln and a host of others clothing Himself with them.

Bringing in the personal element into the work of God the speaker said that in order to accomplish His work God needs the people. God, often speaks to people in many uncommon ways to urge them to do His will and these are often the strange urgings and promptings a person feels almost every day. He gave a dramatic story of the preach. er who stopped in the middle of his sermon and recited Tennyson's "Charge of the Light Brigade." The poem had no bearing upon what had preceded or on what followed but the preacher had an overbearing urge to recite it, an urge he could not explain or resist. After the sermon one of his audience came forward and said that he had been one of the few who had returned from that famous charge and the fact that the preached had recited that famouse poem had impressed him very much and he would try to live a better life.

The speaker pointed out that it was not necessary for a person to give up his present calling and start out preaching or leading a band against oppression it was sufficient to give one's life into the Lord's hands and do one's utmost to do His will as He would like one to do.

The music at the service was of a very high order. The combinded choir gave a very pleasing anthem and Charles S. Leslie, of Toronto, sang "The Holy City" in a splendid voice.

DELEGATES GIVE COMBINED REPORT

St. George's A.Y.P.A. Hears Reports of Dominion Convention Held Recently.

St. George's A.Y.P.A. held their regular meeting on Monday evening, with the president, Miss I. Parkes in the chair. Leslie Moore, vice-president, and Miss Dorothy Churchill, who represented the branch as delegates at the Dominion Conference held last month in Windsor, gave their combined report, which was read by Miss Churchill. The thanks of the branch were accorded the delegates for the interesting reports presented. The young people of this organization have been busy helping to improve the church basement. During the summer they painted the floors of both rooms and have since varnished the lower part of the walls and other woodwork in the main room. They have now purchased linoleum to cover the platform which was erected by the efforts of the Sunday School early in the year.

Resident Lost Opossum One Found Probably His

The mystery of how the opossum that P. Parsons, of Omemee, caught, has been solved by Howard Cole, of 587 Downie Street. Last winter Mr. Cole imported two pair of opossums from Ohio, and kept them caged in the yard at his home. Near the latter part of March one of these animals escaped, and Mr. Cole had not heard of it until he noticed the article in last night's Examiner. Mr. Cole still has the mate to the one that escaped. It is at present taking on its winter coat, which is a brown color streaked with grey.

Besides the opossums, Mr. Cole has a pair of English ring neck pheasants and several White Leghorn bantam chickens, also imported from Ohio. These are probably the only ones around Peterborough.

Fire Breaks Out in House Near Auburn Woolen Mills.

LOSS $600.

At 5.49 p.m. yesterday the Fire Department received an urgent call to Box 212 at the Auburn Mills where a small store house, about 15ft. x 30ft., containing some waste, shawdy wool was in a mass of flames. When the department arrived the building was a solid mass of flames. The building was completely destroyed before the fire was extinguished. The loss was around $600, partly covered by insurance.

STORM CAUSES HEAVY DAMAGE

One Hundred Thousand Dollars' Damage Is Done Around Lake Nipissing.

BREAKWATERS BROKEN.

NORTH BAY, Ont., Nov. 7—(Canadian Press).—Lake Nipissing became calm overnight following a most furious wind storm that has ever swept it in the memory of old inhabitants. A survey of the lake front reveals damage estimated at over hundred thousand dollars occasioned when the waters burst the breakwaters and poured down on the summer cottages and permanent homes.

With breakwaters broken the situation is dangerous should another gale develop as the village of West Ferris is liable to inundation. Help in repairing the defences of the district has been requested from Premier Ferguson and the Department of Public Works at Ottawa.

ROBERT MILLS

OWEN SOUND, Nov. 7 (Special to The Examiner).—Robert Mills, a native of Emily Township, died here on Monday evening as the result of a stroke last Tuesday. Mr. Mills, who was sixty-eight years of age, was the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Mills. They moved to Sullivan Township, many years ago, where Mr. Mills took up farming. After several years at this profession he moved to Tara and entered the farm implement business. Six years ago he moved to Owen Sound, where he had engaged in the same business.

Mr. Mills was a prominent Orangeman and an officer of the Black Chapter. Eruption of Volcano Follows Fete of Patron

CATANIA, Sicily, Nov. 7 (Canadian Press).—A stream of molten lava, pouring from Mount Etna to-day, was sweeping through the town of Mascali and fertile countryside, leaving destruction in its wake.

The lava struck the town of 10,000 inhabitants shortly before 8 o'clock last night, just after the townsfolk had finished celebrating the fete of their patron. Saint Leonardo, whose statue was carried on the shoulders of four old men. Some followed the old men in procession while the others speeded preparations for their departure.

The lava swept into the principal square of the city and then flowed toward the sea, about two and a half miles to the east.

SEVENTY YEARS

sesses a thorough knowledge of the river and has been a guide at various times for more than forty years. His first employer for a fishing trip was a man named Johnston from Norwood. For eight years he has also been a licensed automobile driver and is proud of the fact that at his age he is as good a driver as any of them.

Has Old Books.

Since the death of his father, H. H. has possessed a very ancient set of books. Asked about them he was able to locate only seven and these were not of a set but separate volumes and of an educational nature. They were the property of his father and perhaps his grandfather. Their age in some cases could not be told exactly but the yellowed paper and the long S's of the earlier centuries attested their age. Recently, Mr. Pollock was prevailed upon to part with several volumes to a friend in the ministry, the Rev. Frank Loft. Mr. Loft is now resident in Peterborough. There were four volumes in those given Mr. Loft and they were comments on the Bible by authorities of the time. Some of them date back as far as 1762.

The first of the seven books he has left was a text-book on geometry and trigonometry. The date was obliterated, as at some time or other the book had been used as a child's scrap-book, but a glance through its pages showed that many of the formulæ of the present-day texts were contained in it. The long S's made the reading a bit difficult for one educated in later times. The second volume was dated 1833 and titled "A Commentary on the Holy Bible from Job to Solomon's Song." Its author was Henry Scott, with occasional passages from other writers. It was published at 56 Paternoster Row, London, by the religious tract society of that city.

The oldest volume was the third to be shown this afternoon. It dated back to the year 1801 and was headed "A New Geography, History and Grammar and Present State of the Several Kingdoms of the World, With Correct Maps." It was printed for G. G. and J. Robertson at Paternoster Tow, London. On the fly-leaf of the book has been written the name, Walter W. Boswell. Mr. Boswell was a friend of his father, Mr. Pollock explained. Under date of 1835 was a second commentary on the Holy Bible by the same author as the former commentary. This time the book dealt with the passages from Romans to Revelations.

The fifth volume was a Guthrie's Geography which bore no date, the fly-leaf and front cover having been separated from the remainder of the volume. It was printed by the firm of S. Hamilton at Little Queen Street, Lincoln's-inn-field. Under date 1867, the sixth volume was a History of the Nations of Antiquity, by Dr. Leonhard Schmitz, F.R.S.E., rector of the High School of Edinburgh. The book was printed in New York by the firm of Sheldon and Company and was sold in Toronto by W. C. Chewitt and Company, King Street East. Mr. Pollock felt sure he had more books but was unable to locate any others. The books have at one time been expensively bound, but they have not been carefully preserved at some time or other and some of them are the worse for wear. It is only lately that he has realised that they might be of some value other than as family heirlooms and Mr. Pollock is having them more carefully cared for.

Not a Party Man.

Henry Hugh Pollock is not a party politics man. He does not believe in sticking to one party through thick and thin. He has made it a practice during his life of voting for the party which represents what he believes to be the best for the country. He is not a member of any fraternal orders, although at one time he strongly favored the Orange Order. He is now a member of the United Church, and was from his earliest childhood a member of the Methodist faith. For his daily reading, he prefers the Toronto Globe, but even this well-known and widely read morning newspaper does not always please him. Every once in a while he cancels his subscription, but on each occasion has renewed it after various lengths of time. In all, it is about forty years since he first became a subscriber.

Married in 1881.

January 18, 1881, was a bright winter day, Mr. Pollock recalls. It was his wedding day. His bride was Anna Jane McNeilly, an Irish colleen of twenty-five summers and a native of Donegal, Ireland. To them were born six children, all of whom are living. Mrs. Pollock died February 22, 1922. Mrs. Sam Ellis (Edna) of Havelock is the eldest child. Harry, the second child, is now a railroad engineer on the C. P. R. line out of Havelock. Frank, the third child, is now general merchant and postmaster at Trent River. He carries on the business in the stand that his father occupied. Ross, the fourth child, is also living at Trent River. Fred, the youngest son, also followed the metal ribbons and is driving a C. P. R. engine out of Havelock. Mabel, the youngest of the family, is now Mrs. Kenneth Green and resides in Toronto. Since retiring from business, Mr. Pollock has removed from his old residence, married a second time and lives in a white frame house just across the street from the United Church.

Father a Minister.

Interesting as the life-story of H. H. Pollock may be, the account of his father's adventures reads more like fiction than may readily be supposed. He, too, was Henry Hugh Pollock, and was by profession a Presbyterian minister. He received his education in Belfast and Glasgow. He was born in Scotland and brought up in Ireland. He was a cousin of Lord Dufferin, the former Governor-General of Canada. While at college he became close friends with his classmate, George Brown, who later became known as the founder of The Globe. Under the rating of ship's surgeon he made thirteen successful voyages across the Atlantic and finally settled as a school teacher in the city of Belleville.

A highly educated man, Mr. Pollock was able to speak fluently in eight different languages, including the English language. He was a master in German, Hebrew, French, Latin, Greek, Spanish and Gaelic. H. H. Pollock recalls an event many years ago when he was driving from Cobourg with his father one cold winter day. Some workmen were breaking stone on the road. As they came alongside, his father addressed the man in some strange language. They flocked about their vehicle and listened to him almost hungrily. He was speaking the Gaelic to natives of either Ireland or Scotland.

Listed among the friends of the late H. H. Pollock was the Hon. MacKenzie Bowell, who was leader of the Conservative party after the death of Sir John Thompson and who later gave way to Sir Charles Tupper, who led the opposition against Sir Wilfrid Laurier. During one election campaign, Mr. Pollock left his position as a school teacher in Belleville to accompany MacKenzie Bowell on a tour of Hastings.

"There were no cars in those days," said H. H. this afternoon. "They had to travel by horse, ox or foot. And they stumped the whole county of Hastings. My father was a good speaker."

Nor was this all of the thrills which constituted the life of the father. During the French Revolution he was in Paris as correspondent for the London Times and also wrote articles for the Parisian press. This was in 1847-8, and many were the dangers that beset him. He carried the mark of a sword cut on his face till the day of his death. It was inflicted by a revolutionary officer one day in the street in Paris. It was also learned that he used to drape a Union Jack about him as he walked through the streets.

Now, after years of industry and accomplishment, Henry Hugh Pollock lives quietly at his home in Trent River. He is still active and capable, and as eager to be in the van as ever. His wide circle of friends will wish him many happy returns.

F. and A.M. No. 435. The service was held in the United Church and was conducted by Rev. W. R. Archer. Interment was made in Maple Grove Cemetery.

W. T. SINE.

(Examiner Correspondence)

STIRLING, Nov. 7.—The funeral of the late W. T. Sine was held on Saturday afternoon. A great number gathered at his late residence, 8th Concession of Rawdon, to pay their respects and to attend the funeral. A short service was held at the house by Rev. A. N. Reid. The cortege which was one of the largest ever seen in this section, extending nearly two miles, proceeded to St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Stirling. When near the village, the Oddfellows numbering nearly one hundred, lined up to escort the procession to the Church. Rev. Mr. Reid was assisted in the service by Rev. Mr. Joblin, of Rawdon United Church and Rev. Mr. Byers, of St. John's Anglican Church. Many beautiful floral tributes evidenced the high esteem in which the late Mr. Sine was held. Harold Ashley, Past Grand, as Noble Grand, and Fred Hulin, as Past Grand, gave the burial services of the I.O.O.F. The pall bearers were Brothers A. B. Pargey and Mason Clarke, of the Encampment and Brothers H. Johnston, Harper Rollins, F. T. Ward and W. Broadworth for the Subordinate Lodge. There were representatives from the Lodges at Springbrook, Frankford, Belleville, and other points.

Theaters of the future will have not only a revolving stage, but a revolving audience, in the opinion of a noted German architect, who plans to build a theater in which the floor, with its audience, can be turned at an angle of 180 degrees.

Last year there were fewer trades disputes causing stoppages of work and fewer working days lost through these disputes than in any of the last 40 years.

MILLION DOLLAR FIRE SWEEPS THROUGH BUFFALO WATERFRONT

Blaze Starts From Bonfire Built By Two Small Boys.

FANNED BY WIND

Fire Spreads Rapidly To Many of Main Waterfront Buildings.

BUFFALO, N.Y., Nov. 7 (Canadian Press).—Fire starting from a bonfire built by two small boys roared its way through a warehouse and freight sheds along the water front yesterday, leaped a railway track and crossed lower Main street, attacking buildings on both sides of the thoroughfare. Late last night it was not under control.

Fire Chief George W. Hedden estimated the property loss at nearly $1,000,000, predicting that an entire block of business and rooming structures would be wiped out.

Fanned by a strong southwest wind which reached a maximum of 50 miles an hour, the fire at 4 o'clock had spread to the Pierce Building and Lautz Brothers' soap works across the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western railway tracks from where it started. On the east side of Main street, two buildings were afire—the People's Lodge House and the W. A. Case Company next door.

The flames first swept through the Detroit and Cleveland Navigation Company warehouse, west of the foot of Main street.

CHEESE SHOWS IMPROVEMENT

not satisfied with the improvements made this year were mighty hard to satisfy. He had always claimed that the class of men in the Ontario factories was equal to and better than that of any other province or country, but not till this year had they begun to hit their stride. He had anticipated such remarkable results for the last ten years, he claimed.

Canada's keenest competition came from New Zealand, he claimed. In the last exhibition in England, Canada had not come in for one "Smell of the prize money" for cheese and butter. New Zealand had captured most of the honours for cheese and the butter honours had gone to Australia.

During the past season he had spent two months in England, Scotland and Denmark with a view of getting a better understanding of the conditions in these countries. He had not heard one merchant in either England or Scotland say that any cheese was better than the Canadian product. Their only fault was that there was not enough of it. In spite of a diligent search of London, he was only able to find one place where second class Canadian Cheese was sold. Most of it went to Manchester and Liverpool where the trade demanded it at the price. London demanded first class cheese.

Poor Containers

Canadian cheese makers would be ashamed of their product if they could see it in the warehouses in England and Scotland, he said. The boxes were broken and battered looking. He recalled having seen in a large store house where there had been a huge pile of New Zealand cheese, neatly plied and not a broken container in the lot. Nearby was a similar pile of Canadian cheese but very battered looking and a pile of broken containers close by. The merchants had not complained about the type of container any more than to say that they should be made stronger. The style appeared to them to be the best they had seen.

Mr. Barr had not investigated the cheese making places of England and Scotland but had been very favourably impressed with the factories of Denmark. The Canadian factories did not compare with these at all favourably. They did not seem to be proper places to make food stuffs, many of them. He had seen a great many in Ontario last year and stated that he would not issue a first class certificate to a man who did not keep his factory clean. It was not fair to good, clean cheese makers to issue certificates to those who were not. The good men of their trade must be protected and given credit for what they were doing. He also thought that the association should direct their attention and efforts to the milk producers if hey hoped to maintain or increase their present high standard of cheese.

There followed an informal discussion as to the proper feeding of dairy cattle and also referred to the rights of the creamery men to accept milk or cream from farmers whose milk had been refused by the cheese factories.

ONE HUNDRED YEARS

Shearer, grandfather of Mrs. George Patterson, Messrs. Sired and John Campbell built the first church at Bethel—a strikingly beautiful edifice on either side of which stood groups of maples and pines, and in front of which was an inviting lawn. 'Tis said the pews were deep and very comfortable. The first regular minister was the Rev. Mr. MacDowell.

The circuit of Keene was organized in 1855 and the newly ordained Mr. McDowell was appointed pastor. He presided at a meeting in which Brothers Andrew Shearer, Joseph Metcalfe, Christopher Howson, John Kindred, Thomas Johnston and William Armstrong took part. Mr. Armstrong being appointed recording secretary. The other stewards appointed were Christopher Howson, Thomas Atkins, George Erskine, James Lawson and John Fife. Then followed the first quarterly meeting soon after at which Joseph Metcalfe was appointed class leader and John Atkins a steward in place of Thomas Atkins. This was in August and the next October the sum of twenty-five pounds was voted to pay the minister's board for a year, and ten pounds for horse keep. (Mr. McDowell was a bachelor).

The class leaders were meeting their classes once a week in the Methodist style, inquiring into their souls' prosperity and to receive their offerings towards the minister, church and poor. Classes reporting that first year were Andrew Shearer's class, Keene class, Beaver Meadow class, Brothers' Jamieson, Kindred, Lane and Bowey's classes. John Dixon and John Blezard appear during the year as stewards. In 1857 an Allandale class was formed. In 1863 Allandale had 21 members, Bethel, 35; Beaver Meadow 20, Hales' Point 11, Dixon's 11, Keene 48, and Kindred's 25. Next year Bethel class had the following names: Robert Brown (leader), Wm. Nelson, Mary Nelson, James Nelson, Thomas Nelson, Mrs. Thomas Nelson, Wm. Armstrong, Elizabeth Armstrong, James Carter, Sarah Jane Carter, Robert Carter, Ellen Carter, Wm. Carter, Margaret Fife, Eliza Fife, Agnes Fife, John Fife, William Fife, James Heale, Margaret Heale, Jane Eason, Maria Rutherford, Wm. Redpath, Catherine Redpath, Cornelius Dawson, John and James Brown, Eliza Campbell, Thos. Evans, Jane Evans, Thos. McConnell, Isabella Fife, Thomas Fife.

Evangelistic Services

During those early days, the evangelistic services stood out as memorable events, being known as Protracted meetings. Among the local preachers taking part were Brothers Simon Johnston, John Kindred and Mr. Mark. It remained for Mrs. Margaret Fife to become superintendent of the first Sunday school which started in 1855. Robert Spiers, John Borland and the present superintendent, Samuel Armstrong, succeeded her in that order, Mr. Armstrong having a record of service of 44 years and still "going strong." An Epworth League sprung into existence in 1893 and attained as many as eighty members.

The year 1896 brought a great event in the history of the district, when Sir Joseph Flavelle laid the corner stone of the new church, built on the site of the old one. It was opened in October of that year and the Rev. Jas. Liddy became pastor.

The dedication ceremony was performed by Rev. T. M. Campbell of Campbellford, President of the Bay of Quinte Conference, on Friday, October 9th. The ministers present were: Rev. E. Roberts, Belleville; W. L. Baynes-Reed, Anglican clergyman, Otonabee; Rev. W. R. Young and Rev. J. J. Rae, Peterborough; and the pastor, Rev. Mr. Liddy. In the evening an entertainment was held with Dr. Fife of Peterborough presiding. Addresses were given by Reverends Campbell, Roberts, F. Andrews, Presbyterian minister, Keene; Baynes-Reed, and Mr. Liddy. Miss Jackson, Peterborough, Miss Pengilly of Norwood and Miss B. Roxborough of Keene were solists. The church cost $2,800 and commenced, so the report reads, without a cent of debt on it. On the Sabbath following, October 11th, the opening service was continued by Rev. Mr. Totten of Lindsay, who preached morning and evening.

Twenty-five ministers have guided the destinies of the congregation since the advent of Mr. McDowell. From falling hands the torch has been passed from one generation to the next. Through mortal motive, scheme and plan ran the wise Eternal purpose through which His people were taught the tender Fatherhood of God; their faith grew firm, and love grew warm, enabling them to possess that courage and strength which has made Canada a great nation.

It is said that 17 diseases are possible from undue constriction of the feet.

REPUBLICANS

in the three southern states in his column at this stage of the tabulation. In Massachusetts, from a position 2,000 votes behind Smith, Hoover pulled that much ahead when one-sixteenth of the precincts had reported. He had the usual Republican lead in Maine, and was well in front in every other New England state. Rhode Island, confidently claimed by Democrats, was three to one for Hoover when nine small precincts had been counted.

Favorable to Smith

The border states of Maryland and Tennessee were favorable to Smith in the early count, but Hoover was leading in Kentucky, Oklahoma and West Virginia. Pennsylvania gave its first advantage to Hoover, although it was not very large in the city of Philadelphia. Ohio came through with a two to one, and Indiana were in Hoover's column by smaller margins.

Attracting keen attention because it is Governor Smith's own state and holds 45 electoral votes, New York was giving its executive a great lead in New York City and putting him well up behind Hoover in the upper counties. Smith's Wisconsin advantage was small, and the returns were too meagre to suggest a trend.

What Doctors Say About the Laxative Habit

What do YOU do when the bowels need a little assistance? If you clear up the condition with some laxative made with CASCARA, there is nothing better for the system—for the blood.

But if you don't KNOW the laxative you have learned to depend on is of harmless cascara, here's some truly valuable advice:

The bark of a tree called cascara is the most marvelous conditioner mankind has yet found. It stimulates the bowel's muscular action, but does NOT weaken. A violent laxative forms the laxative HABIT. You always need more on the morrow. With cascara, you don't. Its gentle influence carries on sometimes for days. With less and less need of any aid, as time goes on.

So, the very next time you feel sluggish, take only a candy Cascaret. Delightful to the taste, sweet and acceptable to any stomach, and just as efficient as the powerful purges that fairly paralyze the peristaltic walls of one's intestines. The only habit you'll get from Cascarets is the one of going weeks and months without ANY help of this kind. And when you do invoke their aid again, the same small dose suffices. Any doctor can tell you about cascara; and any druggist has the candy Cascarets.

Gear Grease that will not CONGEAL

It is congealed grease that makes gears so hard to change and your car so stiff to move in winter. Ease of driving and, what is just as important, economy of operation, demand a grease that won't congeal.

Any ordinary grease will stiffen the moment the temperature drops.

Whiz Sub-Zero Gear Grease will flow freely in the coldest weather—even at 40° below zero.

You need WHIZ Sub-Zero Grease. In the coldest weather it will keep a protecting film on every gear and every bearing, preventing the damage that's sure to be done without it.

Drive in now where you see the sign illustrated here. Have the gear cases flushed out completely and the old grease replaced with WHIZ Sub-Zero Grease—don't mix WHIZ with other grease.

THE MIRROR OF THE MODE

By Mary Marshall.

The effect of motley is derived in the fur collar of this black broadcloth coat. Gray krimmer is used for collar and one side while the other side is trimmed with the same fur dyed black.

Not for years have furs been used so conservatively and reservedly as they are used this season. Women have come to realize that a well-made wrap demands fur of good quality. "The best you can afford" is a good watchword to remember in considering the fur to be used for trimming. It is interesting to observe that with all the conservatism in the use of furs this season, the effects gained by the dressmakers and tailors in combining fur and fabric are really smarter than anything we have had for years.

One of the most charming formal wraps I have seen this season was of light beige cloth with collar and wide cuffs of black Persian lamb. A street coat of tailored smartness was made of a very dark gray mixture with a collar of dark krimmer. The sketch shows a velvet afternoon wrap finsihed with a long attached stole-like collar of caracul, half black and the other half gray. It is in adjustable style so that either the black or the gray part of the fur may be placed on top.

Another wrap to which I have lost my heart is made of brown velvet, quite loose and roomy, in three-quarters' length, collared and cuffed with Persian lamb shading from a fairly light brown to a deep chocolate tone.

There are bright colored coats trimmed with black fur and with coats of this description the type of frock that is most smart is one of black. A red cloth coat with black Persian lamb fur collar calls for a black crepe de chine frock.

THE WHATNOT

A Place for Little Bits of Everything of Local Interest

By MARION

THE idea for my Whatnot to-day is suggested by a joke which someone brought into the office in the form of a clipping.

* * *

"Mother, are we going to heaven some day?"
"I hope so," was the reply.
"I wish papa could go too."
"Well, don't you think he will?"
"Oh, no. He couldn't get away from the office."

It's tragic, but it's true, that so many children in Peterborough must have something the same idea about their fathers.

So many men make a fetish of work: it is their creed. Do they think their dropping out, even for so important business as going to heaven, would make a whit of difference?

It wouldn't!

There's not a man in Peterborough, or anywhere else, so important as to be indispensable. If a man dropped out of the game to-day, his place would be filled to-morrow.

It is sad, you all-important men, but it's perfectly true—and you will realize it if you stop to think.

And if you stop to think, and if you recognize the truth of what I have written, why not cut out this game that isn't worth the candle, and spend some time with your families? They will appreciate it, and you will be better men for it.

Not only are you losing that irreplacable contact with your children; this habit menaces even your happy relations with your wife. If you don't stay home and talk to her once in a while (and at not too long intervals) you will find that soon you will have no common meeting ground on which to talk.

From that point it is easy to drift apart.

It's worth thinking over; it's worth acting on, right now. Don't wait for the new year to make resolutions—get right after this one now. Clean up any surplus work this week, and start on Tuesday, after the holiday, to behave.

And then, in a few months, write me a letter of recommendation, telling how much good my advice did you!

It's a dare!

I suppose, since this is a women's column I'm conducting it would be well to pay a little attention to something particularly for women—although I do think the men had that coming to them, don't you?

It would be hard (this is for women) to find anything more misleading than the new crush shirred collars. They look complicated, and they are quite the reverse. You just need a straight piece of velvet or satin or broadcloth—and some lengths of dressmaker's cord. Take a few tucks in which to run the cord—and there You are!

If you would like a diagram pattern showing precisely how to make the tucks and do the shirring, please send me the coupon and I will send the help at once.

And when you're addressing the envelope, why not drop in your favorite recipe, or some hint that may help the neighbors? They'll appreciate it—and I'll be delighted.

Do you know, I have an idea that many of you neighbors could write lovely short stories, if you tried. And I'm going to give you a chance.

Sometime near Christmas The Examiner will publish a Christmas number, and I want you to write me a short story with a Christmassy touch. It shouldn't be over 1,500 words, and it may be much less.

There will be three cash prizes, and some others, and everyone whose story is printed will be paid at the regular space rates. If you don't get a thrill out of writing the story, and seeing it printed, you can use the money very nicely for Christmas.

So get busy right now; dig up an idea, and once you get the idea the remainder will be easy. The closing date will probably be about the first week in December; I will announce it definitely later.

* * *

This is a real chance to break into short story writing, and I hope to see a large number of you neighbors use your talents.

BROKEN

A Story of Revenged Love, by Ruby M. Ayres

CHAPTER XXVI.

"Pooh! Bim is jealous," Julie declared. "She would not come to night because I told her I was bringing Sadie."

"Miss Lennox is very fond of you," Giles said.

"How extremely foolish of her."

They stood looking at one another for a moment with antagonistic eyes, then Giles said savagely:

"I should like to shake you."

The hot blood rushed headlong to her face, then died away.

"That would be preferable to being kissed by you," she said.

"The fact of your saying that shows at least that you have not forgotten," Chittenham answered.

"Not forgotten!" she echoed flippantly. "Oh dear, no! Does one ever forget unpleasant things? I'm afraid not! Even poor old Charon never recovered from my absurd attempt to climb up to heaven. I got rid of him directly I returned to England."

"I don't think any of us have recovered," Giles said with an effort.

Julie only laughed.

"Oh, I have! It didn't seriously affect me. It just proved conclusively what a very cold, draughty and disagreeable place heaven must be, that's all."

"And does Miss Barrow share your views on life—that you and she are such great friends?"

"As a matter of fact, she doesn't," Julie answered. "She's inclined to be morbid and nobody can accuse me of that."

"Morbid!"

"Yes. She's got weird ideas on some subjects. For one thing she's mad on this latest spiritualistic craze."

"Nonsense!"

"You're not very polite. Ask her yourself if you don't believe me. That's why she's in London now—to see Chryer, the new medium."

"You're not serious?"

"Of course I am! There's a seance to-morrow, and we're all going. You'd better come along too." Her eyes challenged him. "Or are you afraid that they may read the secrets of your inmost soul?"

"There is only one secret in my soul for anyone to read," Chittenham said. She laughed.

"How touching! The tragedy of your marriage, I suppose."

"No," said Chittenham. "The tragedy of my love for you."

For a moment Julie seemed taken aback. Her lips quivered, and she bit them sharply; then she turned and called to Schofield.

"Lawrence, come here! Mr. Chittenham is talking to me about his soul, and I'm almost reduced to tears."

Schofield eagerly obeyed, and Chittenham moved away, only to be seized upon by Doris Gardener.

"Goodness, don't look so fierce!" she said in pretended fear. "Has anyone been rude to you?"

"Rude!" Chittenham laughed. "No, but this sort of show bores me to extinction."

"Why do you come then?"

"Because my mother wanted me to be here. Shall we find a seat—or isn't it the correct thing to sit down?"

"There are plenty of seats in the next room."

They threaded their way through the crowd and as they went Giles caught a glimpse of his mother looking very young and animated, talking eagerly to Essen, and a tinge of compunction touched him.

After all, if she was happy it was something. He supposed he was a bear to be so disagreeable. But it had been torture to talk to Julie and listen to her flippant nonsense—torture when one remembered those few hours of passionate happiness with her on the heights. They found a deserted couch in a corner and sat down.

Giles leant forward, his hands clasped between his knees, and stared at the floor. He had forgotten Doris until suddenly she spoke.

"What is the matter, Mr. Chittenham?"

He roused himself with an effort.

"I beg your pardon! Nothing. I'm sorry I'm such bad company."

"I saw you talking with Julie. Was it she who made you angry?"

"Good heavens, no!" Giles answered too eagerly for absolute conviction. "She was talking about spiritualism."

"About Chryer, the new medium?"

"Some such name." He turned and looked at her. "Do you believe in that rubbish?"

"I'm not sure. One hears surprising things. That little American, Sadie Barrow, is most enthusiastic."

"What on earth does she hope to get out of it?"

"I don't know. I talked to her about it once, and she says that she wants to know the future, and that Chryer can tell her."

Chittenham moved uneasily.

"Such people should be locked up—preying upon hysterical women."

"We're not all hysterical."

"You are if you waste your money on such a swindle," Giles answered bluntly.

She laughed at that, and leant back against the cushions.

"You're so matter-of-fact and matter-of-fact people can never see anything from other people's points of view."

"There can be no other point of view. The whole thing is a gigantic swindle."

Doris hesitated.

"I shouldn't like to say that. Sadie says—"

"Sadie is a little fool," Chittenham said unthinkingly, then he flushed dully and hastily apologized.

"I should not have said that. I beg your pardon, and hers. Let us talk about something else."

"Very well. Tell me—have you met the other Julie yet?"

"Yes. A night or two ago."

"Did you like her?"

Giles hesitated.

"I think I was agreeably surprised," he said at last.

Doris frowned.

"You know she has gone abroad?"

"I saw something about it in the paper."

"Of course, everyone is saying that she has gone with some man."

Chittenham made a swift gesture of anger, but he instantly controlled himself.

"I know that is absolutely untrue," he said.

Doris flushed.

"I am only telling you what people are saying."

"People are too charitable!" Giles said with a sneer, and he thought of the women whom he had left crouching by the fire in that lonely room. "I suppose, if I allow myself to be identified with this menagerie much longer, they will credit me with a scandal of my own."

"I think they have done that already," Doris said lightly.

He turned and looked at her.

"Really? May I ask what it is?"

She shrugged her shoulders.

"It's not worth repeating."

"But I should be interested to hear."

"I hardly know the facts myself, but I know it was something to do with Julie Farrow—this Julie Farrow." She watched him closely as she spoke.

Giles managed to laugh.

"How futile! I never met her in my life till that night at the Faun where I met you."

She looked at him steadily.

"That is not what Mr. Lombard insinuates."

In spite of himself Chittenham changed color.

"So Lombard is the liar!"

Doris laid a hand on his sleeve.

"Don't look so angry! What does it matter? We all talk about each other, and it's considered rather exciting to be talked about."

"I am afraid I'm old-fashioned enough to object. Besides, whatever Lombard says, it's a damned lie."

"I shouldn't get so angry about it then," Doris said calmly, but there was a little flame in her eyes.

She liked Chittenham more than she dared admit to herself, and her dislike of Julie had grown in proportion since the idle drift of Lombard's chatter had reached her.

Mrs. Ardron floated into the doorway.

"Oh, there you are darling! I hope you are looking after Doris. Aren't you hungry yet? There's food in the next room."

Giles rose, glad of the interruption.

"Shall we go and feed?" he asked.

As soon as he could excuse himself he left Doris and wandered through the crowded rooms until he came across Lombard.

"I want to speak to you."

Lombard looked up.

"Well, what is it?"

"Come outside."

The two men went into the hall.

"What on earth—?" Lombard asked again apprehensively.

Chittenham told him.

"I understand that you've been talking about things that don't concern you."

"My dear old chap—"

"You know what I mean—Switzerland—"

"I assure you, Chittenham—"

Giles cut in ruthlessly.

"Don't let me hear any more about it, that's all, or I shall have something to say to you that won't be pleasant hearing."

"My dear old chap—"

Chittenham turned on his heel and walked away.

Why We Do What We Do.

WHY WE WELCOME TRUTH

By Mehran K. Thomson, Ph.D.

(Author, The Springs of Human Action)

The story of George Washington and the cherry tree is one of the most familiar stories in the world. Every one knows it. And yet it probably never really happened. At least the history books do not credit the story as a true episode in the life of the immortal Washington.

The fact that the story of the cherry tree sticks despite a thousand historians who might prove that it never happened shows that the countrymen of George Washington want to believe in a story that portrays their hero as an honest man and one who could not tell a lie.

This is a remarkable side light on the ideals of the American people. It proves that truth is valued and idealized in this country.

We prize truth and foster it because it is the greatest of all social virtues. Without it our society as we know it today would crumble into dust. Truth has a stabilizing value, a money value, a practical value in the business and industrial world. We welcome truth as the corner stone of our credit system. This is merely good business. It is another way of saying that honesty is the best policy.

However, truth has attraction of its own and is valued for itself as well as for what it will do for us. Truth is one of the three graces known as the Good, the True and the Beautiful.

We welcome truth as an intellectual and moral end. We worship truth as the great liberator of mankind from the darkness of ignorance, superstition and slavery. Truth is our great emancipator.

Great minds have always worshipped at the shrine of truth.

We welcome truth because it conforms with the facts of the universe. Truth strikes a response in our heart because there is that in us which recognizes truth and values truth. Some call this conscience, others call it the voice of God or of Good, others call it the moral impulse. No matter what name it goes by the truth loving impulse is found everywhere.

We welcome truth to fight fear and ignorance, to conquer the forces of nature, to help us get along in society, to inspire us to great and noble achievement.

Why do you do what you do. Ask Dr. Thomson. Write care of this paper and send stamped, self-addressed envelope.

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, But Do Not Compel

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 8, 1928

(Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate.)

This is not a lucky day, according to astrology which reads in the horoscope for this date adverse aspects that are especially strong in the afternoon.

While the sway is favorable to foresight and to wise planning it is menacing to all who seek to put into practice what they have outlined.

The rule is not lucky to those who seek employment, but it promises much on later dates.

Uranus is in an aspect supposed to encourage wrong thinking and a critical attitude of mind.

This is a time to demonstrate positive ambitions and to expect the best possible development in business and political affairs.

Controversies over educational methods and public policies are indicated at this time when it may be difficult to obtain unity of thought or action.

Members of city councils, state legislatures and other bodies may exhibit differences of opinion that retard business, for this configuration is supposed to have a hampering effect.

Aviation is to bring out widespread discussion and the government may be slow in taking advantages of big possibilities.

The stars are supposed to encourage the building of ships for the United States navy and to stimulate interest in military matters.

Sensational revelations regarding the actual attainments of college graduates and others supposed to have benefitted by education in America are prophesied.

Specialization is to be encouraged to a degree that insures lack of symmetrical mental development, the seers foretell.

This is a fairly lucky day for shopping and women should prepare for unusual weather in all parts of the country.

Persons whose birthdate it is have the augury of changes in the year which will be marked by experiences not altogether happy. To the wise large profits are indicated.

Children born on this day probably will be strongly individual and original. These subjects of Scorpio usually have great daring in attaining their ambitions and many are great travelers.

PRESENTATION MADE DUNSFORD COUPLE

Mr. and Mrs. Skitch Honored By Members of W.M.S.

(Examiner Correspondence)

DUNSFORD, Nov. 7.—At the November meeting of the Dunsford Women's Missionary Society of the United Church, held on Friday, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. P. H. Skitch, Lindsay, a beautiful fernery and wicker arm chair accompanied by an address, were presented to Mr. and Mrs. Skitch. Mr. and Mrs. Skitch recently moved from Dunsford to Lindsay. Each made suitable replies to the presentation and all joined in singing "For they are jolly good fellows."

Mrs. Albert Thurston, vice-president of the Society acted as chairman. The scriptural reading from Isaiah 35, was read and explained by Mrs. William Courley. Mrs. J. F. Everson gave a synopsis of the fifth chapter of the study book, "New Paths for Old Purposes." Mrs. I. E. Thurston and Mrs. Newton Thurston sang a duet entitled, "Thy Will, Not Mine, Be Done." Miss Denoon, president of the Lindsay Presbyterial gave an address in which she explained the organization and workings of the W.M.S. and also the division of the money raised.

One Out of Every Five

Miss Denoon stated that only one out of every five women of the church were members of an auxiliary. The W.M.S. of the United Church has about 300 paid women workers. Recently the organization purchased a lot not far distant from Toronto which is used for the burial of persons who have made Canada their home but who have no friends to minister to them in sickness or take charge when death occurs. The speakers said that the amount asked from each Presbytery is not a tax, or dues, but a contribution and added tht the ideal way of supporting the budget is through the weekly envelope offering system, which is not only the easiest way, but the most business-like and successful way, as well as being the scriptural way.

Ninety-four cents out of every dollar given, is spent in actual work upon mission fields; 3½ cents for literature; ½ cents for organization and two cents for administration, which makes the W.M.S. work the most cheaply administered of any work in our country.

In Iceland codfish have formed the coins of the realm, and at one time in Abyssinia, salt; while cakes of tea in India and pieces of silk in China, have also taken the place of cash.

A Sudden End to Stomach Trouble

PAIN or discomfort following a meal doesn't mean you must go on a "diet." Nine times out of ten indigestion, acidity, flatulence and heartburn are caused by excess stomach acid and food fermentation.

After too hasty a lunch, or too hearty a dinner, a little "Pape's Diapepsin," instantly neutralizes excess acidity, stops that fermentation, and soothes and heals the acid inflamed stomach lining as if by magic. Your recovery is quick and complete. Make a special point of getting a 60-cent package of "Pape's Diapepsin" from your druggist today, and so follow the example of millions all over the world who use "Pape's Diapepsin" to end indigestion and allied stomach troubles.

With "Pape's Diapepsin" handy you can eat and enjoy whatever you fancy without fear of pain or discomfort to follow. At any rate, it's worth the trial, for lots of folks have found a new freedom at the table.

STRANGE AS IT SEEMS— by John Hix

HERE'S TO YOUR HEALTH

BY DR. FRANK McCOY

Subject: "The Fast Way to Health"

© 1928 McCOY HEALTH SERVICE - LOS ANGELES - CAL.

ARE WE BECOMING HEALTHIER?

Diabetes.

The number of deaths from diabetes is slightly on the increase in spite of the supposed value of insulin for increasing the ability to use carbohydrates. The average number of deaths lately has been 16.8 when formerly it was 16.3 per hundred thousand. Anyone who is familiar with my theories of this disease, that it is caused by a faulty metabolism from using excessive amounts of sugars and starches, can understand why this disease occurs and why it is slightly on the increase.

Heart Disease.

At present, heart disease is responsible for more deaths than any other ailment of the human body. (It is estimated that the number of deaths from diseases of the heart and blood vessels are responsible for more deaths than any other three diseases combined.) The number of deaths per hundred thousand has slightly increased. The average was 147. Now it is 148.9. This increase may be partly caused by the decrease of the number of deaths in the acute diseases, and partly by a better diagnosis of heart troubles. As I have stated many times in my newspaper articles, heart disease is caused largely by two factors. One is the presence of toxic, irritating substances in the blood stream, and the other is the presence of gas from the stomach and intestines.

Apoplexy.

The causes of apoplexy are probably somewhat similar to the causes of heart disease. This trouble is usually caused by high blood pressure and by a hardening of the arteries. We therefore find that more people are dying of this trouble than formerly. The average was 80.46 per hundred thousand, now it is 85.39.

Cirrhosis of the Liver.

The number of deaths from cirrhosis of the liver has remarkably decreased since prohibition. The number of deaths per hundred thousand was 12.3, now the number is 7.4. Curiously enough the proportion of deaths from acute alcoholism is gradually increasing year after year since prohibition. Immediately after the Volstead law went into effect the number of deaths in the United States from acute alcoholism was 1.6 per hundred thousand, and the number has gradually increased until, in 1925, the number had reached 3.6. However, this is less than the average prior to the Volstead Act.

Kidney Disease.

The number of deaths from acute kidney diseases formerly averaged 103.57 Now the number is 89.64 per hundred thousand. These diseases also show a remarkable decrease since it has become more difficult to obtain alcohol.

Suicide.

The number of deaths from suicide is decreasing year after year. This is probably due to a gradual improvement of the economic conditions and better health. 1920 had the lowest number of suicides, 10.20 per hundred thousand, and 1908, the year after the panic, the highest, 20.60.

The largest number of suicides occur between the ages of 80 and 89 which have an average of 34 per hundred thousand. The number of suicides in children, contrary to popular opinion, is very small. Between the ages of 10 and 19 there is only an average of 2 per hundred thousand. Under the age of 10, true suicide is practically unknown, there is said to be only one authentic suicide, per twenty-six million children.

Dr. McCoy will gladly answer personal questions on health and diet, addressed to him, care of this paper. Enclose stamped, addressed, large envelope for reply.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Oily Hair.

Question: K. G. "What kind of shampoos would you recommend for very oily hair?"

Answer: Washing the hair daily with a tincture of green soap about a week will usually correct this trouble. I have also special articles on the care of the hair which I will be glad to send you if you will send me a self-addressed envelope and four cents in stamps.

Causes of Headache.

Question: G. H. writes: "Please advise me what causes my head to ache. Sometimes I have a headache for a whole week without relief."

Answer: There are many causes of ache. Here are some of them: ...-intoxication, constipation, prolapsed organs, uterine congestion, eyestrain, nerve depletion and toxic poisoning from some chronic disease. Only a diagnosis will tell you which of these causes produce your headache.

Pin Worms.

Question: Mrs. F. writes: "Will you kindly give a remedy for pin worms? Also explain the cause of them?"

Answer: Any druggist can supply you with a worm remedy. The cause of pinworms is an unhealthy condition of the colon. A course of enemas for a week or two will usually bring about complete elimination of these worms.

Mineral Water.

Question: Mrs. G. D. asks: "Do you consider radium springs water more beneficial to health than water from the faucet?"

Answer: Distilled water is the only pure water, but the water furnished by any city water supply should be as good as the water from any special springs.

UNCLE WIGGILY

By HOWARD R. GARIS

To-day's Bedtime Story

UNCLE WIGGILY AND DAZIE'S DANCE

(Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate.)

Uncle Wiggily was dancing on one leg in front of the sweets shop, or candy store where he had just bought Dazie, the little wooden Wogglejig girl, a chocolate bar. Mazie, who was Dazie's sister, had asked the rabbit gentleman for a looking glass, or mirror, so she could see if her head was on straight, and Uncle Wiggily had said:

"Dazie's chocolate and your looking glass, Mazie, are all there together," and he had pointed to the piece of candy Dazie held.

"Why no, Unkie Wig," said Dazie, taking a little like Baby Bunty, "there is no looking glass here—there's only my chocolate. But if you want me to give Mazie some of my treat I will, for she is my sister and I love her."

Mazie was just going to say she loved chocolate when, all of a sudden, the sun came out from behind a cloud where it had been playing tag with the moon, and shone brightly on the candy Dazie held. Now the chocolate candy bar was wrapped in bright tinfoil, like silver, and as the sun glinted on it Mazie looked at it and exclaimed:

"Oh, I saw myself! I saw my head! And, thank goodness, it's on straight for once!" For the Wogglejigs, being made of loose bits of wood-pegs, balls and egg-shaped pieces, often they got put together wrong or became twisted.

She danced a few steps.

"How could you see yourself?" asked Dazie, getting ready to eat her chocolate.

"In the shiny tinfoil," answered Mazie. "That's what you mean: wasn't it, Unkie Wig? That you would show me my mirror in with Dazie's candy? Is that it?"

"Yes," said Mr. Longears, "it is."

"Oh, goodie!" cried Mazie, jumping up and down for joy and Uncle Wiggily now danced on another leg for the first one was warm. And it was because of feeling chilly that the rabbit started to dance in the first place.

"Yes," said Mr. Longears, "the chocolate tinfoil will make you a good looking-glass, Mazie." So when Dazie took the silvery foil off her candy, and while the little wooden Wogglejig girls were eating the sweet, Mr. Longears wrapped the foil around a flat stick and lo! and behold! There was a mirror for Mazie and she could look in it and see if her head was on straight.

This was quite an adventure for Uncle Wiggily and he was happy. He kept on dancing, though, for the weather was cold and Dazie, seeing him skip about, said:

"Did you ever see me dance, Unkie Wig?"

"No," answered the rabbit gentleman, "I never did. Can you?"

"Yes," answered Dazie, "if you please."

"She is a very good dancer," said Mazie taking another bite of the brown chocolate and then looking in her tinfoil glass to see if she had any brown streaks on her face. And she had some, and so did Dazie, which that little Wogglejig found out by looking in her sister's mirror.

"Do you want me to dance for you?" asked Dazie, swallowing the last of her chocolate, and then rubbing a little ice from the brook on her smeared face. Her face was warm, the ice melted into water and so Dazie washed herself clean. Then Mazie did the same thing. After this both little wooden Wogglejig girls look in the glass to see if their faces were on straight.

"Shall I dance for you?" asked Dazie again.

Uncle Wiggily, for a joke, was going to say he could dance for himself, but he thought this would not be polite, so he said:

"Indeed, I should like to see you dance, Dazie."

"All right then, I will," said the little Wogglejig. And she danced a few steps when, all of a sudden, the Lady Mouse Teacher from the Hollow Stump School crept out of the bushes.

"Oh, Uncle Wiggily!" she squeaked, "do you think you could get Dazie to come to school tomorrow and dance for the children? I'm sure it would amuse them. Will you come, Dazie, and dance in school?"

"Why, yes, I—I guess so," said Dazie a bit surprised. "But it seems kind of funny to go to school to dance."

"Oh, we do many funny things in school," squeaked Miss Mouse. "So I shall expect you to bring Dazie to dance tomorrow, Uncle Wiggily," said the Teacher, and the bunny gentleman promised.

And what happened after that you shall hear in the next story which will be about Uncle Wiggily and the Wolf's eyes.

BROKEN

CHAPTER XXVI.

"Pooh! Bim is jealous," Julie declared. "She would not come to-night because I told her I was bringing Sadie."

"Miss Lennox is very fond of you," Giles said.

"How extremely foolish of her."

They stood looking at one another for a moment with antagonistic eyes, then Giles said savagely:

"I should like to shake you."

The hot blood rushed headlong to her face, then died away.

"That would be preferable to being kissed by you," she said.

"The fact of your saying that shows at least that you have not forgotten," Chittenham answered.

"Not forgotten!" she echoed flippantly. "Oh dear, no! Does one ever forget unpleasant things? I'm afraid not! Even poor old Charon never recovered from my absurd attempt to climb up to heaven. I got rid of him directly I returned to England."

"I don't think any of us have recovered," Giles said with an effort.

Julie only laughed.

"Oh, I have! It didn't seriously affect me. It just proved conclusively what a very cold, draughty and disagreeable place heaven must be, that's all."

"And does Miss Barrow share your views on life—that you and she are such great friends?"

"As a matter of fact, she doesn't," Julie answered. "She's inclined to be morbid and nobody can accuse me of that."

"Morbid!"

"Yes. She's got weird ideas on some subjects. For one thing she's mad on this latest spiritualistic craze."

"Nonsense!"

"You're not very polite. Ask her yourself if you don't believe me. That's why she's in London now—to see Chryer, the new medium."

"You're not serious?"

"Of course I am! There's a seance to-morrow, and we're all going. You'd better come along too." Her eyes challenged him. "Or are you afraid that they may read the secrets of your inmost soul?"

"There is only one secret in my soul for anyone to read," Chittenham said.

She laughed.

"How touching! The tragedy of your marriage, I suppose."

"No," said Chittenham. "The tragedy of my love for you."

For a moment Julie seemed taken aback. Her lips quivered, and she bit them sharply; then she turned and called to Schofield.

"Lawrence, come here! Mr. Chittenham is talking to me about his soul, and I'm almost reduced to tears."

Schofield eagerly obeyed, and Chittenham moved away, only to be seized upon by Doris Gardener.

"Goodness, don't look so fierce!" she said in pretended fear. "Has anyone been rude to you?"

"Rude!" Chittenham laughed. "No, but this sort of show bores me to extinction."

"Why do you come then?"

"Because my mother wanted me to be here. Shall we find a seat—or isn't it the correct thing to sit down?"

"There are plenty of seats in the next room."

They threaded their way through the crowd and as they went Giles caught a glimpse of his mother looking very young and animated, talking eagerly to Essen, and a tinge of compunction touched him.

After all, if she was happy it was something. He supposed he was a bear to be so disagreeable. But it had been torture to talk to Julie and listen to her flippant nonsense—torture when one remembered those few hours of passionate happiness with her on the heights. They found a deserted couch in a corner and sat down.

Giles leant forward, his hands clasped between his knees, and stared at the floor. He had forgotten Doris until suddenly she spoke.

"What is the matter, Mr. Chittenham?"

He roused himself with an effort.

"I beg your pardon! Nothing. I'm sorry I'm such bad company."

"I saw you talking with Julie. Was it she who made you angry?"

"Good heavens, no!" Giles answered too eagerly for absolute conviction. "She was talking about spiritualism."

"About Chryer, the new medium?"

"Some such name." He turned and looked at her. "Do you believe in that rubbish?"

"I'm not sure. One hears surprising things. That little American, Sadie Barrow, is most enthusiastic."

"What on earth does she hope to get out of it?"

"I don't know. I talked to her about it once, and she says that she wants to know the future, and that Chryer can tell her."

Chittenham moved uneasily.

"Such people should be locked up—preying upon hysterical women."

"We're not all hysterical."

"You are if you waste your money on such a swindle," Giles answered bluntly.

She laughed at that, and leant back against the cushions.

"You're so matter-of-fact and matter-of-fact people can never see anything from other people's points of view."

"There can be no other point of view. The whole thing is a gigantic swindle."

T Doris hesitated.

"I shouldn't like to say that. Sadie says—"

"Sadie is a little fool," Chittenham said unthinkingly, then he flushed dully and hastily apologized.

"I should not have said that. I beg your pardon, and hers. Let us talk about something else."

"Very well. Tell me—have you met the other Julie yet?"

"Yes. A night or two ago."

"Did you like her?"

Giles hesitated.

"I think I was agreeably surprised," he said at last.

Doris frowned.

"You know she has gone abroad?"

"I saw something about it in the paper."

"Of course, everyone is saying that she has gone with some man."

Chittenham made a swift gesture of anger, but he instantly controlled himself.

"I know that is absolutely untrue," he said.

Doris flushed."

"I am only telling you what people are saying."

"People are too charitable!" Giles said with a sneer, and he thought of the women whom he had left crouching by the fire in that lonely room. "I suppose, if I allow myself to be identified with this menagerie much longer, they will credit me with a scandal of my own."

"I think they have done that already," Doris said lightly.

He turned and looked at her.

"Really? May I ask what it is?"

She shrugged her shoulders.

"It's not worth repeating."

"But I should be interested to hear."

"I hardly know the facts myself, but I know it was something to do with Julie Farrow—this Julie Farrow." She watched him closely as she spoke.

Giles managed to laugh.

"How futile! I never met her in my life till that night at the Faun where I met you."

She looked at him steadily.

"That is not what Mr. Lombard insinuates."

In spite of himself Chittenham changed color.

"So Lombard is the liar!"

Doris laid a hand on his sleeve.

"Don't look so angry! What does it matter? We all talk about each other, and it's considered rather exciting to be talked about."

"I am afraid I'm old-fashioned enough to object. Besides, whatever Lombard says, it's a damned lie."

"I shouldn't get so angry about it then," Doris said calmly, but there was a little flame in her eyes.

She liked Chittenham more than she dared admit to herself, and her dislike of Julie had grown in proportion since the idle drift of Lombard's chatter had reached her.

Mrs. Ardron floated into the doorway.

"Oh, there you are darling! I hope you are looking after Doris. Aren't you hungry yet? There's food in the next room."

Giles rose, glad of the interruption.

"Shall we go and feed?" he asked.

As soon as he could excuse himself he left Doris and wandered through the crowded rooms until he came across Lombard.

"I want to speak to you."

Lombard looked up.

"Well, what is it?"

"Come outside."

The two men went into the hall.

"What on earth—?" Lombard asked again apprehensively.

Chittenham told him.

"I understand that you've been talking about things that don't concern you."

"My dear old chap—"

"You know what I mean—Switzerland—"

"I assure you, Chittenham—"

Giles cut in ruthlessly.

"Don't let me hear any more about it, that's all, or I shall have something to say to you that won't be pleasant hearing."

"My dear old chap—"

Chittenham turned on his heel and walked away.

Why We Do What We Do.

WHY WE WELCOME TRUTH

By Mehran K. Thomson, Ph.D.
(Author, The Springs of Human Action)

The story of George Washington and the cherry tree is one of the most familiar stories in the world. Every one knows it. And yet it probably never really happened. At least the history books do not credit the story as a true episode in the life of the immortal Washington.

The fact that the story of the cherry tree sticks despite a thousand historians who might prove that it never happened shows that the countrymen of George Washington want to believe in a story that portrays their hero as an honest man and one who could not tell a lie.

This is a remarkable side light on the ideals of the American people. It proves that truth is valued and idealized in this country.

We prize truth and foster it because it is the greatest of all social virtues. Without it our society as we know it today would crumble into dust. Truth has a stabilizing value, a money value, a practical value in the business and industrial world. We welcome truth as the corner stone of our credit system. This is merely good business. It is another way of saying that honesty is the best policy.

However, truth has attraction of its own and is valued for itself as well as for what it will do for us. Truth is one of the three graces known as the Good, the True and the Beautiful.

We welcome truth as an intellectual and moral end. We worship truth as the great liberator of mankind from the darkness of ignorance, superstition and slavery. Truth is our great emancipator.

Great minds have always worshipped at the shrine of truth.

We welcome truth because it conforms with the facts of the universe. Truth strikes a response in our heart because there is that in us which recognizes truth and values truth. Some call this conscience, others call it the voice of God or of Good, others call it the moral impulse. No matter what name it goes by the truth loving impulse is found everywhere.

We welcome truth to fight fear and ignorance, to conquer the forces of nature, to help us get along in society, to inspire us to great and noble achievement.

Why do you do what you do. Ask Dr. Thomson. Write care of this paper and send stamped, self-addressed envelope.

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, But Do Not Compel

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 8, 1928

(Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate.)

This is not a lucky day, according to astrology which reads in the horoscope for this date adverse aspects that are especially strong in the afternoon.

While the sway is favorable to foresight and to wise planning it is menacing to all who seek to put into practice what they have outlined.

The rule is not lucky to those who seek employment, but it promises much on later dates.

Uranus is in an aspect supposed to encourage wrong thinking and a critical attitude of mind.

This is a time to demonstrate positive ambitions and to expect the best possible development in business and political affairs.

Controversies over educational methods and public policies are indicated at this time when it may be difficult to obtain unity of thought or action.

Members of city councils, state legislatures and other bodies may exhibit differences of opinion that retard business, for this configuration is supposed to have a hampering effect.

Aviation is to bring out widespread discussion and the government may be slow in taking advantages of big possibilities.

The stars are supposed to encourage the building of ships for the United States navy and to stimulate interest in military matters.

Sensational revelations regarding the actual attainments of college graduates and others supposed to have benefitted by education in America are prophesied.

Specialization is to be encouraged to a degree that insures lack of symmetrical mental development, the seers foretell.

This is a fairly lucky day for shopping and women should prepare for unusual weather in all parts of the country.

Persons whose birthdate it is have the augury of changes in the year which will be marked by experiences not altogether happy. To the wise large profits are indicated.

Children born on this day probably will be strongly individual and original. These subjects of Scorpio usually have great daring in attaining their ambitions and many are great travelers.

PRESENTATION MADE DUNSFORD COUPLE

Mr. and Mrs. Skitch Honored By Members of W.M.S.

(Examiner Correspondence)

DUNSFORD, Nov. 7.—At the November meeting of the Dunsford Women's Missionary Society of the United Church, held on Friday, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. P. H. Skitch, Lindsay, a beautiful fernery and wicker arm chair accompanied by an address, were presented to Mr. and Mrs. Skitch. Mr and Mrs. Skitch recently moved from Dunsford to Lindsay. Each made suitable replies to the presentation and all joined in singing "For they are jolly good fellows."

Mrs. Albert Thurston, vice-president of the Society acted as chairman. The scriptural reading from Isaiah 35, was read and explained by Mrs. William Courley. Mrs. J. F. Everson gave a synopsis of the fifth chapter of the study book, "New Paths for Old Purposes." Mrs. I. E. Thurston and Mrs. Newton Thurston sang a duet entitled, "Thy Will, Not Mine, Be Done." Miss Denoon, president of the Lindsay Presbyterial gave an address in which she explained the organization and workings of the W.M.S. and also the division of the money raised.

One Out of Every Five

Miss Denoon stated that only one out of every five women of the church were members of an auxiliary. The W.M.S. of the United Church has about 300 paid women workers. Recently the organization purchased a lot not far distant from Toronto which is used for the burial of persons who have made Canada their home but who have no friends to minister to them in sickness or take charge when death occurs. The speakers said that the amount asked from each Presbytery is not a tax, or dues, but a contribution and added tht the ideal way of supporting the budget is through the weekly envelope offering system, which is not only the easiest way, but the most business-like and successful way, as well as being the scriptural way.

Ninety-four cents out of every dollar given is spent in actual work upon mission fields; 3½ cents for literature; ½ cents for organization and two cents for administration, which makes the W.M.S. work the most cheaply administered of any work in our country.

In Iceland codfish have formed the coins of the realm, and at one time in Abyssinia, salt; while cakes of tea in India and pieces of silk in China, have also taken the place of cash.

A Sudden End to Stomach Trouble

PAIN or discomfort following a meal doesn't mean you must go on a "diet." Nine times out of ten indigestion, acidity, flatulence and heartburn are caused by excess stomach acid and food fermentation.

After too hasty a lunch, or too hearty a dinner, a little "Pape's Diapepsin," instantly neutralizes excess acidity, stops that fermentation, and soothes and heals the acid inflamed stomach lining as if by magic. Your recovery is quick and complete. Make a special point of getting a 60-cent package of "Pape's Diapepsin" from your druggist today, and so follow the example of millions all over the world who use "Pape's Diapepsin" to end indigestion and allied stomach troubles.

With "Pape's Diapepsin" handy you can eat and enjoy whatever you fancy without fear of pain or discomfort to follow. At any rate, it's worth the trial, for lots of folks have found a new freedom at the table.

HERE'S TO YOUR HEALTH

BY DR. FRANK McCOY

"The Fast Way to Health"

© 1928 McCOY HEALTH SERVICE - LOS ANGELES - CAL.

ARE WE BECOMING HEALTHIER?

Diabetes.

The number of deaths from diabetes is slightly on the increase in spite of the supposed value of insulin for increasing the ability to use carbohydrates. The average number of deaths lately has been 16.8 when formerly it was 16.3 per hundred thousand. Anyone who is familiar with my theories of this disease, that it is caused by a faulty metabolism from using excessive amounts of sugars and starches, can understand why this disease occurs and why it is slightly on the increase.

Heart Disease.

At present, heart disease is responsible for more deaths than any other ailment of the human body. (It is estimated that the number of deaths from diseases of the heart and blood vessels are responsible for more deaths than any other three diseases combined.) The number of deaths per hundred thousand has slightly increased. The average was 147. Now it is 148.9. This increase may be partly caused by the decrease of the number of deaths in the acute diseases, and partly by a better diagnosis of heart troubles. As I have stated many times in my newspaper articles, heart disease is caused largely by two factors. One is the presence of toxic, irritating substances in the blood stream, and the other is the presence of gas from the stomach and intestines.

Apoplexy.

The causes of apoplexy are probably somewhat similar to the causes of heart disease. This trouble is usually caused by high blood pressure and by a hardening of the arteries. We therefore find that more people are dying of this trouble than formerly. The average was 80.46 per hundred thousand, now it is 85.39.

Cirrhosis of the Liver.

The number of deaths from cirrhosis of the liver has remarkably decreased since prohibition. The number of deaths per hundred thousand was 12.3, now the number is 7.4. Curiously enough the proportion of deaths from acute alcoholism is gradually increasing year after year since prohibition. Immediately after the Volstead law went into effect the number of deaths in the United States from acute alcohlism was 1.6 per hundred thousand, and the number has gradually increased until, in 1925, the number had reached 3.6. However, this is less than the average prior to the Volstead Act.

Kidney Disease.

The number of deaths from acute kidney diseases formerly averaged 103.57 Now the number is 89.64 per hundred thousand. These diseases also show a remarkable decrease since it has become more difficult to obtain alcohol.

Suicide.

The number of deaths from suicide is decreasing year after year. This is probably due to a gradual improvement of the economic conditions and better health. 1920 had the lowest number of suicides, 10.20 per hundred thousand, and 1908, the year after the panic, the highest, 20.60.

The largest number of suicides occur between the ages of 80 and 89 which have an average of 34 per hundred thousand. The number of suicides in children, contrary to popular opinion, is very small. Between the ages of 10 and 19 there is only an average of 2 per hundred thousand. Under the age of 10, true suicide is practically unknown, there is said to be only one authentic suicide, per twenty-six million children.

Dr. McCoy will gladly answer personal questions on health and diet, addressed to him, care of this paper. Enclose stamped, addressed, large envelope for reply.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Oily Hair.

Question: K. G. "What kind of shampoos would you recommend for very oily hair?"

Answer: Washing the hair daily with a tincture of green soap about a week will usually correct this trouble. I have also special articles on the care of the hair which I will be glad to send you if you will send me a self-addressed envelope and four cents in stamps.

Causes of Headache.

Question: G. H. writes: "Please advise me what causes my head to ache. Sometimes I have a headache for a whole week without relief."

Answer: There are many causes of ache. Here are some of them: auto-intoxication, constipation, prolapsed organs, uterine congestion, eyestrain, nerve depletion and toxic poisoning from some chronic disease. Only a diagnosis will tell you which of these causes produce your headache.

Pin Worms.

Question: Mrs. F. writes: "Will you kindly give a remedy for pin worms? Also explain the cause of them?"

Answer: Any druggist can supply you with a worm remedy. The cause of pinworms is an unhealthy condition of the colon. A course of enemas for a week or two will usually bring about complete elimination of these worms.

Mineral Water.

Question: Mrs. G. D. asks: "Do you consider radium springs water more beneficial to health than water from the faucet?"

Answer: Distilled water is the only pure water, but the water furnished by any city water supply should be as good as the water from any special springs.

UNCLE WIGGILY

By HOWARD R. GARIS

To-Day's Bedtime Story

UNCLE WIGGILY AND DAZIE'S DANCE

(Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate.)

Uncle Wiggily was dancing on one leg in front of the sweets shop, or candy store where he had just bought Dazie, the little wooden Woggiejig girl, a chocolate bar. Mazie, who was Dazie's sister, had asked the rabbit gentleman for a looking glass, or mirror, so she could see if her head was on straight, and Uncle Wiggily had said:

"Dazie's chocolate and your looking glass, Mazie, are all there together," and he had pointed to the piece of candy Dazie held.

"Why no, Unkie Wig," said Dazie, talking a little like Baby Bunty, "there is no looking glass here—there's only my chocolate. But if you want me to give Mazie some of my treat I will, for she is my sister and I love her."

Mazie was just going to say she loved chocolate when, all of a sudden, the sun came out from behind a cloud where it had been playing tag with the moon, and shone brightly on the candy Dazie held. Now the chocolate candy bar was wrapped in bright tinfoil, like silver, and as the sun glinted on it Mazie looked at it and exclaimed:

"Oh, I saw myself! I saw my head! And, thank goodness, it's on straight for once!" For the Woggiejigs, being made of loose bits of wood-pegs, nails and egg-shaped pieces, often they got put together wrong or became twisted.

She danced a few steps.

"How could you see yourself?" asked Dazie, getting ready to eat her chocolate.

"In the shiny tinfoil," answered Mazie. "That's what you mean, wasn't it, Unkie Wig? That you would show me my mirror in with Dazie's candy? Is that it?"

"Yes," said Mr. Longears, "it is."

"Oh, goodie!" cried Mazie, jumping up and down for joy and Uncle Wiggily now danced on another leg for the first one was warm. And it was because of feeling chilly that the rabbit started to dance in the first place.

"Yes," said Mr. Longears, "the chocolate tinfoil will make you a good looking-glass, Mazie." So when Dazie took the silvery foil off her candy, and while the little wooden Woggiejig girls were eating the sweet, Mr. Longears wrapped the foil around a flat stick and lo! and behold! There was a mirror for Mazie and she could look in it and see if her head was on straight.

This was quite an adventure for Uncle Wiggily and he was happy. He kept on dancing, though, for the weather was cold and Dazie, seeing him skip about, said:

"Did you ever see me dance, Unkie Wig?"

"No," answered the rabbit gentleman, "I never did. Can you?"

"Yes," answered Dazie, "if you please."

"She is a very good dancer," said Mazie taking another bite of the brown chocolate and then looking in her tinfoil glass to see if she had any brown streaks on her face. And she had some, and so did Dazie, which that little Woggiejig found out by looking in her sister's mirror.

"Do you want me to dance for you?" asked Dazie, swallowing the last of her chocolate, and then rubbing a little ice from the brook on her smeared face. Her face was warm, the ice melted into water and so Dazie washed herself clean. Then Mazie did the same thing. After this both little wooden Woggiejig girls look in the glass to see if their faces were on straight.

"Shall I dance for you?" asked Dazie again.

Uncle Wiggily, for a joke, was going to say he could dance for himself, but he thought this would not be polite, so he said:

"Indeed, I should like to see you dance, Dazie."

"All right then, I will," said the little Woggiejig. And she danced a few steps when, all of a sudden, the Lady Mouse Teacher from the Hollow Stump School crept out of the bushes.

"Oh, Uncle Wiggily!" she squeaked, "do you think you could get Dazie to come to school tomorrow and dance for the children? I'm sure it would amuse them. Will you come, Dazie, and dance in school?"

"Why, yes, I—I guess so," said Dazie a bit surprised. "But it seems kind of funny to go to school to dance."

"Oh, we do many funny things in school," squeaked Miss Mouse. "So I shall expect you to bring Dazie to dance tomorrow, Uncle Wiggily," said the Teacher, and the bunny gentleman promised.

And what happened after that you shall hear in the next story which will be about Uncle Wiggily and the Wolf's eyes.

Around the City

The new building of the Peterborough Canoe Company is beginning to take form, and the structural work has reached the third storey now. There is a gang of men working on the building, and it presents a scene of humming activity.

The water pipe in front of Meredith's clothing store sprung another leak, and the pavement has had to be taken up again and new pipes laid. A pumper is kept busy pumping the water out of the hole. The pipe in this spot has given the Utilities Commission a good deal of trouble on account of the ground causing the pipes to open at the joints.

Baseball Magnates To Hold Joint Meeting

MAJOR CIRCUIT MEN TO GATHER IN WINDY CITY

National League Will Convene on December 11th, Then Go To Chicago.

JOINT PARLEY.

Annual Meeting of National Association Slated For Toronto.

NEW YORK, Nov. 7. — The joint gathering of club owners of the National and American Leagues is scheduled for Thursday, December 13. The National Leaguers will gather for their annual meeting in New York on Tuesday, December 11, and the American League will convene in Chicago on December 12. While Prexy Barnard is conducting his session, the club owners of the other league will be hurrying toward Chicago for the joint conclave.

The annual meeting of the National Association, embracing all minor league clubs, is scheduled for Toronto during the early days of December. It is expected that the draft will come in for more discussion at both the minor and major sessions, the big leaguers expecting a proposal of some sort from the smaller leagues.

This is the day which is supposed to play a patr in the Rogers Hornsby Travels, or Seeing America First. Massachusetts will vote on the question of permitting Sunday baseball, and it has been hinted that the Boston Braves will be in a position to retain the Rajah and his $40,000 contract if enough Bay Slaters vote in the affirmative. At least the two Boston clubs could pay better salaries with Sunday baseball than without it

From Chicago comes a story that the price asked for Hornsby has been on the basis of Sunday ball. The Chicago Cubs have agreed to the price that was named if the bill is defeated, but so far has declined to pay the sum asked in the event that the effort to legalize Sunday ball is successful. This would indicate that the Braves are willing to sell under either condition.

McGILL MEN ON SICK LIST

Injuries To Players Play Havoc With Preparations of Squad For Saturday.

FOR VARSITY GAME.

MONTREAL, Que., Nov. 7 (Canadian Press).—Injuries are playing havoc temporarily with the preparations of the McGill football team for their titular struggle with Varsity here Saturday. While there is little doubt that all the injured players will be fit and ready for the game with the Blue, their absence from practices interferes accordingly with the drills calculated to perfect play in the Red ranks. Chic Church, the Ottawa inside, is still in the hospital suffering from a leg injury incurred in the Queen's game, and yesterday he was joined by Coach Dr. Cyril Flanagan. The McGill mentor, however, did not get his malady in a scrimmage drill, and the stomach trouble that brought him to hospital is not expected to keep him confined long. Dave Munroe was out in uniform yesterday but did not get into scrimmage drill. Munroe's shoulder is still bothering him, and a week's rest has been ordered so that he may be in condition for Saturday.

Yesterday's drill added another to the injured list. Captain Charlie Littlefield received a kick in the head just after practice began, and had to be helped off the field. Just how serigous the Red captain has been hurt will be known to-day. Don Young, who is also out with a leg injury, is also expected back to drills.

RUTH PREPARES FOR "HOMERS" IN CANADIAN WOODS.

George Herman Ruth, the home run hitter de luxe of the Yankees, has hung up his bat and has picked up a gun. He took out a permit to use said gun to knock over a few in hunting expeditions.

In company with Jack Stevens, concessionaire of the Yankee Stadium, the Babe filled out an application in which he gave his age as thirty-four, his height as six feet two inches and his weight as 228 pounds.

In a few days the Babe expects to leave for the North and several weeks of hunting through Canada. It's to keep in shape, he said.

DENIES STORY GAME WAS SOLD

Just a Rumor, States Sports Editor of Kingston Whig-Standard.

QUEEN'S-McGILL TUSSLE.

KINGSTON, Ont., Nov. 7.—The Whig-Standard in its sport page of Monday says: "It has come to the ears of the sports editor of the Whig-Standard, as it must also have been heard by others, the wail of some alleged rugby enthusiasts that Saturday's game 'was sold.' Such a claim is so obviously idiotic as to be scarcely worth even considering, but after all it is so manifestly malicious and unfair that it can come only from those whose peculiar makeup prompts them to see nothing but evil in anything that does not break their way. If only they were known, a tag day could be held to collect the two bits they lost betting on Queen's.

"Not for the sake of convincing the squealers (they are past any one's consideration), but just to show what Queen's lost by their defeat: Had the Tricolor won they would have played off with Balmy Beach and would be assured of at least $8,000 as their share of the gate receipts, and, if they beat Balmy Beach, a play-off with Hamilton would have meant at least $10,000 more. The defeat of Saturday goes a long way towards losing all that for the Tricolor.

"Primarily college rugby is played for the game's sake, and the receipts are of necessity a secondary, though welcome consideration. Financially, Queen's team right now have had their poorest season in six years, though a win Saturday would have made it the best.

"So, when one talks about money in rugby, they can say that on Saturday Queen's lost by six points and $18,000."

COACH TO MAKE SEVERAL SHIFTS

Varsity Should Make Creditable Showing Against McGill in Intercollegiate Struggle.

PRACTICE SIGNAL DRILLS.

TORONTO, Nov. 7.—If numbers and the condition of the players mean anything in preparing for a vital rugby game then Varsity should make a most creditable showing against McGill in the all-important Intercollegiate struggle at the Percival Molson Stadium in Montreal on Saturday, the result of which may give McGill their first college title since 1919 or may knot up the standing with all three teams on even terms. Coach Les Blackwell, of the Blue and White squad, is giving several members of the Orphans a thorough trial in positions which have shown decided weakness in previous games and last night he had two complete teams running through the signals for nearly an hour. Lloyd Hallam, the former Sarnia Collegiate quarter, handling the first team, and Billy Bell, the ex-Ridley pivot man, directing the play of the other.

After a week in which the various cripples steadily regained their physical form after the defeat by Queen's the squad was at full strength numerically and physically and most of the time was devoted to signal drill, perfecting the new field generals in the various phases of their duties. Afterwards the Intercollegiate took on the Orphans in a scrimmage and the talking team scored a touchdown after a fifty-yard run by Alex. Carrick that was called back by Manager Lou Carroll of the Intercollegiate, who was acting as referee. The long run and the disallowing of the try rendered Carrick speechless for the remainder of the drill.

Judging from developments so far this week Hallam will be the starting quarter with Bell as his relief, while the "first" half line will probably be composed of McFadden, who made such a good showing with the Orphans against Sarnia last Saturday; Murray Snyder and Don Traynor, while Jack Harrison will likely go back to flying wing as he has not been able to adapt himself to middle wing. Those who will be ready in case of necessity are Jimmy Sinclair for flying wing and Baillie, Darling, and Davey on the half line.

LEAFS IN SPEEDY PRACTICE AFFAIR

Smythe Pleased With Combination Work of Carson, Cox and Bailey.

TORONTO, Nov. 7. — The Maple Leaf hockeyists had another valuable practice game at the Arena at noon yesterday, Coach "Conny" Smythe being particularly pleased with the combination efforts of Carson, Gray, Cox and Bailey, there of whom are favored to start the season as the regular front line. The four hooked up in some fast and accurate passing bouts that Smythe described as the best the Leafs have shown since he became connected with the club.

Of the newcomers, Andy Blair gave another pleasing performance, and the Manitoba U. graduate seems a valuable acquisition. The westerner has the build to withstand the rigors of a gruelling game, and he will fit in well in the combined attacks. Danny Cox is his old hard-working self, and will be hard to keep off the job on the left boards.

VIEWS ON SPORT

The first work-out of hockey players will take place at the "Y" this evening.

This evening at the "Y" gymnasium, the hockey players will get out and spread themselves in P.T. and games. All and every hockey player and would-be hockey player is invited to be present. Nothing is more important to the chap who wants to have a good season than some form of training before he steps on the ice.

* * * * * * *

The Petes should have a smart team in both leagues this season. They will be composed chiefly of young players, many of them seasoned in the City League, and not a few who have had several seasons in the O.H.A. already.

* * * * * * *

The hockey executive is scouting around for a coach, as they consider no effort is too difficult to help develop the material in the city. A coach may be brought in from another place. They should get someone who knows the game and whose opinions and orders will not be questioned by the players. Too much stress can not be laid on the necessity for a good coach.

* * * * * * *

Rugby fans in Port Hope may be treated to a double bill on Saturday. Coach Browne is trying to arrange for the intermediate play-off game between Bowmanville and P.C.I. to take place on the Trinity College School ground in the morning and the big Ohawa and P.C.I. senior tussle to decide the championship of the group to take place in the afternoon. The senior game is already fixed and settled, but there is still some hitch in the arrangements for the morning game. Coach Browne wants to get the intermediate game over soon, so that he may use some of the more experienced players as subs for his senior team.

* * * * * * *

Both these games loom as close, hard-fought affairs. Oshawa H.S. trimmed P.C.I. in the first game played in Oshawa, but the Petes should dispose of them if they work as they have been in the last few games. The P.C.I. Intermediates are going to have a real battle on their hands to beat this big Bowmanville team.

* * * * * * *

The Intermediate series was a new idea in the Central Ontario group this season, and has proved its worth. The players have had some good games, and they have developed wonderfully in the practices and games. Next year there promises to be more schools entering this class of rugby.

* * * * * * *

Queen's students are still walking the campus with that dazed look that came over their faces on Saturday when McGill dashed their fondest expectations. They can offer no explanation, but only murmur sadly. If McGill wins this Saturday from Varsity, McGill will be champions, and if Varsity pull a win, the league will be tied up, and Queen's students will take an interest in life again.

FAMOUS CANADIAN RUGBY GAMES, PLAYS AND PLAYERS

By NICK BAWLF— Former star football, lacrosse and hockey player, now coach at Cornell

Th Hamilton Tigers won a sensational game from a remarkable collection of stars wearing the double blue of the Argonauts, Saturday afternoon, November 4, 1911, at Hamilton. Here is how it happened. The Argos' line was big and strong. The Tigers had an aggressive and hard-running set of youngsters behind a good forward wall. There was just 60 seconds to play. The Argos were leading when a Toronto backfield man fumbled a punt which the Tigers recovered. The ball was tossed back from scrimmage to Hope Gibson, and Hope drop-kicked a beautiful goal, winning the game 9 points to 8. The play diagramed.

VARSITY TO BID HIGH FOR GAME

Expect To Push McGill To Limit For Intercollegiate Honors.

GOOD CARD FOR WEEK.

(Canadian Press Service)

TORONTO, Nov. 7.—There is new hope in the University of Toronto senior camp this week, and Coach Les Blackwell plans to give McGill a strong argument at Montreal this Saturday. Although a win for the Montreal collegians will give them the Intercollegiate title, the Blue and White will be playing for a win and a three-cornered tie in the grouv. McGill has resumed practice following the victory over Queens on Saturday and will put everything into the game against Universiy of Toronto.

Dave Harding and his flying aces are determined to stop the march of the undefeated Balmy Beach team on Wednesday at Camp Borden. They have been working out faithfully, and with a bye last Saturday are set for the Beaches' invasion.

Because they would not be able to get a field, Kitchener-Waterloor refused the O.R.F.U. request to play in Sarnia Wednesday instead of Saturday. The Twin city boys were defeated by University of Toronto Orphans on Saturday and will play either Saturday or Monday. A mid-week game would give them no opportunity to get injured players in the line-up.

Montreal and Ottawa visit Toronto and Hamilton in Big Four games on Saturday, but the Tigers have already clinched the title.

Bowling Alley Gossip

K. OF C. ALLEYS

The teams in the Monday Night League at the K. of C. Alleys have seven out of the eight teams jumbled together, with only ten points difference between the standing of the first and seventh, and apparently the race for group honors will certainly be a close one. Just at present Fay and Ryan, the old rivals, are tied for first place owing to the loss suffered by Fay's gladiators last night in their tilt with Duffus, who corralled the eight points and jumped upon into a tie for second place with LeBarr, each having 38 points. McPherson bumped the polshed maple with Ryan for a 6 to 2 victory, while McCabe duplicated this feat in his battle with Clancy who just now is occupying the cellar position in this league. LeBarr and Bogue divided the honors evenly, each taking four points which makes the standing to date as follows:—

	Points.
Fay	40
Ryan	40
LeBarr	38
Duffus	38
McPherson	32
Bogue	30
McCabe	30
Clancy	10

"Buck" Rudkins' single score of 370 made in a league game at the K. of C. Alleys still stands as a record for high single in five pins. Dundas being the only close contender having made 333.

DRAFTING ROOM LEAGUE

The Cycles smoked up the Duffus Alleys in a red hot battle with the Volts last night and blanked them in every game, shalking up eight more hard-earned points with their already high total. Bill Prest carried the team to victory with a barrage of accurate sharp-shooting that netted him 273 pins in a single game and collected a trio of scores that amounted to 660 for high three being the only one on either team to top the 600 mark.

The Hi-Pots mustered a real warlike spirit and jumped on the Short Circuits with both feet, taking three games and holding the luckless Short Circuits in their lowly position for another week. Max. Matheret was the mainstay of the winners with two high scores of 254 and 249, and also copped the high three score with 648. D. L. Davis was also hitting them hard, making 251 single and 620 in three.

The Watts worked hard in their attempt to dab the Ohms with the whitewash brush, but the best they could do was to win two games and secure high total, which means six points to them; the Ohms getting the remaining two. W. A. Jackson biffed the pins in his own healthy style for the high three total of 618, taking high single as well with 243. A. McLeish of the Ohms was the only other player who was able to batter his way over the 600 mark, making 607 and 228 single.

The battling Orioles have worked their way into the lead in Group 5, while the Bobolinks, by their clever bowling on Thursday last, are tied with the Canaries for second place. The following is the standing of the six teams to date.

Name.	Won.	Lost.
Orioles	9	3
Bobolinks	7	5
Canaries	7	5
Blackbirds	6	6
Redwings	6	6
Bluebirds	1	11

CANADIAN ATHLETES ARE DRAWING ATTENTION FROM OTHER COUNTRIES

"For the first time the world is paying some attention to Canada as far as athletics are concerned," Bobby Robinson, manager of the Canadian Olympic track team, remarked this morning. Mr. Robinson's observation was prompted by a letter which he received from London, picking up a statement which had appeared in the Hamilton Spectator early in October, and pulling it to pieces.

On October 8, W. G. Rose, of Cleveland, addressed the Hamilton Ad Club, on "Champions and How They Are Made." During his remarks he said:

"A champion is a man who excels in his class, whatever it may be—an athlete, an orator, or a bricklayer. Faith in your ability is what brings you to the top of your class. It was this faith and never-say-die spirit that made Eric Liddell, the young Scottish minister, champion 400-meter runner of the world in the 1924 Oympiad. Liddell was a sprinter and had been entered by Great Britain to run the 100 meters, but because the race was run on Sunday, he refused to participate. He stepped into a middle-distance class into a race that he had never tried before, ran away from the fastest men of the day, and created a new world's record.

The Spectator carrying the above paragraph eventually reached the hands of a prominent English sporting authority who, in a letter received, has the following to say :

"I note in your issue of October 9, at the meeting of the Hamilton Advertising Club, Mr. Rose made the following statement re Eric Liddell, the 400 meters Olympic champion of 1924: 'Liddell stepped into a middle distance event that he had never tried before.'

"Ye gods and little fishes, is that so?

"In 1923 Eric Liddell, representing Scotland against England and Ireland in the annual triangular contest, drew an inside berth in the 440 yards. Sam Lavan, the Irishman, who drew the outside berth, got away like a shot out of a gun at the start, and tried to take the pole. He barged into Liddell, knocked him right off the track flat on his back, and by the time Liddell picked himself up the field had got away. Liddell went after them, got up and won in 50 flat. He was reckoned to have done about 18 yards insides 50 seconds for the quarter, a performance which gave us all hope that he would win at Paris.

"There is no doubt the Old Country experts knew what Liddell could do. In the meantime they should feel honored to think that an American speaker selected an Old Country athlete as his shining example for the rest of the world. The majority of the Americans are not inclined to look past their own boundaries when selecting an athlete for the rest of the world to emulate."

—Hamilton Spectator.

MISTUH GODFREY SPECIALIZES IN MARCEL WAVES

Well, it just shows you can never judge by appearances. George Godfrey has gone into business, and you'd never, never, guess what it is.

Somehow or other, you'd always picture George as a steamfitter, or a stevedore, or a truck driver, or something like that. A he-man sort of a job, as it were. He's a big, hefty guy, 6 feet 4 inches, and 235 pounds.

But away down deep there must be something of the artist in George. Something delicate and exquisite that simply aches for expression. Something that yearns to get above and beyond the earthly profession of pugilism.

So George, laden with the money he has earned punching other folks' noses, has finally realized his lifelong ambition. Now, don't scream, girls—this is serious!

The proprietor of those THREE new hair dressing parlors recently opened in Philadelphia is none other than the Black Shadow of Leiperville, Mistuh George Phoebe Smith Godfrey!

Life's like that, isn't it!

INJURIES SUFFERED IN HOCKEY PRACTICE

Broadbent, Simpson and Johnson of Americans Stop Pucks With Their Faces.

NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—Hockey will have its local opening at the Garden a week from Sunday night, but it ay be emphasized right here and now that the season is officially on. Punch Broadbent, of the New York Americans, is wearing a slash across his nose which all but removed a large section of that organ. Joe Simpson, of the Americans, is minus all the cuticle which should be covering his nose, and Ching Johnson, of the Rangers, is sporting a black eye that lends a purple decoration to half his cheek as well.

That's the way hockey players get in shape for the serious business ahead. Up at New Haven Manager Tommy Gorman has had his players on the ice less than a week and every last member of the troupe bears facial evidence of rough practice sessions. Lester Patrick boss of the Rangers is making Springfield his training base and the bumping and bruising has been no less furious in the Bay State than in the Elm City.

Manager Gorman announced at New Haven that all his players have signed on the dotted line, that all are satisfied and that he will show New York the best hockey team that has represented the Americans since he came into the metropolis in 1925 with the Hamilton Tigers.

Sheppard Real Star

"We have been weak on our wings for the past two years, or since Shorty Green was slowed up by injuries," said Gorman yesterday while his players were going through their paces at the New Haven arena. We have landed one of the best skaters in the hockey world in Johnny Sheppard and I know he will be a big favorite at the Garden. Look at him now, after only a week of practice, added the American manager as the undersized Sheppard dashed by, deftly eluding those who were trying to separate him from the puck."

Sheppard is perhaps the flashiest skater who has ever worn the colors of the New York American. Babe Dye, new right wing, who was out most of last season with a broken leg, is a bit overweight and not yet in his stride but he shows no effects of the injury. The fracture was between the ankle and knee and therefore less likely to bother Dye than if it had been at the ankle or knee.

Dye, not unusually large at any time, had bulged somewhat around the waist line since his last appearance on the Garden ice and Gorman is relying on a rubber shirt during practice, and an electric vibrator afterwards, to reduce the player's weight. Broadbent, much heavier and inclined to take on weight, is another member of the Americans who must devote particular attention to making his belt line slimmer. The other Americans are near the playing weight. Captain Conacher, who spent a month with the Rutgers football team, is the best conditioned of the lot.

TOMMY FILMORE COMES TO TERMS

Corbeau Expects Primeau or Lowery From Leafs For London.

LONDON, Ont., November 7. — Tommy Filmore, leading scorer of last year's London Panthers in the Canpro League, has agreed to terms and will sign his contract to-day. Manager Bert Corbeau was more than pleased with yesterday's practice session of his squad and declared it to be the best to date. He was most impressed with the way that Jackson, Connacher and Filmore teamed up on the first front line, while he declared he hadn't any defence worries after witnessing the form displayed by Ironstone, Voss and Moore.

King, McIntyre, and Lever worked well together as another set of forwards, and although all three players lacked condition they used their heads in a way that won the approval of the husky pilot. Still another forward line was composed of White, Brophy, and an "unknown," and Corbeau said that any one of the two will be mighty hard to keep off the team. The "unknown" goalie also is coming along nicely.

Corbeau visited the headquarters of the Toronto N.H.L. Club during the week-end and reports that the Leafs are all steamed up over the exhibition game with the Panthers which will be played here on Friday evening. By that time the major leaguers will probably be ready to cut their squad down and may leave with Corbeau the forward, who is to come to the Panthers.

The London manager made it known some time ago that he is anxious to secure either Joe Primeau or Jerry Lowrey, but if the Leafs are not ready to unload on Friday, he hopes the action will not be long delayed.

Bowling Alley Gossip

C.G.E. SHOP LEAGUE, GROUP 2.

The fleter Makers again took the big half of the score in their weekly battle, in Group 2 of the Shop League, this time from Brass No. 1, who had to be content with winning one game. Jack Hope for the switch makers was responsible for both high scores, 257 and 598.

Brass Department No. 2 team have been climbing steadily and last night's two game win over the Lightning Arrester Department places them up among the leaders. Wib. Westlan is showing exceptionally good form, taking both high scores for the second time in two weeks, last night's efforts producing 219 single and 550 trio.

The Insulation bowlers have not been up to the mark expected to date and as a result are reposing in the cellar position. Last night they dropped two games to the Switchboard team, winning the third one Huffman collected a score of 212 which was high in this battle and Thomas for the Taping gang carried off high three honors with 409.

Jack Hope, by making 257 single last night, raised the record for high single in this group ten more pins, the last high mark being 247, which was made by Ridyard.

SETS HURDLE RECORD

A remarkable display of skill and daring—Miss Jean McDonald on "Beaver" going over a 5-foot 8-inch hurdle, believed to be the world's highest horse jump, at Topeka, Kansas. The old-fashioned "side saddle" position makes the hurdle doubly difficult.

DEMPSEY TRAINING.

Again Rumors in Circulation That Ex-Champion Will Return to Ring.

NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—(Canadian Press).—Reports that Jack Dempsey will return to the ring again are in circulation, supported by the fact that the former champion has entered training at a local gymnasium.

THEATRES

AT THE CAPITOL.

For the Last Half of This Week, Commencing To-morrow, the Capitol Will Again Present Some High Class Vaudeville in Addition to the Regular Picture Program. "The Royal Entertainers," direct from the Uptown Toronto, will be the Stage Attraction, While Tom Mix in "The Painted Post," Will be the Screen Featire.

For the last half of this week, Manager Stewart of the Capitol has another stage treat in store for his patrons, in addition to the regular picture program. The vaudeville for Thursday, Friday and Saturday will be the Cole Brothers, who bill themselves as "The Royal Entertainers." This act, which by the way is a guaranteed standard act, comes to the Capitol direct from the Uptown Theatre, Toronto, and the Capitol Theatre, Hamilton. As only acts of exceptional merit are allowed to play these de luxe houses, Capitol patrons can expect something real good. The Cole Brothers do some clever singing, dancing and banjo blaying.

The screen feature will be "The Painted Post," with Tom Mix, the king of western stars and his wonder horse Tony. This is Tom's last Wm. Fox picture, under which banner he has become world famous, and it shows the west at its best.

The comedy creation will be "Is Everybody Happy," featuring that ever popular comedian Charlie Chase.

AT THE REGENT.

DOLORES COSTELLO WINS PRAISE AS VIVACIOUSLY DEVASTATING HEROINE OF "THE COLLEGE WIDOW."

Triumphs in Comedy — William Collier, Jr., Fine as Bolton Aliss Jones; Anders Randolf Supports.

George Ade's stage play was the most refreshing and delightful college football play ever written and Warne Bros. screen version catches all the verve and sparkle of the original. Paul Schofield who scenarized "Beau Geste," "The Poor Nut," "Subway Sadie," and "The Song and Dance Man," did the picturization with Peter Milne. Dolores Costello, known as the loveliest and saddest lady of the picture world—in "The College Widow" takes on a new personality, a gay demureness, which places her high among the great comediennes of this or any other day. William Collier, Jr., is the lead. Anders Randolf, Douglas Gerrard, Charles Hill Mailes, Robert Ryan, Sumner Getchel, Big Boy Williams, Grace Gordon, and Jess Hibbs are in the cast. Archie L. Mayo directed. "The College Widow" comes to the Regent Theatre for a run of three days, on Thursday, Friday, and Saturday.

SKI CHAMPIONSHIPS BE HELD AT BANFF

Run in Conjunction With Winter Carnival in February.

MONTREAL, Nov. 7.—The Western ski championships for Canada will be held at Banff Alberta. In conjunction with the Banff Winter Carnival which is to be held from February 2 to 9, 1929 it was announced to day by A. O. Seymour, general tourist agent of the Canadian Pacific Railway.

Winter sports of all kinds are held at Banff and attract visitors from all parts of the country.

The new Scout troop at St. John's Church received a good start recently when a meeting was held at which the St. Luke's troop representatives, twelve in number, assisted the boys of the new troop. The opening ceremonies were conducted by Scoutmaster Groombridge, after which a short talk on the Scout movement was greatly enjoyed.

A relay gauntlet race, instruction, a ball relay, and other games followed. The camp fire, usually such an outstanding feature of a Scout meeting, was cut short owing to the absence of a sufficient number of song books, and Scout Silence marked the close of the meeting, but not before the boys of St. John's had received a clear insight into the workings of a Scout troop.

The new organization at present comprises Charles W. Coleman, Roy Pitchford, Albert Armstrong, Jack Patterson, Ormie Henry, Albert Stephen, and Harold Lesurf. A. Barnes and A. Davidson being under age, were requested to join the Cub pack for the present.

The next meeting will be held in St. Luke's Parish Hall, and any other boy of St. John's, between twelve and sixteen years, who desires to train in scouting, is cordially invited to be on hand at 7 p.m. next Friday.

Tests revealed that the lifting power of an average-sized mushroom was 27 pounds. Mushrooms have been known to lift and crack asphalt paths.

FATAL WOUNDS CAUSE DEATH

Jury Finds Harry Henley Held Gun When James Was Shot.

COURT HEARING TO-DAY.

BELLEVILLE, Nov. 7.—The jury empanelled to inquire into the death of James Henley, found he came by his death on Nov. 1 from peritonitis caused by results of gunshot wounds from the discharge of a shot gun in the hands of his brother, Harry Henley.

The preliminary hearing for Harry Henley will be held to-day and he will be charged with unlawfully killing his brother.

At the inquest last night B. C. Donnan, Crown Attorney, interrogated the witnesses; C. A. Payne appeared for the boy, and C. A. Cameron for the Rotary Club, who have taken an interest in the boy. The boy was in court, but was not called as a witness. His father, William Henley, Dr. Connor, and Violet Henley, aged 10, were the witnesses heard and the evidence of the father and sister showed that Harry, aggravated by the throwing of stones by James, went into the house and loading the gun, fired through a broken window pane at his brother, who was some 40 feet in front of the window.

Dr Connor stated the boy was suffering from numerous gunshot wounds from the ankle to the abdomen on the right side. He was in a state of collapse.

Statement to Doctor

"Did he make a statement?" the Crown asked. "Yes," said the doctor. "He said Harry and he were cleaning the gun and it discharged when at half-cock."

William Henley, the father, gave evidence that Harry related the same story to him when he returned home after taking James to the hospital.

"Was James normal?" asked the Crown. "Last winter while playing, James bumped his head."

"Did you notice any difference?" "He was a little peculiar the last four months back. He would leave other children and then turn around and hit them. The other children were afraid of him."

"What happened at the house as told to you by Harry?"

"Harry said Jimmy was chasing him in the yard by throwing stones and becoming afraid he went into the house and got the gun from behind the door and pointing it through a broken window panel fired."

Boy's Statement Read

Violet Henley's story was, in substance, the same as the father's. The statement of the boy was read in court but was not placed in as an exhibit. In substance the statement said: "We went rabbit hunting in the early afternoon and coming back put the gun in the corner of the kitchen. We were playing and Jimmy started to throw stones. I became frightened and chased Jimmy and then Jimmy drove me in the house. Jimmy continued to throw stones, breaking some window panes. The girls were scared and I picked up the gun, loaded the left barrel and poked it through a broken window pane and fired at Jimmy."

G. WARD CASE IS DISMISSED

Magistrate Gives Millbrook Residence the Benefit of the Doubt.

MAY ENTER APPEAL.

Dismissal by Magistrate O. A. Langley of a charge against George Ward, of Millbrook—of attempting to escape liability after his car had struck Mrs. Ewart Davies and her daughter, of 33 Lafayette avenue on October 6—and Chief of Police Newhall's intimation that his department would enter an appeal, featured this morning's session of the City Police court. The Ward case, first on the slate, had concluded last week and judgement had been reserved. After due consideration of the defendant's actions following the accident, His Worship failed to find that they had been in contravention to section 285, subsection 2 of the Criminal code, for while Ward had failed to leave his name and address, he had remained near the scene of the accident for some time at least. The magistrate felt that Ward should be given the benefit of the doubt.

Another Dismissal

Another dismissal was decided upon by the Magistrate in the charge brought against J. P. Pulkinghorn, that his car had been without lights on Water street in the early morning of October 21.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Pulkinghorn gave evidence to show that the car, so far as they were concerned, had not been out of the garage after midnight and Mr. Pulkinghorn had the key.

Walter Merrett of 339 Burnham street pleaded guilty to exceeding the speed limit while on the Wallace Point Road and was given a minimum fine of $5.00 and costs; while Ross Dickson, pleaded not guilty to a charge of driving his car without proper lights. The case adjourned until Wednesday, November 14.

Even the word "batteryless" was coined by Rogers to describe this Canadian invention—the first radio in the world to operate successfully without batteries! Today there are more Rogers-Batteryless Radios sold than all other electric sets combined.

That is why you can't go wrong in choosing either of the wonderful Rogers-Batteryless Radios illustrated and described in this announcement.

News From the Mines

Through

Selleway, Mills & Company

Capital Rouyn.

The recent find on the Capital Rouyn Mine appears to be an extension in a south-westerly direction of a quartz vein discovered in the early summer. Free gold is readily seen in the new showing, while in the previous showing the values were rtaher low. During last summer six diamond drill holes were put down, totalling 2,000 feet, three of these holes being put down on a copper showing a little east and north of the recent find. It was found in drilling that the copper gave out at a vertical depth of fifty feet. Not sufficient work has been done on the new find to give much idea as to its importance. Where opened up the vein shows a width of seventeen feet.

Abana.

Practically no headway has been made to date in dewatering the Abana. The Diesel engine which was set up about two months ago has not yet functioned, whether through defectiveness or not is not known, and the pump is being operated by the old plant. It is not anticipated that the water will be reduced to any appreciable extent until such time as the company succeed in getting the Diesel engine to run.

Mining Corporation.

Mining Corporation have started to sink on their Murray property, immediately north of Noranda's Horne mine. The shaft is about 1,500 feet due north of Noranda's "H" ore body. Noranda have some other sulphide showings in close proximity to the Murray property, and it is generally conceded that Mining Corporation have an exceedingly good chance of getting ore when work is carried out to greater depths than the present 250 foot level.

The work carried on previously by the United Verde Extension on the Murray property consisted of 3,700 feet of lateral work on the 250 foot level. One crosscut was run westerly, paralleling the Noranda line and just a few feet distant from it. Another was run north-easterly, while one was driven due north. In the latter crosscut a narrow fracture vein was found, which was followed on for some feet, but although a little copper was found, it was not considered to be of importance.

The intention is to sink the present shaft to one thousand feet before lateral work will be attempted. The large diabase dyke which cuts the Horne ore bodies was thought to extend through the Murray property, but to be faulted to the east. It is now stated by Mr. Emmons, geologist for Mining Corporation, that although a large amount of trenching was done on the property, no extension of this dyke has been discovered on the Corporation's ground.

Dome.

For the month of October, Dome Mines showed the second largest production for the current year. The output for the period amounted to $332,519, as compared with $316,865 in September. For the first ten months of 1928, output was $3,136,520 as against $3,255,516 for the corresponding period of last year.

Falconbridge Nickel Mines.

The shares of Falconbridge Nickel Mines were placed on the unlisted section of the exchange Monday by the directors. All trading will be on an as, if and when issued basis, until stock certificates are available, which will be in about ten days. The stock recently sold as high as $6 a share. Yesterday's quotations were from $5.25 to $5.35.

Calgary Oil Gossip.

Spooner No. 2 nearing the lime, believed to be within 100 feet. Some oil.

Royalite No. 17 should be in any day.

British Dominion No. 2, 2,220 feet. Drilling open hole.

Mayland 3,645 feet. Setting ten inch casing. Looks good prospect.

McDougall-Segur No. 2, some oil. Should be in lime soon.

Vipond.

The shareholders of Vipond Consolidated Mines were given news of a constructive nature at the annual meeting to-day. Since the close of the fiscal year, July 31, 1928, the company has added $100,000 worth of Dominion of Canada bonds, which brings its investments to date to $400,000 in bonds. The profit for the last six months shows an increase over the previous six months, and the company has no indebtedness.

Mr. Robert E. Dye, mine manager, painted a very glowing picture of recent underground developments. On the 730 footlevel a section of ore now totalling 250 feet in length, averaging 8 feet in width, and assaying better than $9 per ton has been exposed. Within the past week on the 600 foot level directly above the ore just referred to, 30 foot of $20 ore has been opened up over the full width of the drift. The developments referred to above have occurred since the reserves for the fiscal year just ended were calculated, and therefore will serve to add very materially to the reserves as stated in the annual report.

Wheat Prices Drop During Early Mart

CHICAGO, Nov. 7 (Canadian Press).—In contrast with New York stocks, the wheat market to-day went downgrade during the early dealings. Selling which brought about declines in the price for wheat was ascribed largely to the bearish outlook for the wheat crop in Argentina. Opening at ⅝ decline to ¼ advance, wheat values soon underwent material setback all around. Corn, oats, and provisions were firm, with corn starting unchanged to ¼c higher and subsequently holding near to the initial range.

Wheat, Dec. 115¼, March 120⅝. Corn, Dec. 82¼, March 85. Oats, Dec. 43¾, March 44¼.

Trading Is Scattered On Toronto Exchange

TORONTO, Nov. 7 (Canadian Press).—Trading on the Toronto Stock Exchange during the morning session was well scattered, with the majority of prominent stocks showing decided changes in prices. There was considerable liquidation in the active issues, particularly the oils and substantial declines were registered.

British American Oil, the most active stock on the unlisted section, opened strong at 55, but at noon dropped to 52¾ for a loss of 1¼ points. International ePtroleum with turnover of 13,010 shares, and Imperial with 21,217 shares, also showed decided declines. International Petroleum at 53½ and Imperiol Oil at 100 were down ¾ and three points respectively. International Nickel, after selling as high as 195⅝, declined to 194 for a loss of half. Massey Harris led the listed section in activity and registered a gain of one at 56. British Columbia Power "B" was the only stock to make a gain of any note, advancing five to 42.

Loblaw, Walker, Canada Dredge and City Dairy were all firmer.

Mining Stock Prices Steady—Rates Fall Off

TORONTO, Nov. 7 (Canadian Press).—Except for several outstanding issues, prices were steady while there was a general falling off of sales on the Standard Stock and Mining Exchange to-day. Noranda was active at 54.60, a net loss of 65 cents, after opening at 56.25. Bathurst, Sudbury Basin and Teck Hughes were in demand.

Bathurst gained four at 33 in heavy trading, Aconda four at 14½, while Murphy at 79 dropped four and Malartic seven at 115. Sudbury Basin was up 15 at 7.80. Teck Hughes and Towagmac each up 5 at 8.65 and 2.85 respectively, while Wright Hargreaves jumped 9 to 2.62. Amulet fell back 21 at 2.89 and Sherritt Gordon was at 6.90, a drop of 5. Unlisted securities showed most activity. Abana dropped 5 at 3.65. Falconbridge 25 at 5.00, Capital Rouyn two at 21, and Big Missouri 1 at 63, while Coast Copper jumped 2.25 at 50.50.

Heavy Profit Taking Features At New York

NEW YORK, Nov. 7 (Canadian Press).—Wall Street celebrated the election of Herbert Hoover to-day by staging a vigorous bullish demonstration in stock prices. Early gains of two to ten points were fairly well maintained in the face of heavy profit taking, with more than a score of issues, fourteen of them oils, setting new high records for the year. Lowering of the call money renewal rate to six per cent. and the announcement of stock split ups by National Sugar Refining and a few smaller companies and the prediction of at least two more years of good business by Arthur W. Cutten, one of Wall Streets largest market operators, all helped to stimulate bullish enthusiasm.

Several large blocks of 5,000 to 20,000 shares changed hands in the oil group. The list of new highs included Standard Oils of New Jersey and California, Marland, Sinclair, Pan American Common and the B stock, Mexican seaboard, White Eagle, Shell Union Pure Oil, Phillips Superior, Amerada and Texas Coal and Oil, the gains ranging from fractions to three points.

Kennecott, which sold less than five years ago below $30 a share, ran up five points to a new top at 133. Anaconda crossed 91 to a new high.

AUTOMOBILE IS TAKEN IN ERROR

Kenneth Brown Takes Automobile From in Front of Residence.

POLICE NOTIFIED.

After all, a car may be of Brown or Greene, and yet be mistaken by its driver. The city police laughed, and Kenneth Brown of the A. Brown and Son garage laughed with them and admitted that the joke was on him when, on Monday afternoon, he entered the police station to report possession of a strange motor car which he had acquired in some very mysterious manner. Realization of what complications might have confronted Brown had he attempted to drive his new possession through Toronto or any of a half dozen other cities only added to the humor of the thing. And Jerry Greene, who had lost his Essex coach sometime Saturday night laughed too when he thought of the manner in which he had tried, in vain, to recover it.

Yet the mystery was a simple one when solved. Young Brown had been driving a car recently traded in at his father's garage, and it was therefore as strange to him as Jerry Greene's Essex sedan which he entered, by mistake, as it stood alongside the other car on Charlotte street about nine o'clock on Saturday evening. The one that he left behind bore a Toronto license.

Greene notified the police and they in turn flashed the news by wire to Toronto and other Ontario cities, and in addition they wired the license department in the Queen City to ascertain the holder of the Toronto license number. Thus if Brown had driven Green's car out of Peterborough he would have had trouble, and finally, even after the "reconciliation" at the local police station on Monday, Brown would have trouble even if he drove the stock car. The police were in possession of both numbers, and until notified, would be ready to arrest the driver of either car.

On Sunday, Mr. Greene, using another car, had driven as far as Oshawa and around by Lindsay in search of his lost coach, while Brown only discovered his mistake on Monday when the stock of cars at the garage were driven out.

Local Improvement Notice.

TAKE NOTICE THAT

1. The Council of the Corporation of the City of Peterborough intends to construct as a local improvement a sewer on Rogers street, between the end of the present sewer south of Hunter street east, to the end of the present sewer north of Robinson street, and intends to specially assess the cost upon the land abutting directly on the work.

2. The estimated cost of the work is $1,444.40, none of which is to be paid by the Corporation. The estimated cost per foot frontage is $1.12. The special assessment is to be paid in 30 annual instalments.

3. A petition to the said Council will not avail to prevent its construction, but a petition against the work or the manner in which it has been undertaken may be made pursuant to section 8 of the Local Improvement Act to the Railway and Municipal Board by a majority of the owners representing at least one-half of the value of the lots which are to be specially assessed therefor.

4. By-law for undetraking the work will be considered by the Council at a meeting thereof to be held on the 3rd day of December, 1928, at 7.30 o'clock p.m. or at a regular or special meeting to be held thereafter.

TRUTH VERSUS ERROR

In Allan Fairbairn's synoptical review of the publication "Herbert Booth" by Ford C. Ottman, is noted the statement, that through a certain policy of those in authority an enormous loss has come to the Army, has alienated much of public sympathy, has sapped the spiritual strength of the soldiers, and have driven from the ranks many noble adherents, who but for that policy would have given a life devotion to the Army's advancement.

We add or rather emphasize the fact that not only that certain policy, but other wrong actions of the Army has caused untold detrimental results, to the Army's best interests and the public good, the most painful result being the sapping of the spiritual life of the soldiers.

It is a foregone conclusion, whether in the Army or out of it, the individual who compromises to wrong doing, by sacrificing principle, truth and righteousness, in the vain hope of advancing the interests of the Salvation Army or any other organization, is sure to become a mere formalist, having no spiritual life. It is not hard to discover the cause of the lack of spiritual power in many places in the Army to-day.

THE KIDNEYS

are glands which take a very active part in the elimination of poisons from the blood. If the kidneys are working normally the blood is filtered by them in such a manner that the soluble wastes and poisons are removed and carried to the bladder, from which they are eliminated at intervals. If the kidneys do not separate the wastes from the blood stream the system soon becomes saturated with toxins, and diseases like neuritis, rheumatism, uremia, dropsy, blood-poisoning, etc., may develop.

YOUR HABITS

of living have a lot to do in regulating the amount of work that the kidneys have to perform, so be careful to eat and drink in moderation, using mostly natural foods, but also see to it that normal nerve energy is reaching the kidneys.

MAKE SURE

that there is no mechanical or structural interference with the nerves leading to the kidneys. Improper nerve force means lack of normal function. This means poisons retained in the system. By a careful examination of the spine your Chiropractor can tell if there is pressure upon the nerves supplying the kidneys. If pressure exists he can release it by spinal adjustments. When this is done the kidney tissues will become strong and capable of functioning properly to free the system of poisons.

Defence Counsel Protests Methods Used

HON. G. N. GORDON PROTESTS AGAINST MANNER CROWN USED IN GETTING EVIDENCE

Attorney-General's Department Comes Under Fire of Defence Counsel.

METHODS CIRCUITOUS.

Mr. Gordon Took Strong Exception To Inspector's Evidence at Cobourg.

COBOURG, Ont., November 8 (Special to The Examiner). — A strong protest against "the circuitous methods employed by the Attorney-General's Department in this Russianized, police-ridden country to obtain evidence against accused men," was voiced by the Hon. G. N. Gordon, K.C., counsel for John L. Corkum, during the latter's trial in the Assize Court here on a charge of criminal negligence.

Mr. Gordon took strong exception to the evidence of Inspector F. E. Elliott, of the Provincial Police, regarding an interview with the accused man while the latter was out on bail. He asked to see his liquor permit, whereupon Corkum is said to have torn up that document.

Counsel protested against this testimony, on the ground that his client had been under arrest at the time. The jury retired while the admissibility of the evidence was argued before Mr. Justice Raney.

Wanted Non-Jury Trial.

Mr. Gordon also applied for a non-jury trial for his client, which the bench refused to grant.

The charge against Corkum arises from the death of Mrs. Symons whom he is alleged to have struck with his motor car.

Mr. Gordon objected to the production of photographs of the scene of the crash, declaring that they showed only a small section of the locality.

The pictures, however, were admitted.

Having called 23 witnesses, the Crown rested its case.

Mr. Justice Raney ruled that the evidence of Inspector Elliott should be allowed.

The inspector said that in reply to his demand for his permit, Corkum replied: "I haven't got it. I destroyed it."

Inspector: "When did you destroy it?"

Corkum: "Three weeks ago."

Inspector: "Here?"

Corkum: "I tore it up."

Questioned as to Corkum's condition, Traffic Office Hallick said he did not think it was normal, and the prisoner did not appear to be himself.

Mr. Raney: "What was it you noticed?"

Witness: "Just general appearance."

Crown: "What did you say to him?"

Witness: "I asked him what he had been drinking."

Crown: "Why?"

Witness: "I smelled liquor on his breath."

Crown: "What did he say?"

"He replied 'Nothing.' I told him he was lieing."

Evidence was produced showing that Corkum's car skidded after the brakes were applied.

Dr. J. C. Smith, a Crown witness, whose production was demanded by the defence counsel, Mr. Gordon, testified that at the traffic officer's request he had examined the accused for evidence of liquor, but could find nothing to indicate that Corkum had touched liquor within the previous two hours.

LAVA TORRENTS CREATING HAVOC

Hundreds Evacuating Region Around Eastern Base of Mount Etna Yhier.

MUCH DAMAGE DONE.

CATANIA, Sicily, Nov. 8 (Canadian Press).—With a molten stream of lava like a hunger dragon at their backs to spur them on, hundreds of persons to-day were fleeing from the region around the eastern base of Mount Etna Yhier. Household belongings were thrown on any makeshift vehicle to get them out of the advancing column of fire. Barnyard animals straggled along with the people who were abandoning their fields and homes to the molten stream, which advanced at the rate of more than 100 yards an hour.

The most fertile and intensively cultivated land in Sicily was being consumed by lava. Houses were being destroyed and trees burned. Great clouds of steam arose as the heat reached the vats of the distilleries which produce citric acid.

Biggest Paper Since War Means Work For Newsboys

The Examiner presses will start at three o'clock to-morrow to turn out the largest edition printed, at least since the war.

There will be fifty-two pages in the Armistice edition, and all but two or three of the articles will be local in their interest and references.

Because of the huge bulk of the paper, the newsboys will have a difficult task to deliver the thousands of copies to city homes, and may be late. Please be patient. The staff is doing its share to help by starting the press more than an hour earlier, and the management is depending upon the carriers to do their share.

But if the paper has not been delivered by a reasonable time, do not hesitate to report the fact, when an effort will be made to hasten your copy.

PREMIER WILL OPEN NEW WING OF COLLEGIATE

Premier Ferguson Promises To Come To City On December 14.

WENT TO TORONTO.

Plans For Evening Yet To Be Worked Out By Board of Education.

Premier G. Howard Ferguson, Minister of Education, accompanied by Mrs. Ferguson, will attend the formal opening of the new wing of the Peterborough Collegiate Institute and Vocational School on December 14.

The above announcement was made this morning by E. Bruce Fowler, chairman of the Board of Education, following the return last night of a deputation from the board which had waited on the Premier in Toronto on Wednesday. Chairman Fowler expressed gratification at the splendid assistance rendered by W. H. Bradburn, M.P.P., and His Worship Mayor Roland Denne, who had accompanied the deputation, and at the considerate hearing accorded the Peterborough body.

A suitable reception will, no doubt, be worked out in connection with the formal opening, and since the demands on Premier Ferguson's time are numerous and urgent, his coming to Peterborough may be taken as an indication of the importance attached to the formal opening of the newest branch of education locally.

LATE RETURNS AID MAJORITY

There Is No Change From Yesterday in Electoral College Standing.

STRONGER IN SENATE.

NEW YORK, Nov. 8 (Canadian Press).—Later returns from Tuesday's election continue to swell the majority of Herbert Hoover in the popular vote, but as yet there is no change in the electoral college standing. Hoover will have 444 electoral votes and Smith 87.

The Republican party in the election augmented its slender majority in the Senate besides electing a president. While the Democrats still have a strong bloc, they lost some seats to their opponents.

The full measure of overwhelming victory which sent even rock-riddled Democrat states into Hoover's column was still to be ascertained, but it was evident that the new president would come into office with the greatest electoral majority ever given any candidate and with a popular vote exceeding any before it.

The States carried by Hoover 40, Smith 8, (Alabama, Arkansas, Georgia, Louisiana, Massachusetts, Mississippi, Rhode Island, South Carolina).

Popular votes, incomplete, Hoover 18,299,708, Smith 12,989,093. Hoover plurality, 5,310,615.

In Congress the new Senate will have 54 Republicans, forty Democrats, one Farmer-Laborite, one vacancy, compared with 47 Republicans, 46 Democrats one Farmer-Laborite, two vacancies.

Leader of Underworld Riddled With Bullets

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 8 (Canadian Press).—William Denni, alleged leader of the underworld gang is in the hospital to-day, his body riddled with eleven bullets, believed a victim of gangster guns. His recovery is doubtful. Denni was shot from an automobile as he stood on the street corner last night. Police connect the shooting with the testimony given by Denni in a recent murder trial.

TEACHERS ASSEMBLE IN CONVENTION

Miss A. Going Delivers Interesting Paper On Picture Study This Morning.

GRANTS MADE.

Two Delegates Will Be Appointed To Ontario Educational Association Meeting.

The Peterborough Teacher's Institute met in their annual convention in the public library this morning. G. S. Mattice, the Vice-President, occupied the chair.

It was passed that the usual grant to the Ontario Educational Association be given. The meeting felt that more copies of the reports of the O.E.A. should be distributed amongst the schools since nearly all the teachers are members.

The usual grants to the various schools for magazines were passed.

It was decided to appoint two delegates to the O.E.A. this year. The choice of these was to be left to the incoming executive.

The treasurer's report indicated that the Institute is in a satisfactory condition financially as a substantial balance is on hand.

M. Clark, Miss Esplen, Miss Lancaster, Miss Eastwood, D. Munro, Miss E. Morrow and Sister Stanislaus were appointed a nominating committee to select the officers for next year.

Friday's sessions are to be held in the Collegiate Institute hall commencing at nine o'clock.

Interesting Paper

Miss A. Going, B.A., gave a paper on picture study. Schools usually select the simplest style of picture. The old masters had usually a story attached to their pictures and children should start with these. Small children appreciate these.

Browning says that art is the one way of speaking the truth. Plato says that art is understood by all nations; it is universal. The art we own ourselves is greater than the pictures we see. The art in the class room is more valuable in reality than any other because it is the pupils' own. All children have appreciation of art. Do not destroy this by criticism.

What is a work of art? Perhaps the best definition is that which lifts the soul above everday surroundings. We aim to lift the soul in art above the humdrum of life. Money can't buy this, it is invaluable.

Must Love Picture

The first requisite of a teacher is to have the pictures yourself. More intimate relations with pictures develops appreciation of them. Study is necessary. To know a picture, know the artist and find his standpoint. Read articles about him in books. Rosa Bonheulr for example, loved horses but disliked school and spent much time in livery stables. She was natural, independent in her thinking, patriotic, and not inclined to bow to the artificialities of life. These qualities explain the truth of her pictures, their naturalness and beauty.

Miss Going took up other pictures to illustrate her points. The Dutch artists as Rembrandt for example, painted the common people. Rembrandt lived in a mill with four windows and thus the mill was dull. This is shown in his pictures; much of them is left dull and dark. Rembrandt painted the spirit of the people rather than particular portraits. He painted for the general effect. His paintings were not appreciated and much of his life was spent in poverty.

Teachers should study the composition of the picture. Each artist has his own arrangement because he paints to represent an idea in his own mind. If you know his idea, you have the key to the composition.

Raphael painted "The Transfiguration" at the age af thirty-seven. Most of the great Italian painters painted their masterpieces at a greater age and painted scenes of the death of Christ. Raphael was in the prime of life and thus his painting is one of life.

Raphael was a great student of character and he depicts the qualities of the different disciples in the picture. The lives of this picture point definitely to Christ. The groups are semi-circles centring around Christ. The delicate colors are about Christ; the sombre ones are at the greatest distance. The peace and quiet are about Christ; the anguish and uncertainty are found in the crowds around.

Miss Going well illustrated her various points from the pictures she held up before the teachers and her discussion was very useful and practical.

SALVATION ARMY HONORS CITY'S OLD

Over 3,000 years of lifetime is represented in the photo above, and 6,438 years of that lifetime is made up by totalling the age of those in the gathering 65 years of age or more. This unique gathering took place in the Peterborough Salvation Army Temple on the evening of Friday, November 2, when the old people of the district were guests of an 80-year-old Salvationist, George Poulter, of Montreal. He is seen standing to the right of "Granny" Beare, who may be distinguished by the large flower, presented to her by Mr. George Poulter. Though one hundred years of age on October 20, the old lady motored from Cobourg to be present. His Worship Mayor Roland Denne and Mrs. Denne; Miss Lancaster, Superintendent of the Protestant Home; G. A. Gillespie, and representatives of The Examiner and the Salvation Army from Toronto and other centres are seen in the background.

LABOR TO MOVE CENSURE VOTE

MacDonald Says Pact With France Will Not Limit Armaments.

BALDWIN TO SPEAK.

LONDON, Nov. 8 (Canadian Press).—Although Lord Cushendun, the Acting Foreign Secretary, has pronounced the Anglo-French naval compromise dead, Labor leaders were determined to-day to move censure of the Government in the House of Commons because of the accord.

Ramsay MacDonald, Labor leader, outlined the position of his party by saying that the pact "was not an agreement to limit armaments. It was an agreement not to limit armaments. It sacrificed the most elementary considerations of Britain's safety except upon one sole consideration, that there would always be pooling of our navy and the navy of the country across the Channel.

When the Laborite attack is launched in the Commons Premier Stanley Baldwin will defend the Government policy.

Lord Cushendun emphatically denied this, saying Britain did not despair of reaching some general agreement merely because of the discouraging results of the Anglo-French agreement. He vigorously repudiated the innuendoes and suggestions of commitments and secret agreements. In this connection he said the British government had made no reply to a suggestion in the French government note, that whatever the result the two governments would none the less be under urgent obligation to act in concert to ensure success of proposals, or to deal with any difficulties likely to check the work of the League of Nations preparatory disarmament commission. Britain did not like to repel the advance, but they believed their silence would be understood.

Concerning Britain's action in acceding to the French viewpoint on military trained reserves, Lord Cushendun said Britain was under no obligations. "We could, if we liked, alter our attitude and insist on our view," he said, but added it would be hopeless to get France and other military continental nations to adopt the British views on this point.

Premier Says Nothing About Royal Commission

TORONTO, Nov. 8.—Premier King declined to comment last night on the suggestion of Hon. George N. Gordon of Peterborough, that a Royal Commission should be appointed to investigate Hon. Peter Veniot's action in connection with the Simcoe postmastership. "I have nothing to say about it," the Prime Minister remarked, after reading the letter of his former colleague.

MANSLAUGHTER COUNT REDUCED

Toronto Resident Is Charged With Criminal Negligence at Cobourg Trial.

COBOURG, November 8. — Evidence regarding the finding of a half-filled bottle of liquor a few yards from the scene of an automobile accident on the Provincial Highway west of Port Hope, on September 17, in which Mrs. A. E. Symonds lost her life, featured yesterday's sittings of Supreme Court, at which John L. Corkum, Toronto, driver of the car, faces trial on a charge of criminal negligence. Corkum was originally charged with manslaughter and committed for trial on that count.

A. E. Symonds, husband of the victim, related how he had been driving east on the Provincial Highway near Morish, September 17, with his wife and little daughter. A horse which he had purchased in the afternoon, was being led behind the buggy at the right side and entirely off the pavement. He was sure the lantern, equipped with red lenses, was hung at the left side of the rig and was lighted. On coming on to the Provincial Highway from a side road some distance west of the scene of the accident, Mr. Symonds declared, he stopped his horse and assured himself that the road was clear before proceeding.

Fred Douglas, an employee of Symonds, testified that the lantern on the buggy was lighted and in its proper place when he hitched up the horse a few minutes before the accident. Hearing of the accident later in the evening, he hurried to the scene and saw the body of Mrs. Symonds lying on the pavement and the buggy in the ditch. He saw a car against a fence on the opposite side of the road. He picked up the broken buggy lamp and found it was still warm.

"When I saw Corkum he was in my house speaking to Mr. Symonds," Richard Uglow told the Court. "He was telling Mr. Symonds 'You had no light, Mr. Symonds.'" A few minutes later, Stanley Rowe found a bottle in my garden, a few yards from the fence. It was a bottle of London Dry Gin and was about half full.

Uglow stated that several persons tasted the liquid in the bottle. He knew it to be gin.

HOOVER ASKS CO-OPERATION

Is Grateful For Confidence, But Feels No Sense of Triumph.

SEEKS DIVINE HELP.

Hoover Home, Stanford University Campus, Cal., Nov. 8.—Looking upon Republican victory as a vindication of great issues and a determination of the true road of progress, Herbert Hoover, in his first message to the American people as President-elect, yesterday asked for a co-operation and unity of spirit of all leaders of opinion and of action for the common service of the country.

"I cannot make an adequate expression of gratitude for the overwhelming confidence of our people who without regard to section or interest have selected me for President of the whole United States," he said.

"There has been a vindication of great issues and a determination of the true road of progress. The Republican party has again been assessed with a great responsibility. In this great hour there can be for me no feeling of victory or exultation. Rather, it imposes a sense of solemn responsibility of the future and of complete dependence upon Divine guidance for the task which the greatest office in the world imposes.

Public Life Ended.

NEW YORK, November 8. — Alfred E. Smith has declared his stormy and tempestuous political career at an end—just short of its highest goal. He announced yesterday he had fought his last political battle, and that from now on "as a high private in the ranks of American citizens" he would be a spectator from the sidelines.

"I certainly do not expect ever to run for public office again," he said. "I have had all I can stand of it. I have given a quarter of a century of probably the best years of my life to it. I will never lose my interest in public affairs—that is a sure thing—but as far as running for office again is concerned, that's finished."

The Governor made this statement at a press conference in his suite at the Biltmore Hotel during the afternoon, in reply to a question by one of the correspondents.

"You have no regrets of any kind over this campaign, have you?" was the next question asked.

"None at all," he answered. "I have nothing but pleasant memories of it. There is one thing that the figures indicate, and that is that no man in the country except one got more votes for the Presidency than I did."

Stammering school children are said to be cured by one schoolmaster's novel treatment. As soon as the child begins to stammer he is told: "Before you begin to speak lift up the fore part of one foot without lifting the heel from the ground." This diverts the speaker's attention and helps him to overcome his defect.

Sixty-Six Cases In Smallpox District

CHICOUTIMI, Que., November 8 (Canadian Press). — Known cases of smallpox in the Chicoutimi district now number sixty-six. The disease broke out in September, but medical authorities were not informed of the prevalence until a few days ago. Precautionary measures have been taken, and all doctors of the city to-day were engaged in vaccinating the citizens.

FOURTEEN DIE AS RESULT OF BIG EXPLOSION

Factory Plant is Wrecked Early This Morning in Lynn.

SEVERAL MISSING.

Nine Persons Are in a Serious Condition in the Hospital.

LYNN, Mass., November 8 (Canadian Press). — Fourteen persons are known to be dead from an explosion that wrecked the plant of the Preble Box Toe Company and a nearby dwelling house. Nine persons were in a serious condition in the hospital and several others were believed missing.

Of fourteen bodies recovered, four were those of occupants of a house near the factory, a mother and three of her eight children. The others are believed to be employees, and have not been identified.

The woman killed was Mrs. Harry Blaney, who with her husband and children was at breakfast when the explosion sent a sheet of flame against her house, bursting through the window and enveloping the family. The rest of the household escaped with minor injuries. At least twenty persons were injured.

A series of explosions occurred in the celluloid mixture used in the manufacturing of box toes for shoes. One end of the concrete block building was blown out and two bodies hurled with it.

TOY PISTOL THUG FOILED

Canadian Teller in Detroit Bank Sounds Police Alarm.

BANDIT IS CAPTURED.

DETROIT, Nov. 8.—A lone bandit who attempted to hold up a branch of the First National Bank here yesterday met something more than his match when he poked a pistol through the pay-off window of Frank McFarlane, aged 22, of Windsor, and demanded "a thousand in a hurry."

Instead of pushing out the cash, after reading the scribbled note, young McFarlane dropped to the floor of the cage, pressed down the police burglar alarm button, and shouted: "Hold-up! Hold-up!" Patrons in the lobby of the bank sprang back against the wall as the bandit turned and ran for the street door.

As he did so young McFarlane and John B. Spittery, manager of the bank, sprang after him, the latter carrying a revolver snatched from a desk drawer. Reaching the street the bandit sprang into a taxicab that stood waiting, but before it could be started Spittery and McFarlane were upon him and dragged him to the sidewalk and disarmed him. The "weapon" proved to be a glass pistol, incapable of doing any damage. The thug gave his name as Benny Miller, aged 18, and claimed to hail from Chicago.

For their part in the capture bank officials presented Spittery with $1,000, and McFarlane with a cheque for half that amount.

Motorists Hit By Train

Three Motorists Have Narrow Escape From Death On Norwood Road.

RECEIVE BRUISES.

New Automobile Is Total Wreck —Continue Journey in Second Car.

H. A. Sneyd, his wife and baby had a marvelous escape from death when the car they were riding in was hit by a C.P.R. freight train on the Otonabee crossing about five miles from the city on the Norwood road. Their car was a total wreck, but the occupants received only bruises and cuts from broken glass, and a severe shaking up. They were given medical attention from a local doctor but were able to continue the journey to their home in Port Hope in another car.

The accident happened at two o'clock yesterday afternoon. Mr. Sneyd was driving east on the Norwood road and he heard no warning of the approaching train until the train was upon him. The train hit the car along the right rear and the crash completely smashed every breakable part of the automobile, which was a new coupe. The flying glass cut the occupants badly, but otherwise they were uninjured. The baby received the least injury because it was protected by the mother. One person who saw Mr. Sneyd said that he looked as though he had been thrown through a barbed-wire fence.

The freight was an extra westbound toward the city, number 3302, and it was in charge of Conductor J. A. Tysick and Engineer Stanley Barlow, both of Havelock.

G. A. Brethen, of Norwood, conveyed Mr. Sneyd and family to the city in his car.

FRANCE LOOKS TO POINCARE

Former Premier Is Regarded As His Own Successor To Office.

RESISTS PRESSURE.

PARIS, Nov. 6 (Canadian Press).—All hands to-day pointed to Raymond Poincare as his own successor as Premier. It was regarded as certain in political circles that President Doumergue would appeal to M. Poincare either to-night or to-morrow, when the long consultations with party leaders have been completed.

M. Poincare's objections have been strengthened, however, by the attitude assumed by the Radical group in the Chamber of Deputies, where they are manoeuvring to re-organize the old bloc of the Left with the Socialists. If the President fails to overcome M. Poincare's objections, the crisis is likely to be long drawn out.

Raymond Poincare continued to resist the pressure of his supporters to form a new government. President Doumergue is consulting members of Parliament on the political situation. It is generally agreed that Poincare is the only man who can form a Ministry.

WOMAN LOSES LIFE IN CROSSING CRASH

Baby Not Expected To Recover After Smash Near Thamesville.

CHATHAM, Nov. 8. — Mrs. John Maas, a native of Holland, was killed, and her 11-months-old baby injured fatally, it is believed, when a car was hit by a westbound C.P.R. flyer at a level crossing at North Bothwell yesterday afternoon. W. G. Hall, of Watford, the driver of the car, and John Maas, husband of the victim, escaped uninjured.

Maas, who had been in this country about four years, has been working in the vicinity of Blenheim for some time. Recently he contracted with Hall to work for him. The Watford man was transporting the Holland family to his home when the accident occurred.

The wrecked automobile was thrown against a fence at the side of the road. Mrs. Maas, who is 22 years of age, died instantly from concussion of the brain. The child is also suffering from concussion, and it is feared, will not recover. Dr. Graham of Bothwell was summoned. Coroner Stewart of Thamesville is to hold an inquest.

In places of Borneo, a wife will wear, day and night, a sword of her husband's while he is on head-hunting expeditions.

SIR AUSTEN CHAMBERLAIN LIKES CANADA IMMENSELY, PAYS VISIT TO ONTARIO

Canada's Status Is Not Worrying the Great English Statesman.

CAPITAL IN OTTAWA.

Refuses To Discuss Anything Relating To United States' Elections.

TORONTO, Nov. 8.—Canada's status in Empire Councils and elsewhere is not worrying Sir Austen Chamberlain, British Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, and present distinguished visitor in Toronto. And neither, for that matter, is the status of Britain herself, for Sir Austen said last night that the Capital of the British Empire might "tomorrow" be in Ottawa. "Tomorrow" an Imperial Parliament might sit in Ottawa. It would require a bit of legislation, that was all. But what—and this was the inference—did it matter?

Some day Mother England may send to Canada one of those austere, supercilious and standoffish statesmen which the Canadian is apt to think is the special product of the Old Land. But Sir Austen is not one of them. Neither was Baldwin, nor Amery, nor Lloyd George, nor Melchett, nor McDonald—one cannot recall one, in fact, true to the accepted type. Chamberlain—monocle and all—courteously dropped out of the parade of dignitaries following Premier Ferguson's dinner at the Parliament Buildings and submitted to an interview for the two or three minutes he could spare before hurrying to catch up again with His Excellency the Governor-General.

Accept Status

"I accept every word of the definition of Canadian status as expressed following the Imperial Conference," Sir Austen said on that that topic. "But I really think there is far less change than some of the participants—and I don't mean the Canadian representatives — though. For instance, no British staetsman for the past thirty years would ever have thought of interfering with Canadian legislation, whatever the right to do so might have been in theory."

And then has was asked if his view of the Empire structure was sufficiently broad as to visualize "tomorrow" a Canadian nation of one hundred millions "heading" of the Empire. And it was. The head of Empire might be anywhere. And Canada's limitless possibilities, which he has been discussing from the economic standpoint, he quickly conceded to include such momentous honor.

Impressed By Prosperity.

His impressions of present Canadian economic afafirs. One could not possibly travel within Canada, even as rapidly as he had been doing, he said, without being tremendously impressed with Canadian prosperity and the apparent contentment of the Canadian people. And Canada's future? Who could prophesy? A great future was assured. An illustrious future was quite within the grasp of the Canadian people.

One thing this great son of a great sire—he and Pitt were about the only two to overcome the handicap of having a distinguished father also in public life—would not discuss, and that was anything relating to the United States or other nations. But his refusal was so kindly, so apologetic, that the newspapermen asking them without the least expectation of answer felt sorry for having intruded. Rare regret that!

But this was the question and the answer: "The United States," Sir Austen was asked, "has just elected a Republican President and Administration with the almost certainty of impending tariff increases against Canada. Doe: that suggest anything to you in the way of opportunity for intra-Empire trade development?"

"Oh," he replied in an almost hurt tone, "I couldn't, simply couldn't, discus sanything relating to the United States. I couldn't do that."

And by this time the great man, with the weight of all Britain's foreign affairs on his slim shoulders, had caught up again with the dignitaries in the slow walk down the corridor, and the reporter to whom he was so courteoeus had not even the time politely to inquire as to his health—for which he now apologizes.

ROTHSTEIN SUCCUMBS WITHOUT TELLING NAME OF ASSAILANT

Dies of Wound Inflicted Sunday During Gun Duel.

CODE OF UNDERWORLD.

Police Believe Gambler Shot Because Refused To Pay Debts.

NEW YORK, November 8 (Canadian Press). — Arnold Rothstein, a worthy follower of such men as Dick Canfield and Honest John Kelly, died on Tuesday as he had lived, keeping his own council, refusing even to tell the name of the man who killed him.

At least, he didn't tell it to the authorities, although police believed he might have whispered it to some underworld crony; and on the theory that this was the case, they spread detectives along Broadway to watch for possible reprisals.

Rothstein died of a wound inflicted on Sunday night in a hotel to which he was summoned by telephone, the police are informed, to be given a verbal ultimatum that he must pay his gambling debts or take the punishment the underworld metes out to a welcher.

For Rothstein, who all his life, despite a somewhat unorthodox viewpoint on right and wrong in other matters, had considered gambling debts as debts of honor, had refused to pay. He refused because he believe that he had been trimmed in a "phoney" game, that marked cards had been used to beat him out of $200,000 in a game of "high spade" at $10,000 a hand.

Instead of paying he gave his I. O.U., which, because of his reputation, was good along Broadway as a certified cheque, and then he went to his reserved table at Lindy's restaurant and sent back word that he would never pay a cent, and that the card sharps who had thought to "take" him like in country cousin could "go bite themselves to death."

MILLBROOK WILL REGULATE TRAFFIC

Tax Collector's Report Shows $1,861 Yet To Be Collected in Village.

MILLBROOK, Nov. 8.—(Examiner Correspondence).— Communications were read at the council meeting on Monday night, from W. G. Russell and Sons, regarding improvement of Culvert in front of their property on King street, while work on the roadway is still under way, and from Orillia Board of Trade regarding changing date of Canadian National Exhibition. The Board asked that it be put on one week later to prolong season of tourist traffic which usually ceases when the Exhibition is over.

Similar communications are being sent to all municipal councils, concerted action to be taken by the Associated Boards of Trade. Councillor F. Stinson gave notice that he will introduce a by-law at next regular meeting of the council regarding regulation of traffic on streets of the municipality. King street has now been made a through street, since paving is practically completed, and the enforcement of speed limit of twenty miles an hour will become obligatory. Tax collector C. F. Harrington submitted a report showing total taxes from the village amounting to $13,287. The amount collected to date is $11,425, leaving a balance of only $1,861 to be paid.

The following accounts were ordered paid:—H. Nattress, $27.10; Howard Murney, $1; B. Raper, $3; J. Stephenson, $10.50; John Pitt, $13.35; W. J. Tremaine, $13.85; Walter Widdis, $22.75; William Budd $26.65; H. Lord, $25.62; Ivan Gray, $9.50; C. C. Garside, $2.50; Hydro Electric, town Hall current, $6.85; street lighting, $71.17; Millbrook Telephone Company; $9.80; James Donaldson, $3.75; Canadian Ingot Company, $47.87; S. Donnelly, $13.20.

All the members of the council were present at this meeting except Councillor Sayles, who has been granted three months' leave of absence, on account of removal to Toronto to reside.

WOMEN WILL PRESENT PLAY

Roseneath Women's Institute Plan Play and Announce Personnel.

(Examiner Correspondence)

ROSENEATH, Nov. 8.—The Women's Institute held their monthly meeting at the home of Mrs. William Arnolds. Mrs. Lily Turner, ex-president, took charge of the meeting in the absence of Mrs. Lottie Nichol, who is confined to her home through illness. Mrs. (Dr.) Hershey, reported that a play had been selected. The following committee will select the characters and date: Mrs. Hershey, Mrs. Crego, Misses Mary Braithwaite, Irene Brown and Jessie Johnston. Moved by Mrs. James A. Brown, seconded by Mrs. Robert Mouncey that Miss Annie Brown be appointed on the Sick Committee, to take the place of Mrs. Ingham, who has moved from the village. Mrs. Hershey and Mrs. Crego were asked to interview the school trustees in regard to hot lunches being given the pupils during the winter months.

Mrs. Turner asked for an alternative to go to the Women's Institute Convention, to be held in Belleville on November 15 and 16. Miss Elva Sandercock was elected. The program consisted of a comic story by Mrs. James Brown; a reading on "Temperance" by Mrs. Delbert Brisbin; a reading by Mrs. Orra Varcoe, entitled, "Nothing to do for Mother". Mrs. Marcena Davey gave an interesting and instructive talk about her trip to Western Canada during the summer. She described Banff, Alta Field and the beautiful Mount Stephen, the cliffs, canyons, waterfalls, mountain lakes and glaciers, boundless and beautiful, and other regions that she visited. A hearty vote of thanks was given Mrs. Davey and to Mrs. Arnold for her kind hospitality. A dainty lunch was served, and the usual social hour followed. The December meeting is reserved as "Grandmothers' Day" and will be held at the home of Mrs. Joseph Robbins.

Finishes Harvest.

On Monday morning, Albert Null was cutting his buckwheat and barley with the binder. This seems rather late in the season for cutting grain, although Mr. Null claims the grain is of good quality and will be all right for feed.

Arthur Fallis recently sold a three-year old colt to W. McLean of Lindsay, delivery being made by truck, and a driving horse for H. A. Fallis, was brought here on the return trip; the latter re-sold the horse to V.C. Lambert, who will probably use it for local delivery purposes.

Dr. Earnest Dean, of Toronto, was in town this week, the guest of his aunt, Miss Sarah Dean. The latter's many friends will regret to learn that her health has not been satisfactory in recent weeks.

H. A. Elsom was a visitor to Rochester this week, the guest of Howard Fallis, whose farm is located near that city.

QUICKER THAN WHISKY TO BREAK UP A COLD

Hospital Method Doctors Now Advise for Home Use Soon Ends Misery of Cold

A pleasant taste—almost instant relief—then the joy of waking up after a refreshing night's sleep without the misery and risk one takes by neglecting a cold during this changeable weather.

This, briefly, is the experience of numbers of people in Peterborough, Lindsay and vicinity. For doctors are advising home use of a hospital method that brings quick, sure relief.

E. H. Newman, for example, had neglected his cold in the hope it would clear up itself. Instead, it got worse and congestion had spread so in three days that he called his doctor, who advised Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, a compound of wild cherry, terpin-hydrate, etc., which is used treating even the most extreme hospital cases. In an hour or so the cold began to clear up. The feverish "achy" feeling disappeared and another day or so, the doctor report there was no trace of the cold.

Note: Other colds reported daily all certified by attending physicians.

Doctors find that this ho-pitt certified medicine penetrates an heals inflamed linings of the a passages. Absorbed by the syste it quickly drives out the cold fro nose passages, throat and chest.

Thirty-four of the city's 37 pumpers worked on the blaze for four hours to get it under control. A score of firemen were overcome from dense smoke, which poured out of warehouses, but no fatalities are reported.

GRAHAM PAIGE CARS ARE SOLD IN CITY

T. Ruth and Son Secure Agency For This Fine Automobile.

Thomas Ruth and Son of 184 Simcoe street, agents for Cockshutt Plow Company implements and Beach Foundry stoves, have been very fortunate in the last few weeks in securing the agency for the Graham Paige cars.

This car carries many new features, the most prominent being the 7-bearing crank shaft and the four speed ahead gears. The four speed ahead gears contain two high, one for power and the other for speed.

This car comes in two different sizes, the six and the eight. The six is divided into four types, the 610, 614, 619, and 629. There is only one type for the eight, the 835.

These cars have seven different body designs giving a prospective buyer a large field to pick from. Another striking feature about this car is the mechanical fuel pump doing away with the vacuum tank.

Nationalist Government Views Hoover As Friend

SHANGHAI, China, Nov. 8.—Herbert Hoover's election was enthusiastically received in the official circles of the Chinese Nationalist Government yesterday.

C. T. Wang, Foreign Minister, expressing the sentiments of his government, issued this statement:—

"China views the Republican party as a constant friend of China beginning as long ago as Hay's open door declaration which prevented the partition of China, Roosevelt's remission of the Boxer indemnity, the Washington conference action of Hughes and Harding, and Coolidge's opposition in 1927 to foreign armed intervention in China."

Limited is a Canadian company, founded in 1874, the month of March marking the 54th anniversary. The firm has branch warehouses and retail stores in practically every large Canadian city from coast to coast, and makes and sells more electric washers in Canada than all other companies combined, Canadian or foreign. Celebrating their 54th anniversary the company has just shipped a solid train load of hardware to the West. The train contained 35 carloads of Beatty goods, valued at $400,000, retail prices. It contained 5,880 pumps, 1,970 ladders, 18,000 feet of barn door track, 25,000 feet of hay track, and 61,600 feet of pipe. A special feature of this trainload was a shipment of 1,660 electric washing machines—the largest shipment of washers ever made in the British Empire.

TELL THEM THE TRUTH.

There are many widely different views as to Canada's needs in regard to immigration, but no matter what their opinions on that subject may be, Canadians generally should have no difficulty in agreeing with the statement of Hon. Peter Heenan, Federal Minister of Labor, that "the men and women who are brought to these shores should be given the fullest truthful information in regard to the conditions that prevail in this country."

Mr. Heenan is absolutely right.

Nothing could be more harmful than to give prospective settlers a false impression of what they might expect to find here.

The result of misrepresentation is inevitably advertising of the worst possible kind for Canada.

There is no justification, from any viewpoint, for deceiving those who are contemplating coming to Canada, and to do so leads to discontent and dissatisfaction that is reflected with unfortunate consequences in the countries from which they come.

The truth about Canada should be attractive enough to bring the right kind of settlers here, and every endeavor should be made to see that only the truth is told.

COMING AND GOING.

Premier Ferguson's announcement that there is to be no reduction in motor licenses, except in the case of "two purpose" vehicles, will be a disappointment to Ontario motorists.

It had been understood ever since the intimation was made that the gasoline tax was to be raised that the cost of licenses would be cut, and the news that while the tax is to go up the license fees are to remain the same as before, will not be received with wild outbursts of cheering in any part of the Province.

A slash in the licenses would have served as a sugar coating for the heavier gasoline tax pill, but evidently the pill will have to be swallowed without sugaring, "except by owners of cars that can be converted into small trucks, and they are to be placed in the same category as small passenger machines."

The Premier promises an explanation in a few days that will justify the Government's attitude on the question, doubtless pointing out that it is proposed to spend more next year on the highways program than can be taken care of by all motor taxes, even with an increased gasoline tax.

It will have to be a very plausible statement, however, if it is to overcome the disappointment experienced by motorists, who have been led to expect a slash in motor fees as some relief from the added cost of motoring as represented by a five-cent gasoline tax.

UNIFORM DRESS.

If Frank Dawson, member of the Board of Education, succeeds in getting anywhere with his suggestion in regard to uniform dress for the girls of the Peterborough Collegiate Institute, he will have earned the gratitude of hundreds of parents, who are finding the cost of having their children "keep up with the Jones" in the matter of school attire a heavy burden.

It is doubtless true, as Principal Kenner points out, that it is easy "to run into trouble if you try to tell the girls how to dress."

At the same time Mr. Dawson's suggestion of a middy and skirt costume for Collegiate girls is a common-sense proposal that should have plenty of support among parents and commend itself to many of the girls themselves.

If its adoption can be secured, it would be a contribution toward economy that would be decidedly welcome in many Peterborough homes.

Under present conditions, with an apparent tendency to vie in the matter of expensive raiment, more than one parent is finding the pace too hot, and even the hint of relief is undoubtedly welcome.

Uniform costumes that would not only be economical but would help to strengthen the school spirit, can surely be sold to the Collegiate girls if the attempt is earnestly made.

THE NIGHT CLASSES.

Figures as to the enrollment in the night classes at the Peterborough Collegiate Institute and Vocational School, showing 740 on the list, with an average attendance of 719, offer indisputable evidence that the recent extension was justified.

Evidently Peterborough's citizens see the opportunity that is offered by the night classes, and are taking advantage of a chance to study and develop.

It is characteristic of the present-day trend perhaps that the motor mechanics class is one of the largest in the list, but the interest in dress-making, necessitating nine classes to take care of an enrollment of 190, is perhaps a surprise.

Of especial interest is the fact that the class of new Canadians contains thirteen members, seven from Hungary, four from Lithuania and one each from Finland and Holland.

These new citizens will much more readily be assimilated by reason of their attendance at these classes, and the opportunity it gives them to learn the language of their adopted country.

The number taking advantage of the night school is a healthy sign, and must afford gratification to those who led the fight for more extensive educational facilities.

CHOOSE YOUR SITE.

It has been truly said that until Canadian municipalities get enthusiastic about aviation there will not be a very rapid growth of air mail routes, passenger and freight services, and so forth. Be it ever so humble there is no place like a landing field, and until these are available in considerable quantity there is neither safety nor wisdom in the establishment of a network of commercial air services.

Contrary to general opinion, these landing fields, which should be an immediate aim of every ambitious municipal council, are not expensive. Take for instance the town of Granby, P. Q., which at a total cost of $35,000 has installed a splendid little airport. Here is an example of less than 10,000 people who saw the opportunity of building for the future at very little cost for themselves, and who are being already well repaid for their investment.

This week at the Toronto Canadian Club, the Hon. William Finlayson, Minister of Lands and Forests in Ontario, apparently poured cold water on the efforts of local municipalities to establish landing fields, by intimating that Canada's air future lay chiefly in the use of hydroplanes and seaplanes which would utilize our rivers and lakes, rather than in the use of land machines.

This may be true in the wilds of Northern Ontario where the country is dotted with water bodies, but it does not apply to Canada as a whole. For one thing Canada's commercial air future must inevitably be of an international character, and already the United States aerial services are lapping over and connecting up with Canadian cities. These services are almost entirely operated by land machines, which means that Canada must be equipped with landing grounds if she is to reap material benefit therefrom.

Taking the broader view, therefore, the landing field is going to be very much in demand, and along the main lines of national communication is even now a vital necessity. They are not expensive, and a wise municipality will read the handwriting on the wall and will prepare for this great development while land is cheap and sites are easily available.—Financial Post.

FOR FIRM STAND ON RADIO.

Whatever the proposed Royal Commission on radio in Canada may find, the immediate need is for strong action on the part of the Government to protect the interests of this Dominion in the North American radio realm. Private interests in the United States are about to appropriate for themselves an unwarranted share of the available waves for broadcasting. Once they have established a vested interest in the radio waves, any readjustment to meet Canada's legitimate needs will be stubbornly resisted.

The available field for broadcasting in North America is divided into 91 channels or waves. The Federal Radio Commission at Washington has appropriated 74 of the waves for the exclusive use of United States stations. Canada has been conceded only six exclusive waves, while the remaining eleven waves have been left to be shared by low-power stations in both countries. The shared waves are useless except for small stations with a very limited range of broadcasting. It is more than a year ago since the Dominion did protest against the action of the Washington authorities to arrogate to themselves the right to divide the radio waves in any such manner. Before President Coolidge appointed the Federal Radio Commission last year, the Dominion sent officials to Washington to take up the question of an agreement for the division of available waves between Canada and the United States on an equitable basis. They were met, in effect, with the view that the waves should be apportioned on the present basis of population. Naturally, Canada declined to enter into any such agreement. The safeguarding of provincial rights alone made it necessary that the Dominion should have more than six available waves. The Federal Radio Commission has gone ahead, however, without any treaty with Canada to govern the apportionment of waves.

On the eleventh of this month, a complete reallocation of radio waves throughout the United States will be put into effect by the Federal Radio Commission. The Washington authorities propose to issue licenses to 621 American stations to broadcast on certain waves. Canada is being left to make the best of it with six exclusive waves. Quite clearly, before this vested interest is established, it is the duty of the Dominion to register a more vigorous protest than has so far been made. Canada's experience with the diversion of the lake water through the Chicago drainage canal should be sufficient warning to the Dominion to act promptly to safeguard Canadian interests in the radio broadcasting realm.

The United States Radio Commission is assuming altogether too much authority over North America. The equitable division of the radio waves has become an issue to be dealt with by an international tribunal. It should be referred to the International Joint Commission.

Recently the United States called upon the International Joint Commission to deal with the situation caused by the outpouring of fumes from the Trail smelter into adjacent territory in the State of Washington. The outpouring of broadcasting from numerous United States stations into Canada is becoming a question of concern to many Canadian people. Intelligent action at an early date to settle this issue amicably, particularly before vested interests are established in an undue proportion of waves on the United States side, may save both countries from much undesirable friction.

It can be demonstrated that the United States could be adequately served with far less than 74 exclusive waves, while the radio service from Canadian stations to the Canadian public cannot be adequately given with only six exclusive waves. Confidence in the justice of Canada's case can be best expressed by inviting the United States to join in submitting the issue to the International Joint Commission.—Hamilton Spectator.

Anyway Governor Al Smith won the sidewalks of New York.

Among the defeated candidates on Tuesday will be noticed the name of Major Hoople. Evidently politics in his district has been debunked.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE.

MONTREAL, Que., November 8 (Canadian Press)— The export trade in rain here yesterday was fair and sales of wheat, oats and barley were made for December-January shipment.

Owing to the decline in wheat futures at Winnipeg a weaker feeling developed in the local market for cash grades and prices were reduced one cent per bushel. A moderate trade was done. Manitoba No. 6 wheat sold at 97½c, and feed wheat at 92½c per bushel.

There was no actual change in prices for spring wheat flour, but the undertone was easier in sympathy with the decline in contract grades of wheat in the Winnipeg market. The demand continued good. Winter wheat flour was stead under a good demand.

Prices for all lines of millfeed were fully maintained under a good inquiry. Standard grades of rolled oats were firm.

A feature of the local egg trade was the stronger feeling that developed for fresh extras, and prices were marked up three cents per dozen, which was attributed to the increasing scarcity of this grade and

BEAUTY AND TRUTH

Beauty, truth and goodness are not obsolete; they spring eternal in the breast of man; they are as indigenous in Massachusetts as in Tuscany or the Isles of Greece. And that Eternal Spirit, whose triple rays they are, moulds from them for ever for His mortal child, images to remind Him of the Infinite and fair.—R.W. Emerson.

GOD'S MINUTE.

Wherefore laying aside all malice, and all guile, and hypocrisies, and envies, and all evil speakings, as newborn babes, desire the sincere milk of the word, that ye may grow thereby.—1 Peter 2:1-2.

O Lord our God, we desire to thank Thee sincerely for Thy never-failing love and mercy unto us. For all the great temporal blessings, and especially for the gift of Jesus Christ our Saviour, we bless and praise Thy Holy Name.

Cleanse our hearts, we beseech Thee, from all unrighteousness, and forgive wherein we have failed to do Thy will. Grant unto us the strength we need to overcome temptation, and to be brave and cheerful amid the trials and sorrows of life. May the light of Thy truth shine into our hearts, dispelling the darkness of fear and unbelief.

Help us, O Lord, to be more generous in our judgment of others. May Thy wondrous love fill and flood our hearts, making us to be kind and sympathetic in our treatment of those whose lives we touch day by day. We pray that Thy blessing may descend upon the people of all lands. May the day soon come when the good news of salvation shall have been made known to all mankind. Through Jesus Christ our Lord. New Harmony in gayest Colors!

A new and extraordinary musical instrument clothed with a beauty as unusual as the music of the new Orthophonic Victrola itself

In performance, this instrument has no peer in its field. In design, it is new as tomorrow, yet it embodies design principles two hundred years old. Inspired by the recent Exposition des Arts Decoratifs in Paris,—color is its keynote, rich vibrant and harmonious color. Newspaper illustration fails utterly to convey its beauty—you must see it.

In Orthophonic tone quality Orthophonic Victrola 8-36 is approached only by the well-known "Credenza" model, which made the Orthophonic famous overnight! The Victor-controlled principle of "Matched Impedance" or "Smooth Flow of Sound" is of course, embodied in this new instrument. Go into any His Master's Voice dealers and compare it with your idea of the old style talking machine.

The new Orthophonic Victrola is made in a range of beautiful models, artistically designed in fine walnut or mahogany. Electrically driven, if you wish, at slight additional cost. All instruments are self stopping. Prices from $1400 down to as low as $115. On convenient payments at all His Master's Voice dealers.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, November 8 (Canadian Press). — Big world supplies of wheat, together with auspicious wheat crop prospects in Argentina, governed the wheat market yesterday, and election news cut no apparent figure. The world's available stock of wheat was 11,849,000 bushels larger than a week go, and totalled 357,407,300 bushels compared with 250,425,000 bushels at this time last year.

Closing quotations on wheat were unsteady, 1⅝c to 1¾c higher to 2¼c net lower. Corn finished at ⅛c to ⅝c advance, oats ⅛c to ¼c off, and provisions varying from 2c setback to a rise of 20c.

Liquidating sales on the part of holders of wheat future deliveries, December in particular, began soon after wheat trading started. In contrast with New York stocks, which advanced on account of election results, wheat values commenced with an uncertain trend, but soon went downgrade. Early selling of wheat was generally associated with Liverpool quotations lower than expected, and with Argentine despatches reporting improvement of the wheat crop outlook, especially news that Argentine rust damage advices were untrue. Another bearish factor was word that although export sales of wheat on Tuesday from North America aggregated 1,000,000 bushels chiefly Canadian. European demand yesterday for wheat was again slack.

Houses with connections northwest led the selling which pressed wheat values down. Little buying support developed, except such as came from previous sellers and from resting orders to purchase on declines. With continued big receipts of wheat both in Canada and in this country as well, and with indications pointing to a disposition at Missouri River points to move out wheat to Chicago so as to make room for corn, there were but few buying incentives, and price rallies were only fractional.

Corn displayed notable resistance to selling pressure. One reason was prevailing wet weather, unfavorable for husking and for movement of new corn. Moreover, corn receipts yesterday were relatively small, only 199 cars arriving in Chicago against 312 cars a week ago. There was also talk current of agitation for a prohibitive tariff against corn from Argentina. Corn imported into the United States has more effect on the market than a couple of hundred million bushels extra of domestic corn on farms. Oats were unsettled, influenced by wheat. For the most part, provisions held about steady.

BUTTER AND EGGS.

TORONTO, Nov. 8.— A moderate amount of business was done in the spot butter market yesterday, and prices were being well maintained at late advances. In a jobbing way small lots of finest creamery for immediate requirements were turned over at 40 to 40½c. per lb., with undergrades a cent a pound less.

Owing to the continuing scarcity of fresh eggs, the local market is strong, and large dealers have again advanced their prices to country shippers and to the retail trade. Demand is good, and, on account of the shortage of fresh eggs, there has been a good demand for storage grades this week. Dealers are now quoting country shippers extras, 53c. to 75c.; firsts, 48c. to 53c.; seconds, 32c. to 35c.; pullet extras, 42c. for undergraded eggs, delivered, cases returned. Fresh prices to retailers range from 63c. to 65c. loose, for extras; firsts, 58c. to 60c.; seconds, 37c. to 40c.; pullet extras, 50c.

Cheese is quiet and dealers report very little improvement from the buying end. Nominal quotations for the commodity remain steady at from 21½c. to 22c. per lb., for No. 1 large, colored, paraffined and Government graded, delivered basis. There has been an improvement in cable demand at seaboard this week ,also from spot buyers, and prices have moved to slightly lower levels.

HALLOWE'EN PARTIES.

(Examiner Correspondence.

APSLEY, Nov. 8.—The annual masquerade party which is recognized as the community social event of the year was held in the Parish Hall on Friday evening, and proved that it has lost none of its popularity, though the onlookers exceeded in number those in fancy costume. The character costumes were excellent and the judges, Mesdames Barnes, White and Windsor, had a difficult task in awarding the prizes, the decision in each class resting upon a minor difference that would have been unnoticable to an ordinary observer, but which demonstrated the excellence and thoroughness of their judgment. The prize winners were: Best fancy costume, ladies, Miss Cicely Spence as a Turkish lady. Best gents' fancy costume, George Kilborn, cowboy costume made from covers of "Life" magazine. Best comic, Charles Smith as Charlie Chaplin. Other characters were: Pierettes, Miss Montgomery, Miss Byers, Miss O'Brien; Queen of the May, Miss Eva Tucker; Indian maid, Miss Mary Fitzsimmons; Turkish lady, Mrs. G. Kilborn; Gypsy, Miss Vera Nesbitt; clown, Miss Maggie Whitmore; Miss Canada, Miss Helen Lean; pirates, Herb Lean, Phil Willis; Chinaman, Tom Lean. A 'hot dog' supper was served at midnight, and the party broke up at one-thirty, after a very enjoyable time spent in round dancing and the old-fashioned 'squares' which still retain their popularity in this district.

LAKEFIELD, Nov. 8 (Examiner Correspondence). — On Wednesday evening, Hallowe'en night, the annual children's Hallowe'en party was held in the basement of the Regent Street Church. The children, who were all under fourteen, numbered more than fifty and came in fancy costumes and frolicked about in the Hallowe'en style. The costumes were varied and the judges found it difficult to decide on which were most deserving of the prizes. Madeline Abrams, as Little Red Riding Hood, won the prize for the best and most complete single costume, and the prize for the best pair was awarded to June and Bernard Burrows, who were dressed as "British Cubs."

A very good program was given by the children, with Rev. S. A. Kemp in the chair. Duet, Phyllis and Irwin Charlton; recitation, Harry Spence; recitation, Thelma Hendren; song, Betty Brown; dialogue, "The Little Lame Prince"; recitation, Vivian Hendren; recitation, Phyllis Webster; song, Thelma Bullock; piano solo, Thelma Hendren; duet, Eva Hendren and Ina Pearson; solo, Helen Miles; play, "The Fire Spirit."

Dorothy Sutton played for the march and also for the singers.

The remainder of the evening was spent in games which children love, and about 9.30 refreshments were served and the little folks, tired but happy were conveyed to their homes.

Mr. and Mrs. Kemp were assisted by some of the ladies of the congregation, and the older girls assisted in serving refreshments

Hallowe'en Tea

The Woman's Missionary Society of the Presbyterian Church held a successful Hallowe'en tea in Hendren's store, Queen street, on Wednesday last. Besides afternoon tea, there was a sale of fancy articles and home cooking and candy, which found ready sale. A specialty in the home cooking department was a fine collection of pumpkin pies (real Hallowe'en fare) which were eagerly snapped up.

The store was attractively decorated with the insignia of Hallowe'en, orange and black forming the color scheme.

Those in charge were Mrs. (Rev.) J. Ross, Mrs. J. W. Ridpath (president of the W.M.S.), Mrs. T. W. Chaplin, Mrs. A Fairbairn, Mrs. G. Preston, Mrs Thomson, Mrs. J. C. Smith, Mrs. Robert Garbutt, Mrs. Alex. Graham, Mrs. J. M. Simpson, Mrs. Richard White, Misses A. Miller, S. Preston, M. Tanner, and A. McKibbin.

COSMOS CLUB

MILLBROOK, Nov. 8 (Examiner Correspondence).—Prize winners at the Hallowe'en masquerade dance, under the auspices of the Cosmos Clubs, were: Best Hallowe'en costume, Miss Thelma Ball; best fancy dress, lady, Mrs. Miller of Peterborough; best fancy dress, gentlemen, Mr. Harold Hunter, Port Hope; best comic outfit, men's Gordon Maniece, Peterborough. The judges were Messrs B. B. Dawson, Doubias Sheppard, and Harold Jordon.

The dance was held in the Town Hall, and was well attended; the Stewart-Moncrief orchestra provided the music, and the abundant supper was provided by the ladies, the committee in charge looking after the service. The general comment was to the effect that a thoroughly good time was enjoyed by all.

WANTS STREET CARS BACK.

To the Editor of The Examiner:
Dear Sir:

As I am a visitor to this big city for a few days, I thought I would drop a few lines of congratulation on your lovely accommodations. As I am from a large city, and used to all sorts of accommodations, I was lost in my attempt to find my way around, as I missed a taxi, no bus to help, or street cars and was forced to walk. This is a good town for a fleshy person and the recipe that goes along is, walk, walk, walk. I will reduce a pound a day with the accommodations that we have here. Peterborough must be sick to lose the cars of old.

Yours truly,
AUNT JEMIMA.

P.S. Thanking you for your little space; good for old people especially.

Johnston Sisters Leaving Lakefield For Detroit—Presentations Made.

EARLY SERVICES.

(Examiner Correspondence)

LAKEFIELD, Nov. 8—Following the Benediction service St. Paul's choir gathered at the home of Captain and Mrs. James Johnston on Thursday evening last, to bid good bye to Misses Josephine and Marie Allen, who are leaving the village to join their brothers in Detroit. Both young ladies have been members of the choir for several years, possessing voices of especially good quality and being unremitting in their attendance at the services of the church. Their departure leaves a gap in the ranks which it will be difficult to fill and regret was expressed on every hand.

Miss Margaret Bissonette read an address expressing the feelings of the choir, sympathy in their recent bereavement, regret at the family leaving the village and expressing the hope that in the not far distant future Lakefield would again be home to the Allen family and a hearty welcome will be waiting for them. Miss Doreen Johnston and Josephine White presented the Misses Allen with a beautiful Rosary.

Miss Josephine Allen replied and in thanking her friends assured them of her heartfelt appreciation of the gift and also of the many kindnesses shown them.

Refreshments were served and the remainder of the evening was given over to music and conversation.

The World's Highest Paid Short Story Writer

Author of "Humoresque", "A President Is Born"

The evening had not yet begun! The gentleman and the young lady were not entertained? It took some time for the fantastic idea to percolate through Juliette's brilliantly-hued head, that here was father and daughter. They might so easily have been—anything!

THE drama that was being enacted in the lives of Rodman Wenninger and his daughter Arline was one by no means uncommon. But what made it particularly poignant, according to those particularly familiar with the situation, was the fact that Arline and Arline's dead mother were the kind of women they were, and the fact that the Griswold woman was the kind of woman she was.

How was it possible, they puzzled, for the man who had been married to Ethel Wenninger, and the man who was father to Arline Wenninger, to be attracted to a person of the Juliette Griswold type?

Ethel had been as fair and fragile as the lilies she held across her breast, in her all too premature death. Arline was her mother's prototype in fragility, in lovely pallor, and even in lovelier delicacy of mind and fibre.

Juliette Griswold conducted a specialty shop of hosiery and exclusive grade lingerie by day, and by night was "hostess" in a night club.

The situation was one of those anachronistic ones which passeth understanding. Juliette, about forty, over-weight, with dyed red hair that glittered, and one of those fog-horn voices that are supposed to indicate great vitality, was the last person in the world, his friends supposed, who could fascinate Wenninger. Wenninger was outstandingly, a fastidious person. Aside from the fact that his first wife and his lovely daughter bore that out impeccably, his entire conduct of life was that of a man of taste, reticence, effete elegance.

The Griswold woman fell like a thunderbolt into the circle of his household and his friends. His servants, all of them of years' standing, who had been perfectly trained under the fine hand of the first Mrs. Wenninger, could scarcely believe the evidence of their eyes. His daughter, who was slow to see it happening, when once she did begin to take it in, did so in the dazed staring manner of a sleep walker.

Wenninger made no half-gesture. He first clapped eyes on Juliette slightly a year after Ethel's death, at the dancing club where he had taken Arline to try to pull them both out of the long slough of grief that had engulfed them. Wenninger danced with grace and distinction. It was Arline's first visit to a cabaret. Her father laughingly permitted her to drink, through wry lips, half her tumbler of champagne, and just as they were about to leave, after two dances and a bit of the cabaret, the hostess of the evening appeared at their table, concerned over their untimely departure.

Wenninger was forced back into his chair for another round of champagne. Rather against his desire, a gigolo was brought up for Arline and Juliette and Wenninger took the floor together.

It was the swift beginning. Four and five times a week thereafter Wenninger dined at the night club. Always with Arline. He had never left her alone since the death of her mother. He did not begin to do so now. Night after night, silent, except speaking when spoken to, unsmiling, except when smiled upon, Arline sat beside her father and the club hostess, caught in the vise of a situation that was pinching the very heart of her. Night after night, while Juliette Griswold battered, by her very presence and personality, the delicate memory of the woman who had been wife to Griswold and mother to Arline, she sat beside the night club table, locked in misery, defeated in spirit. Ashamed.

But not so with Wenninger. He was honest, he was above-board, he was frank in his infatuation. "I like that woman, Arline. She is honestly what she is. She is a relief after all the inhibited pretentious people we know. She's refreshing. Let's go down to the club for dinner and dance a bit. You don't mind that patent leather gigolo, do you? Griswold says he's a clean fellow. There's nobody much home, but he's talented in the feet. That's all we need worry about."

Arline, whether by studied plan of procedure or prompted by a dumb kind of misery, did not protest. She sat beside the pair, listened to their patter, sometimes so amazingly coarse that she regarded her father as if she had never seen him before, sometimes just puerile and stupid. Everything except the cultured Wenninger who had been husband to Ethel, seemed to be called to the surface by Griswold. It was as absurd as it was both comical and terrible, to behold him acting the trained bear to Griswold's jewelled whip-hand. Often, in the midst of hilarity, as she was obliged to sit by and behold, tears of acute mortification would spring to Arline's eyes, that it was all she could do not to rush from the scene in hysterics.

Of course it took no undue astuteness on the part of Griswold to sense this. The subject of his daughter had never been discussed between her and Wenninger. There were certain territories her instincts told her were closed to even her, where Wenninger was concerned. She had once, out of overwhelming curiosity, asked him to show her a photograph of his first wife. He had not replied to her question. She had the wit not to repeat it. In a dull way, she harbored resentment toward Arline, whose quiet beauty was nondescript to her, for being responsible for the something in Wenninger that had enabled him to slight her when she asked to see the portrait of Ethel.

She addressed Arline good-naturedly in the loud, hoarse manner she had and sent her stockings and lingerie from her shop. But her general manner was one of the assurance of conquest.

And conquest it was. Wenninger was flounderingly in love. He added emeralds and canary diamonds to Griswold's collection of gemmed bracelets. He gave her a French town-car and appeared with her at public functions of both social and professional nature. His friends criticized him, and in one or two cases his invitation was so worded as to carefully include only Wenninger and Arline. He did not attend those functions.

The time came when Arline was forced to admit, even to herself, that from everything he intimated and acted, Wenninger was going to marry Griswold.

He had not yet discussed the subject with his daughter, but time and time again had perilously approached it, only to shy back as if in nervous fear.

Poor Arline, she was too frail to combat her father in this. She could only suffer in the silent depths of her excruciating sorrow, and hope and even pray.

There was a picture of Ethel Wenninger, taken in her wedding gown, which Arline treasured. The delicate beauty of her mother, the drenching purity of her eyes, the lovely pallor of the old ivory satin as it flowed around the lovelier pallor of her face; made this old photograph one of sacred beauty to Arline. To her it was her mother in life, at her spiritual loveliest; to her it was her mother in death, as she had looked in the ivory colored casket that held her body in its last hours above the earth she had so graced.

Arline prayed to this picture, cried to it, supplicated, for help for her father. Ethel in her purity, help Wenninger in his madness.

The day that Wenninger finally scraped up the courage to tell his daughter of his intentions to marry Griswold and introduce her into his home he came resolutely from his office with that avowed purpose in his heart. A heart, be it admitted, that was aching for the pain he was about to inflict upon this child who was dear to him.

It was mid-afternoon, and a servant informed him that he would find his daughter in a small canary-colored boudoir that was exclusively hers. When he entered, a strange thing happened. So strange that Wenninger's limbs began to tremble under him so that he actually tottered.

Why, that was Ethel lying across the bed there! Ethel as he remembered her in her wedding gown; Ethel as he remembered her in her casket. Beautiful, spiritual Ethel, with the cream of the goodness of life in her face.

That was Ethel!

Actually, of course, it was Arline, who had fallen asleep with the tears wet on her cheeks and the photograph of her mother clutched in her tightly-closed hand.

One of Arline's tears had wetted the face of her mother.

Ethel and Arline were weeping for Wenninger, and Wenninger had been deafened by the croakings of Griswold.

Wenninger did not tell Arline what he had come to tell her.

He told her of plans for a trip around the world. The change of plan cost him half a million dollars, which was the one sure way to placate Griswold. Cheap, said his friends, at any price.

Arline and her father are in the sixth harmonious month of vagabonding around the beauty places of the world. The bloom that was Ethel's at her best, is Arline's now.

Wenninger, looking back, regards the [illegible] with Griswold as a brief and grotesque [illegible]

Y.M.C.A. HAS SPECIAL CLASS

Young Farmers of District Have Advantages of Y.M.C.A. On Saturday Night.

BIG SUCCESS.

The young farmers in the district surrounding the city have a special gym class at the Y.M.C.A. Beginning late in the fall and lasting all winter these men on Saturday night at nine o'clock step out on the gym floor for games, physical training and then down for a hot shower. This class for young farmers is unique in "Y" programs. No other Y. M. C. A. in Canada has one. The local class has been such a big success that it has aroused the interest of the "Y" council and it will likely be adopted into the schedule of every "Y" in small cities.

"This class grew out of the need for the young farmers to have some place to meet their friends and have a social time when they come into town on Saturday nights," said Fred McNeely, boys' secretary of the Y.M. C.A., in explaining the purpose of the class. "These chaps now come in to the "Y", meet the fellows whom they are interested in, have a cat, go into gym, if they feel like it, or play pool, bowl or listen to the radio. They all have a good hot shower," continued Mr. McNeely.

The class has grown from a small handful until now it has a membership of about thirty-five and an average attendance of twenty-eight. Last year they took a keen interest in basketball, making up in sheer pep and go what they lacked in skill and science.

ESKIMOS BECOMING MODERNIZED

Missionary returns from trip of inspection. With the advent of Anglican missionaries among their tribes, Eskimos of the western Arctic district are rapidly discarding the use of igloo snow houses and whale blubber stone lamps in favor of modern tents, and the use of gasoline for illumination. Improved living condition has greatly lessened the terrors of the long Arctic, who has just returned from a influenza still takes a heavy toll of human life because of the lack of medical treatment. Picture No. 1 shows a typical Eskimo young man wearing his winter outfit. No. 2 shows Rev. A. L. Fleming, archdeacon of the Artic, who has just returned from a survey of Church of England missions in the far north. No. 3 shows an Eskimo mother with her two children. PASTOR ADDRESSES LADIES' AID SOCIETY

Rev. Mr. Todd Speaks at Meeting of George Street Church Society.

The regular monthly meeting of the Ladies' Aid Society of George Street United Church was held in the Board Room on Tuesday afternoon. Mrs. Hetherington, the vice-president, occupied the chair, and opened the meeting with prayer. Mrs. (Dr.) Harvey, who took charge of the devotional period, called on Mrs. McMillan for a Bible reading. The hymns, "Take time to be holy" and "Jesus keep me near the cross," were sung with the thought of United Church Week in mind. Mrs. Knox led in prayer. The secretary, Mrs. Staples, read the minutes of the last meeting and Mrs. Oke, treasurer, read her report, showing a balance in the bank of $309.44. Seven letters of appreciation and thanks to the society were read by the corresponding secretary, Miss Elliott. The standing committees reported — Mrs. Stubbs, Visiting, Mrs. Carruthers, Parsonage, Miss Higgins, Lookout, Mrs. Shortly, Pantry, and Miss Morrow, Flowers. The twelve convenors of the Festival of the Months, to be held November 29th and 30th, told of progress in preparations. A fowl supper would be served each evening.

Easy to Live With.

Rev. Mr. Todd then addressed the meeting, taking for his subject, "Easy to Live With." The article, written under that heading, in a magazine, had drawn the attention of the speaker, and he thought some of the reasons worthy of consideration. It had grown from the inquiry, "How are you?" The happy answer "Betty is easy to live with," sent the writer out on the street to inquire of those he met, "How is your home life?" The iceman, the grocer, the banker, the editor, the doctor, the druggist, and the school teacher each told the reason his wife made his home a happy place. Each answer differed from the other, yet after all, unselfishness was the keynote of everyone. The speaker emphasized the necessity of giving time and thought to this business of living with others, for happy homes influence the community. Mr. Todd said the happiest moments of his life were those when he was able to bring pleasure to others. "So long," said the speaker, "as our churches and our Ladies' Aid Societies provide avenues and means of developing unselfishness of character so long will we have good citizenship." Miss Margaret Dickson sang a delightful solo, with Mrs. Green at the piano.

Mrs. Harvey thanked the speaker and soloists, after which Mrs. Stubbs closed the meeting with prayer.

SIMPLE TRICKS IN MAGIC
by JACK MULHALL

Featured with Dorothy Mackaill in "Lady Be Good," a First National Picture

—The Restored Paper Napkin. Exaggerated view showing how the concealed napkin is removed from bend of elbow in act of pulling up sleeve. The move is masked by right fingers.

Exhibit a paper napkin and show hands empty. Then tear the napkin into strips and roll them into a tight wad. After a few appropriate passes, open the napkin which will be found fully restored.

This is an excellent trick but needs a bit of practice. Before starting the trick conceal a duplicate napkin rolled into a compact ball, in the fold of left coat sleeve at elbow. You will have to keep this arm bent, so you enter with the napkin held outspread between thumbs and fingers of either hand.

Tear it into strips and roll into a ball. Then pull up right sleeve, with left hand, catching the fold at inner side of elbow. Do same for left sleeve and in doing this, secure the balled up napkin. You simply switch the two balls of paper and unroll the complete one. Then roll it up carelessly with the torn packet and with equal carelessness drop them both into your pocket.

Chicago, Nov. 8.—The male population of the Illinois corn belt along the Vermilian river are all pretty good cooks. Board of Works.

That with reference to the letter from Border Transit, Limited, saying they had been notified by the Utilities Commission that it would cost $125 to move a hydrant from in front of their garage on Hunter Street, and that they had left the extra buses here, but if they could not store them they would not have them here to use in rush times, recommend that the Mayor and the chairman of this board see the Utilities Commission and make the best arrangement they can to have the hydrant moved.

We referred to the city engineer, for a report, the letter from Border Transit, Limited, in regard to a truck which they said they had brought here on the understanding that they would get some work for it from the city.

We recommend that as the Park Street drain south of Lansdowne Street is blocking the drain in the city and injuring the De Laval Co. property, and it will take time to get the body or bodies responsible for the drain to act, the city engineer be directed, without prejudice, to clean out the drain for the present, and that the Council of North Monaghan and the Suburban Area Commission be informed of this action.

We recommend that notice be given of the intention of the council to construct a sewer as a local improvement on Rogers Street from the end of the sewer south of Hunter Street East to the end of the sewer north of Robinson Street under section 8 of the Local Improvement Act.

Your board received the following tenders for snow removal during the coming season:

District No. 2.—W. J. Stinson, $240; M. W. Bebee, $220.

District No. 3.—Geo. Meharry, $200; A. Deal, $200; Thos. Flannery, $188.

District No. 6.—H. Moncrief, $225.

District No. 7.—J. Conroy, $100; R. Mitchell, $149.

District No. 8.—M. W. Bebee, $140; B. Revoy, $145; R. Mitchell, $144.

We recommend that the tenders of the following be accepted: District No. 2, M. W. Bebee; District No. 3, A. Deal; District No. 4, J. H. Bennett; District No. 5, W. J. Collins; District No. 6, H. Moncrief; District No. 7, R. Mitchell, and District No. 8, R. Mitchell.

We recommend that the city engineer advertise for tenders for the machinery required for the addition to the Sewage Disposal Plant.

We recommend that the Mayor be requested to endeavor to arrange with F. D. Webster to complete his report on the drainage in the southwest part of the city and to the river.

We recommend that the clerk write to those who have gasoline-pumps on the streets in the area from which they were ordered to be removed and notify them that the pumps must be removed within ten days or legal action will be taken in the matter, except the Gillespie garage and V. M. Eastwood, who are preparing to remove their pumps.

We recommend that the chairman of the Parks Committee be authorized to have two hundred loads of filling placed on Confederation Square to level the ground in the square.

We recommend that the city engineer be instructed to notify those who have not paid their license fee for signs that they must do so within ten days, and if they do not comply with the notices that the city solicitor be instructed to take action against them.

We recommend that the chairman of the Parks Committee be authorized to order shrubbery for Confederation Square to be ready for the spring.

REV. PEDLEY ADDRESSES BIG AUDIENCE

St. James' Church Was Filled To Capacity Last Night To Hear Speaker.

UNITED CHURCH WEEK.

Minister Takes Text From Nehemiah Regarding Return of Children of Israel.

Last night St. James' United church was filled to capacity to hear the Rev. J. W. Pedley give one of the most interesting sermons heard in Peterborough in a long time. He took his text from the book of Nehemiah. "But they could not show their father's house nor their pedigree, whether they were of Israel or not." When the children of Israel came out of captivity they wished to make a record of the people. Parts of this record are found in the books of Ezra and Nehemiah where the text is. These people then were waifs, strays and wanderers who did not know a thing about themselves. Nowadays so many people are like that, some may be aristocrats, but we belong to the great multitude. We know who our fathers and mothers are and who our grandparents are, but beyond that we do not know what we may find. When Christ was on earth He was touched with a feeling of passion and a yearning spirit for the great multitude and was not indifferent to any individual. This multitude gripped him even though He did not know anything about them.

Found in Great Men

This spirit is found in such great men as John Wesley who left Oxford to go and speak to the multitude on the moors of England and also David Livingstone who always had to go back to Africa to preach to the blacks. Abraham Lincoln was also another of these great men. There never yet has been a great humanitarian but who has not eventually responded to the great multitude. Everywhere one goes there is the question of families, the upper and lower classes. In England there is that famous book known as Burke's peerage, where all the people of class are registered, but this is only a ripple on the surface of life. It was not the aristocrats who made Great Britain great but it was the great multitude. It was the great multitude that made France what it is to-day. People know nothing whatever of their ancestry and so they are doing good by making an ancestry although hereditory does not matter much.

Result of Experience

"Many of the sayings of a community are the result of experience. The finest things are not where they are expected. The great men of the world are absolutely inexplicable and do not live up to the laws of hereditary take for example the three famous preachers, Spurgeon, Joseph Parker and Henry Ward Breacher. These famous men were never known of till they started to preach to the great multitude.

Parker was a blacksmith until he started to preach and he made his name through his wonderful personality which is after all the thing that counts. The real rulers of this world are all inexplicable and they must have commanding personality to get anywhere.

"There is nothing in the future that is fixed or rigid and we all have that something to look forward to. The babies of to-day are the leaders of to-morrow.

"The Jews wanted a Messiah, and when He came what did they do but despise Him because He did not have the qualifications that they wanter Him to have. Moses became a lawgiver to the world but he did not have any such qualifications.

"In the Kingdom of God nobility has no preference because the Glory of Christianity puts aside these artificial coverings and if your name is written there you will not receive a preference to anybody else whose name is there," concluded the speaker.

Other striking feature's of the program were the solos by Charles Leslie, and the community singing lead by Mr. Leslie.

Why We Do What We Do.

WHY WE CHANGE OUR MINDS

By Mehran K. Thomson, Ph.D.

(Author, The Springs of Human Action)

It is traditionally a woman's privilege to change her mind. As a matter of fact, we all do. A corpse, whether dead or alive, is the only one who never changes his mind.

In the presidential election campaign there occurred many changes before the final vote was cast. Some people switched back and forth a good many times and cast a ballot without really having a true conviction on the subject. They voted according to the most recent turn of mind, depending on some prejudice, something as trivial as the dislike for a candidate's shape of nose or color of hair or the absence of it altogether.

Sometimes we think we have experienced a change of mind when in reality we never had made up our minds in the first place. On other occasions we have only half made up our minds and hence change easily.

Mark Anthony in his funeral oration, familiar to every school boy, takes account of this principle. He keeps the people there by dangling Caesar's will as bait while he piles up accumulative evidence of a foul and undeserved murder. He knows that if the people are released too soon their ardor will cool at the first opposition and they will change their minds. But after listening to the evidence, climaxed by the will, which proves conclusively that Caesar was their friend they are ripe for revenge. Nothing can stop them. There is no changing of mind. Each opposition only adds fuel to their flaming vengeance.

Conversely, then, we change our minds more slowly if we have a strong conviction to begin with. The speed and ease with which we change our minds depend upon the amount of knowledge, conviction and devotion with which we hold a certain idea or principle.

Ordinarily we change our minds as the result of changed conditions, in the environment and in ourselves. Added knowledge brings about a change because we see the thing in a new light.

Life is in constant flux. Everything changes. Nothing stays put. The whole universe is dynamic. The change of mind is therefore the natural outcome of living and meeting the conditions of life. The remarkable thing is not that we change our minds, but rather that we do not change them often enough. Of all the changes that are constantly taking place around us, the change of mind is the most imperfect and backward through the force of habit and prejudice.

Why do you do what you do. Ask Dr. Thomson. Write care of this paper and send stamped, self-addressed envelope.

CRIMINOLOGIST IS SUED FOR DAMAGES

Dr. A. Langsner Faces $1,680 Action in Vancouver Supreme Court.

VANCAUVER, B.C., Nov. 8. — (Canadian Press)—Dr. A. Langsner, Vienna criminologist, is being sued by I. C. Gessner, described as a physician, for $680.00 for salary and travelling expenses and 1,000 damages for breach of contract. The action is proceeding here in Supreme Court.

The plaintiff alleges that he was employed by the defendant at Honolulu on May 3 last to assist the latter in lecture tours, investigations and theatrical performances. Following their arrival in Vancouver Gessner claims he was dismissed on July 16.

In his defence Langsner claims he was justified in dismissing Gessner. He alleges that Gessner represented to the Vancouver Medical Association that Langsner was engaged in the practice of medicine in British Columbia. Defendant also alleges that Gessner caused him trouble with immigration authorities.

Langsner has counter claimed for $450.00 for alleged care of and attention to Gessner at Honolulu and for unstated damages for Gessner's alleged neglect and refusal to complete his contract.

THE MIRROR OF THE MODE

By Mary Marshall.

Navy-blue georgette and taffeta silk are interestingly combined in this frock, the upper part of which is of the georgette and the lower part with appliqued triangles of taffeta.

Every season has its catchwords in fashion—that end by being bandied about rather carelessly without much regard for their original application. When a dressmaker or saleswoman doesn't know precisely what to say about the dress under consideration she uses these catchwords. So that practically every frock you see is said to possess the "new feminine effect" or else it is said to have the "dressmaker" touch or finish.

In the very nature of things most women's frocks are feminine and always have been—even the so-called mannish ensembles that were favored a few seasons ago. The new femininity I suppose refers to the tendency on the part of some of the designers to use more frills and furbelows. Longer skirts, more flaring skirts, slightly higher waistlines and more closely molded bodices—these characteristics are also pronounced "more feminine."

The dressmaker or couture touch should apply of course to the frock that looks as if it were made to order by a dressmaker. In actual fact this aspect is often found in frocks that are bought ready made and others that are made at home. Painstakingly made and carefully applied self-trimming gives this desired "couture" aspect. The home dressmaker is apt to make as simple a frock as possible and add finish by way of ready-made trimming.

The frock in the sketch, inspired by a new French model, possesses this "couture" effect—and yet it really was made by an amateur. The upper part is of georgette and the lower part of chiffon taffeta—both in navy blue. Triangles of the taffeta painstakingly turned under at the edges and neatly sewed to the georgette provide the fashionable couture finish.

MARION'S MAIL

Address correspondence to Marion, at The Examiner Office.

"Dear Marion:

I wish to thank you very much for previous help received and am glad if I can help your wonderful page by sending a recipe which is enclosed.

Can you tell me how to remove an old water stain from a varnished surface?

We are having a Hallowe'en party outside under a large shed which we intend decorating. I would be pleased indeed if you could send me some games that would take in a large number of persons, also hints on decorations.

Wishing you all success with your page, I thank you,

Angelina."

Thanks for the recipe, "Angelina." The helps have been sent you. As regards the water stain on varnish, I never experienced one that my furniture polish would not remove. If you mention it when writing again for helps I will tell you where I obtain the polish—of course I cannot use the name here or every other maker of furniture polish would be peeved!

Perhaps some neighbor has another and better idea?

"Dear Marion:

Thank you very much for the helps. I am sending the coupon for this week's. I hope to attend The Examiner party as I have heard a great deal about it.

What material do you think would be nice for a winter dress and what color would suit a red felt hat. I have dark hair and brown eyes. I am having quite a time to decide so I thought I would ask you.

Margaretta."

Birdsall.

I hope that you got to The Examiner Hallowe'en party, "Margaretta," because we surely had a good time.

For the winter dress I suggest tricotine or poiret twill, and navy trimmed with red. Beige would be nice, too, with touches of red.

Marion

1 egg
¼ cup butter
¾ cup brown sugar
1-3 cup seeded raisins
1 small teaspoon nutmeg or walnuts

Melt butter, add sugar and beaten egg, mix with 1 tablespoon of cream and bake in uncooked shells.

COCOANUT TARTS

(Contributed by E. A.)

1 cup cocoanut
½ cup white sugar
1 egg

Butter the size of an egg.

Beat all up and put teaspoon in each tart.

CHERRY SALAD

A change in salads that is pleasing consists of large canned cherries, pitted, and then stuffed with chopped English walnuts. Serve about 4 to a person, on crisp lettuce with a cream dressing. Garnish with strips of pimento.

THE WHATNOT

A Place for Little Bits of Everything of Local Interest

By MARION

I'M PROUD of my neighbors! Just wait till you see the splendid Armistice number to-morrow, and your part in it! I think I'm safe in saying this is probably the first time women have been called upon to contribute so extensively to an Armistice edition, and the result will be another triumph for Peterborough.

* * *

Some of the letters are pathetic; some are joyful; one or two are amusing—but all are interesting. The Women's Pages to-morrow will afford a real insight into what women thought and how they reacted on the first Armistice Day.

* * *

I'm encouraged by this success to look forward with anticipation to the Christmas number, to which I have asked you to contribute short stories on Christmas topics. There will be three cash prizes and others, for the best stories of 1,500 words or less.

* * *

When I was down cellar inspecting a neighbor's washing machine the other day my eye caught a very interesting record, and since there's a hint in it for every household, I'm passing it on.

* * *

The coal bins in this house are of smooth-finished lumber, and on the outside, in pencil, is recorded the date the furnace was started, the dates of purchases of coal and the quantities purchased. The record goes back many years, and gives information that is both interesting and valuable.

* * *

It is interesting because everyone wonders every year whether the fire is being lit sooner than usual, and every spring the family debates just when the fire was allowed to go out last year and the year before.

* * *

It is valuable because when selling a house it is important to be able to tell the prospective purchaser just how much fuel it takes to heat the house. This record does away with guesswork.

* * *

I think if I were a housekeeper I would take a great deal of satisfaction out of a simple record like that.

* * *

Do you get a thrill out of opening your mail? I do, a real big thrill.

Letters of all kinds come to my desk; one never knows whether the torn envelope will reveal a pleasure or a shock, a note of commendation or a calling-down.

You'll recall that when I started this column I mentioned the fact that writers seldom receive bouquets, but get lots of knocks. Let me whisper now that the old order has changed. I get so many nice letters that I can afford to smile at the others.

I think this conducting the Women's Page is the PLEASANTEST job!

If you would like to make one of the new shirred, crushed collars for your evening or afternoon wrap, please send me the coupon and I will send you this week's circular, giving a diagram pattern to show how to cut and make it—with a sketch showing its arrangement on one of the new wraps.

IN WOMAN'S REALM.

By JEANETTE.

Woman has a place everywhere. When the Graf Zeppelin made its trial voyage from Germany to America, the only woman passenger was Lady Drummond Hay. When the big dirigible passed over New York on its way to the hangar at Lakehurst, the inspiring sight was transferred to a design and printed on silk crepe. The commemorative pattern included a view of the Graf Zeppelin, from one side, a glimpse of the horizon behind it, and a sketch of the buildings directly beneath the airship. With this design on silk crepe, a frock was made and presented to Lady Drummond Hay. It was fashioned in the prevailing mode, with a rounded neckline, long tight sleeves and a hip-band from which fell a rippling side-panel. The entire frock was made of the printed crepe.

Although it seems a long way off to speak of spring styles, still the Fashion forecasts, as released in New York by leading stylists who base their predictions on Parisian prophecies, are interesting.

One item in these forecasts is the continuance of the uneven hemline which has become familiar on evening gowns, and its adoption for afternoon wear also.

Styles of more complicated design are spoken of for spring wear, in contrast to the slick, neat lines which are so favored at present. "A generally animated and complicated expression" is the way the fashion-sheets express this idea of more fussy clothing. Back fulnesses, circular treatment and loose panels will be used to develop this idea, which is following the line of more feminine apparel. The trend to simplicity and almost masculine treatment of women's clothing is swiftly passing into the discard. The clever authors of the "Horoscope" which daily appears in this paper have been prophesying for some time a return to daintier wear for women, and the styles follow the same trend.

A Princess type of bodice for evening gowns is favored in the new night club drama, "Tin Pan Alley," which opened on November 1st at the Biltmore Theatre in New York City. With a number of the scenes laid in the foyer of a Broadway night club, the majority of the gowns are naturally evening models.

Two of the leading feminine characters favor evening gowns which are typical of the season. Constance McKay wears a dress of pale green shaded transparent velvet, with the bodice quite long and molded, and the skirt in three shades of four tiers, each tier very circular and pulled up to a point at the left front.

Marcia Manning, another of the members of the cast, wears a velvet dress of pale mauve, also made with a tiered skirt.

There are several beaded evening gowns, exploiting a style note in which crystal beads are said to be replacing the ornamentation with straas, or imitation jewels, which has been a favorite for some time. White and pale tints are favorites, with pointed skirts in fluttery effects.

One of the satin gowns is of ruby color. It is cut with a front drape and low decolletage to the waistline opening to show an underbodice of white chiffon. Another red frock is of crepe, worn with a tailored mink coat and close-fitting cap of felt.

In a lecture given recently at the Brooklyn Museum by Mme. Helene Volka, fabric-fashion analyst, she says: "There are no style ideas today that can be said to be original—all our ideas may be traced back thousands of years, almost to the cave man."

In the course of this lecture, which was entitled "Extracting Fashion Through the Museum," Mme. Volka declared that Egypt and Greece were the richest sources for the evolution of style themes by the designers, in illustrating which she used several lantern sides. From the Greek, she pointed out the derivation of the peplum, the jabot and the massing of drapery. The up-in-front and dipping-back hemline so popular in modern evening gowns is traceable to the Egyptian costume, as is the flat backline with the massed front drapery and trimming. The Egyptian influence, she declared, has made a definite imprint in many other ways, even the modernistic line having its origin there in the elimination of non-essentials.

Mme. Volka placed great importance on the variation of accepted themes, stating that the French initiative was apparent in the adaptation of styles from former periods. She mentioned particularly Monsieur Rodier and his interest in American Indian basket designs, which are said to have inspired some of his fabric themes.

With the aid of costumes from the museum, placed about the stage, and others worn by students of the designing class of Pratt Institute, Mme. Volka called attention to the fashion details in vogue in past centuries, the varied treatments of which are seen in many of the present-day garments. The ensemble idea was an instance in point, a gown of green taffeta carrying out this idea by an evening bodice, an afternoon bodice and a short jacket all to be worn, as the occasion warranted, over the same skirt foundation.

Hose for ski-ing wear this winter show a double cuff effect. They are made in white wool in ribbed style, with a cuff at the top and at the ankle, done in a colored design.

A woman who is regarded as a fashion expert sounds a note of warning with regard to hose for evening wear. "Never wear hose in the evening that has a greenish cast," she says. "There should always be a tone of pink in evening hosiery. Gray tones, with a greenish cast, make a dark spot in the ensemble."

A current fashion magazine devoted to women's wear speaks of the vogue for cotton hose which characterizes at least one large city on this continent. In Peterborough, one seldom sees a pair of cotton hose, but this is what the publication says in this matter:

"Cotton stockings may never have made a man look twice at a girl, but in Kansas City, Mo., and adjacent trade centers, few seem to be aware of the fact.

"Last year, 4,198,632 dozen pairs of all-cotton stockings were worn in this territory by flappers from nine years up, as well as by their mothers and grandmothers. This figure comprises 48 per cent. of the total demand for stockings. The trade in question covers most of 14 states in the southwest, with a population of 21,000,000 and a purchasing power of over $10,000,000,000.

"Of all the cotton stockings worn, three per cent. are full-fashioned and the rest seamless. Most of the cotton goods are said to be worn by the rural population, which dons silk, rayon or lisle stockings when approaching the cities.

"The market for hosiery here is divided into two classes, mail order and retail. The mail order market reports that the seamless type retains its former prestige, while in the retail market there is a noticeable trend toward full-fashioned hose."

RINSE WELL.

After washing the bathtub be sure to rinse it thoroughly so it will not be slippery with soapsuds when the next person takes a bath. Many accidents are caused by people getting into slippery tubs.

LYRICS OF LIFE

IF DREAMS CAME TRUE

I wonder, if a dream came true,
If we would love the dream as much
As some desire we never knew,
As some bright star we could not touch?

I have seen maids their roses clutch
And then, then only, find the there:
And is the light of moonday such
As we beheld at break of morn?

I sometimes wonder if a dream
Is fair because a mist of white
Lies always on the distant stream,
Surrounds the purple mountain-height?

Perhaps if I could have tonight
The beauty that I see afar
My heart would find an earthlylight
The splendor that I thought a star.

I wonder if the dreams that fade,
That keep their beauty all the years,
Were out of our own yearning made
And had no brilliance but our tears?

I know that when the harbor nears
We see the huts along the shore;
Perhaps this thing a dream endears—
It was a dream, and nothing more.

BEWARE THE COUGH OR COLD THAT HANGS ON

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

BROKEN

CHAPTER XXVII.

"A new sensation," said Julie. She sat up in bed, letting the letter she had been reading slip down on to the floor. "You'd better come too, Bim. I should like you to be converted."

Bim Lennox shook her head.

It was midday and she had just come in from a walk in the park, to find Julie still in bed.

"Thank you. It's too unhealthy a sport for me," she said quietly.

Julie lay back on her pillows, her arms folded beneath her dainty head.

"To look at us," she said after a moment, "one would imagine that that is the sort of remark I ought to have made."

"What do you mean?"

"Only that you look ultra-everything, and I look just the ordinary, unsophisticated—or don't I look it any longer?" she demanded with a little grimace, conscious of a subtle change of expression on her friend's face.

Bim walked across the room.

"Do you mind if I open the window?" she asked. "This room's so stuffy."

Julie laughed. "I'm not sure if that is quite polite," she said.

"It's such a beautiful morning; why don't you ge up and come out?" Bim asked impatiently.

Julie frowned.

"It was a lovely morning when I came home," she said flippantly. "The first time I've ever seen the sun rise, by the way—no, not quite the first time," she added slowly.

There was a little silence. "The first time was in Switzerland," she added defiantly; "on top of an exceeding high mountain, and the devil said unto me—"

Bim turned sharply.

"Julie, for heaven's sake, shut up!"

"Oh, all right!" Julie giggled and, leaning over the side of the bed, grabbed up the fallen letter from the floor.

"Listen to this!" she commanded. "It's from Mrs. Ardron, the mother of the one and only Giles Chittenham! She says that she is quite willing for us to hold a seance in her house tomorrow, and bring the famous Chryer. You'd better come along, Bim. Don't be pig-headed."

"Who is 'us' exactly?" Bim asked.

"That's the sort of thing Giles Chittenham would say," Julie declared. "He always wants to know the whys and wherefores of everything. What do you think he suggested to me last night?"

"I don't know."

"That I should let him be my friend!" Julie burst into shrill laughter. "Did you ever hear such a thing?" she demanded.

Bim came to the foot of the bed. She looked very attractive in her neat walking costume with a bunch of violets tucked into the buttonhole, and perhaps Julie was conscious of the contrast between them, for she said sharply:

"What are you staring at? I know I look a sight. That's the worst of you. You always manage to look spick and span, no matter what a thick night you have."

"I never have a thick night."

A little sneer curved Julie's pretty mouth.

"No. I forgot you've been saved. Well, everyone to his taste. Personally I prefer cocktails to milk and water."

There was a little silence, then Bim said slowly:

"I've been thinking, Julie. Would you rather I gave up this flat?"

Julie stared.

"Give it up? But it's half mine."

"I know. I mean, would you rather I gave up my half?"

"I don't understand."

"I think you do." Bim drummed her slender fingers on the bed rail. "Our friendship isn't what it used to be," she said rather sadly. "We don't seem to agree any longer. You like people whom I—well, I just can't stand them, you know that! I detest Doris and that Sadie Barrow, and Marco Essen—and that poor weak little fool, Mrs. Ardron. No. it's impossible to detest her, she's too harmless!"

"I wish Giles Chittenham could hear you."

"He'd probably agree. There's nothing of his mother in him. Rodney must have taken after her. I don't know how poor Giles Chittenham tolerates the sort of life she seems to expect him to lead."

Julie flushed.

"Are you in love with him?" she twitted Bim sharply.

Bim flushed to the roots of her closely cropped hair.

"No," she said. "But you are."

There was a little silence, then Julie started up, her eyes blazing, her lips quivering with rage.

"Go out of my room!" she commanded. "How dare you say such a thing? I think you're right when you suggest that we'd better separate. I've had enough of you and your saintly ways. The sooner you go the better. I'm sick of being dictated to and preached at—" But Bim had gone, closing the door softly behind her.

Julie lay back on the pillows. She was trembling in every limb.

"How dared she say such a thing—how dared she?" she asked herself passionately. "In love with that man! I hate him! How dared she—how dared she?"

She shut her eyes tightly, afraid of the scalding tears that suddenly seemed to rise from her heart.

Hate him? The man in whose arms she had found the meaning of love; the man whose tragic mistake had broken her—body and soul? Until now she had hardly realized how much she had suffered since that evening in Switzerland when Chittenham had told her the truth. The weeks that had passed since then had just been so many hoursof suffering and futile endeavor to forget. Every day called for a fresh effort to whip up her courage, every night brought its torturous reaction and unending pain.

"If only I could forget him! If only I could burn him out of my life!" So Julie told herself a thousand times a day.

Every time she knew she was going to meet Chittenham she would buoy herself up with the hope that she would be able to look at him and find that she no longer cared.

She was sure that such things did happen. She had heard other women say so. Even Doris Gardener had once said to her when speaking of her own husband:

"I was frightfully fond of him once and then—one day I woke up and found it had all gone."

"And that's what will happen to me," Julie forced herself to believe. "Some day that will happen to me, and I shall be happy again."

But every fresh meeting with Chittenham deepened the pain, and drove her to anger him and exasperate him till sometimes even she herself was shocked. She knew it would be better to avoid him altogether, but a feeling of almost childish defiance would not allow her to do this. She was morbidly afraid lest Giles should guess how he had hurt her, and to counteract that fear she sometimes deliberately sought his society, crucifying herself in order to deceive him. And it had been all in vain, for Bim knew!

For the moment Julie almost hated Bim.

"Let her go! I'll be happier without her. She does nothing but find fault with me. I've a right to lead my own life," she told herself passionately.

She had other friends—many friends. There was Sadie, and Lawrence Schofield and a score of others.

Friends! The word seemed to mock her.

Could she truthfully call them anything but not altogether desirable acquaintances? Schofield, perhaps, was the exception. Yes, she believed his friendship for her was sincere enough, but for the rest—

With a swift little movement Julie threw aside the bedclothes and caught up a wrap.

"Bim!" She went out of the room and to Bim's door; she hammered upon it with a shaking hand. "Let me in, Bim!"

Bim's quiet voice answered at once. "The door is not locked."

Julie flung it open. She entered with a little rush and, running across to her friend, dropped down on her knees beside her.

"I didn't mean it. I'm sorry. Forget I said it. I'm a beast—a mean beast, but you made me angry."

"But it was the truth, Julie," Bim said gently.

Julie looked up with hot eyes.

"What was the truth?"

"That it will be far better for us to separate."

"Oh, that! I thought you meant—" Julie was on her feet again, pacing up and down the room.

She looked a pathetic, tragic little figure, with her bright, defiant eyes and slim girlishness.

Bim watched her with pitying eyes.

"You know, my dear, you don't look the part," she said at last very gently.

Julie stood still in front of a mirror, staring at her reflection.

"I know I don't, and you do! That's just the joke. If anyone said that you stayed out all night with people you really loathed, and drank too much, and did damned silly things, people would believe it of you—but as it's I—"

"Give it up, Julie," Bim urged gently. "Come away with me. We've had good times together before and the country is heaven now—"

"Heaven! I hate that word. It's just a name for a place where you'll always find the serpent just when you think you're happy at last."

She turned round, her arms hanging limply at her sides, her hair ruffled. "I can't!" she said. "I've got to stay and face it out. He'll think I'm afraid—that I'm running away."

She spoke quickly and incoherently, almost as if some power outside herself was forcing the words from her.

"I'd rather die than that he should think that. I'd rather marry Lawrence Schofield."

"Don't be a little fool, Julie. Do you think anyone but you would mind if you cut off your nose to spite your face?" She held out her hand. "Come here."

Julie shook her head.

"No," and then quite suddenly she came, dropping down on to the floor again at Bim's feet. "I wish I were dead," she whispered desolately.

Bim looked away, bleak pain in her face. She knew so well how Julie felt—had felt like it often herself, and yet what was the good? Who cared if one's heart was broken?

"If you feel like that," she said at last, "why don't you forgive him for whatever it was he did?"

Julie laughed, her face buried in Bim's lap.

"Forgive him? What would be the use?"

"My dear, I don't understand in the least what happened between you," Bim said in her cool, smooth voice. "You would never tell me when I asked you. If I only knew perhaps I could help you better—"

Julie flung up her head with a violent jerk:

"He's married," she said defiantly.

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, But Do Not Compel

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 9, 1928.

(Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate.)

Good and evil planets divide this day's planetary rule, according to astrology, which finds the sway fairly fortunate in the afternoon and evening.

The morning may be a time when it is difficult to make decisions and the tendency may be pessimistic.

The judgment should not be trusted before noon, for it is easy to be deceived while this configuration prevails.

Much misrepresentation and even actual untruthfulness may be encountered while this configuration prevails. It is well not to buy until a better planetary government is assured.

The afternoon should be an auspicious time to consider building contracts and to consult with capitalists regarding their plans.

The sway should be favorable to enterprises that must be promoted as well as to those well started.

Women may find business environment less pleasant than formerly, if the stars are rightly read, and many will seek contentment in their homes.

Weddings will be numerous as the winter advances and so will be engagements, for women will turn to romance with real initiative that makes them positive factors, the seers foretell.

Real estate is subject to influences making for increase of home building and a decrease of mere speculative interest, it is forecast.

This should be a fairly fortunate sway for farmers, giving them encouragement and promising increased profits.

Again interest in food values will be keen and prices will be high as the winter sets in it is foretold.

In eastern cities much fuel will be needed, for cold weather will prevail until late in the spring.

Persons whose birthdate it is have the augury of a successful year which should be happy if small domestic quarrels are avoided.

Children born on this day may be intense in nature and inclined to be domineering. These subjects of Scorpio often are exceptionally gifted, and they are generally endowed with great determination.

HAM CASSEROLE

Another fascinating way of using up the end of ham. Two cups ground ham, 2 cups strained tomatoes, 2 cups boiled spaghetti, 1 chopped green pepper, salt and a dash of paprika. Mix together and pour into a buttered casserole. Sprinkle the top generously with cheese and bake in a moderate oven until nicely browned.

SOVIET PLANS REPUBLIC IN SOUTH AFRICA

Communists Have Ordered Intensive Agitation Among Natives.

STARTS IN MOSCOW.

Minister Declares Government Will Fight Attempt On White Union.

LONDON, Nov. 8 (Canadian Press Cable).—From London, Johannesburg and Moscow comes light on the speech of Hon. J. Tielman Roos, Minister in the Government of the Union of South Africa, at Johannesburg on Saturday, when he attacked what he termed Bolshevist attempts to put "new-fangled ideas" into the heads of South African natives.

A Russian detailed plan of campaign in South Africa to create an independent Black republic is described by Riga correspondents who say the Communist International has issued final orders to the Communist party in South Africa for intensified agitation among the blacks. These instructions are based on the personal report of Miss Rebecca Bunting, South African "comrade," who visited Moscow specially to describe the progress of the "racial war" in South Africa.

Appeal For Natives.

The "friend's house" in London has now issued an appeal for donations to the "native legislation group." The appeal is signed by ten persons, including Willoughby Dickinson, assistant chief secretary to the Government of Northern Rhodesia, who served in the air service from 1915 to 1917, and in the Coldstream Guards until 1919, winning the D.S.O. and Croix de Guerre, and Joseph Burtt-Davy, consulting agriculturist and authority on South African botany who was educated at the University of California.

This appeal says that Howard Pim, chairman of the Johannesburg Joint Council of Europeans and Natives, "laid before us the very serious position in South Africa in consequence of proposed native legislation, namely, three bills affecting the native franchise, labor conditions and their powers to purchase land," which the appeal describes as a "disastrous, retrograde policy which may have far-reaching effects elsewhere in the world."

"We English can now do nothing directly in the matter," the appeal continues, "but we can help those who are bearing the brunt of the fight for wise dealings with the natives and we are convinced we shall be so doing in helping the work of the Johannesburg Joint Council of Europeans and Natives"

Hon Mr Tielman Roos said the Nationalists would fight in the next election for the principle of nationalism, the rock to which the party could hold in fighting Communism, Bolshevism "and all other 'isms' which face us. As Nationalists we shall fight to the utmost any attempt to develop natives along lines which will endanger the white standard of the union."

IN POLICE COURT

Four young men from Emily Township whose car had figured in an accident near the Fourth Line of Smith, appeared before Magistrate O. A. Langley in a session of the County Police Court on Wednesday afternoon, and all four weer fined $10.00 and costs each. In addition, William Murtha, driver of the car, faced a charge of being in charge of a motor vehicle while intoxicated. Seven days in the common jail was the magistrate's decision in disposing of this charge.

In the same court, William Post was fined $10.00 and costs for damaging property of a neighbor in Asphodel township.

Charged with breaking and entering the premises of Lowe & Outram, wholesale confectioners, at 184-186 George Street, on October 26 last, Ralph Davis appeared before Magistrate O. A. Langley in Police Court this morning, having pleaded not guilty, particularly to the "breaking" section of the charge.

At the conclusion of evidence by the owners, S. Lowe and H. W. Outram, as well as by the police and others, Davis was found guilty and was remanded for sentence until Thursday, November 15. From the evidence, the magistrate learned of how Mr. Lowe had returned to his business late in the evening of October 26, and seeing someone in the building, had summoned the police. Davis was caught.

Previous to the trial this morning, his counsel, E. Sheehy, stated that his client had chosen to admit entering the building but that the breaking had been done by another.

Faced Second Charge.

Postmaster Charles Lacheur, C. C. McGrail, Inspector of Post Offices for this district, and W. S. Bogue, druggist, of 383 George Street, were present in connection with a second charge against Davis—theft of money and stamps from the sub-post office kept by Mr. Bogue at his drug store. This case will be disposed of on November 15 also.

Two juveniles, charged with the theft of bicycles, were brought before the magistrate, and were ordered to appear on November 14.

Following Haskins' sentence, two girls made affidavits implicating Ward. The appeal of Haskins on basis of the affidavits is pending.

PROTESTS INCOME TAX PROSECUTIONS

Mayor of Cobalt Claims Men Fined Without Taxable Incomes.

COBALT, Ont., Nov. 8 (Canadian Press).—A direct protest has been made to Premier King by Mayor Frank Landrum, Cobalt, in connection with the prosecutions for failure to make income tax returns for 1923 and 1924. The Mayor claims a number of working men without taxable incomes have been fined $25 and that it would be a hardship to force them to pay.

The largest manufacturers of Electric Washers in the British Empire, Beatty Bros. Limited, of Fergus, have opened a direct factory service branch in the Denne block on Water Street, opposite the Market Square.

The company is 100 per cent. Canadian—Canadian capital, Canadian men and Canadian materials, and the plant at Fergus, Ontario, covers an area of over ten acres.

Beatty Bros., Limited, claim to be the largest Canadian buyers fo C.G.E. motors, which are made in Peterborough, which statement is verified by C.G.E. officials, who state the last order received from the firm of Beatty Bros., Limited, was for some thirty thousand motors.

Peterborough is fortunate in securing this branch as a distributing centre for the Central Ontario district. Beatty Bros., Limited, have been in business nearly fifty-five years, and although they have opened in that time over thirty branches, they have never withdrawn from any field they have entered. The washers are well-known in the city and district, having had a good sale for many years.

The local branch is under the management of Mr. H. S. Morton, formerly of Windsor, who should be an acquisition to the business life of Peterborough.

PARTICIPATE IN MUSIC PROGRAM

Salvation Army Band To Take Part in Musical Festival.

AT QUEEN CITY.

The Peterborough Salvation Army Band will take a most important part in a big musical festival of the Army bands to be held in Toronto on Sunday and Monday next. The local band is recognized as being one of the finest bands in Ontario, and it will take a large portion of the program with the two premier bands of the Queen City, the Dovercourt Band and the Temple Band. On previous occasions, by their concerts in Toronto, the Peterborough Salvation Army Band has won fame for itself and advertised the city as a musical centre.

On Saturday night the band will play at the Dovercourt Road Citadel in a great musical festival with the Dovercourt Band. This promises to be a very unique event. All day Sunday, the band will give a concert of music at the Alhambra Theatre. On Monday morning at 8.30 it will parade to the Cenotaph in front of the City Hall, and place a wreath upon it, honoring the dead heroes of Canada. At ten o'clock it will give a program of music to the wounded veterans in the Christie Street Hospital. In the afternoon the band will march to Mount Pleasant Cemetery and place a wreath on the monument there in memory of those who were drowned in the Empress of Ireland disaster, and in which the premier Salvation Army Band in Canada, known as the Staff Band, perished. In the evening at eight o'clock the band will play at the big musical festival in the Temple with the Temple Band.

Guests of Lippincott.

The Peterborough Band will be the guests of the Lippincott Corps, and it will be accompanied by Ensign and Mrs. Green.

The band will be under the direction of Bandmaster Frank Robinson, and it will consist of about forty pieces. Besides giving a program of band music, the band will give vocal and instrumental numbers. There is in the band a vocal choir of sixteen voices, a saxophone section of ten saxophones who give special numbers, an instrumental quartette, and several vocalists. Altogether it is a great musical organization and well worthy of the recognition it is earning for itself throughout the whole province.

LITTLE BOY BREAKS LEG

Donald Delong Meets With Accident When Climbing On Wagon.

HORSES MOVED.

Donald James Delong, aged seven, had his leg broken yesterday afternoon, about four o'clock, while returning home from the King George School. The little lad, the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Delong, 219 Caddy Street, was walking down Armour Road toward his home, when he spied his father's team of horses, driven by Mr. McDonald, coming down the road. The boy called to the man and the team was pulled up and stopped. The little chap had his leg broken when the horses moved while he was climbing up the wheel. His leg was caught in the spokes.

The boy was taken to Nicholls' Hospital, and Dr. J. A. Morgan attended him. The last report said that the lad was resting comfortably.

NEWS OF NEW TRIAL ELATES WILLIAMS

Sheriff Vair Tells Condemned Man He Will Be Granted a New Trial.

KINGSTON, Nov. 8—(Special)—With a flash of excitement and a quick earnest glance Wilbert Richard Williams, doomed to death on December sixth for the murder of his wife, received the news from Sheriff Vair, on Wednesday afternoon, who told him that the sentence of death had been quashed. Williams quickly grasped the import of the announcement. He expressed his gladness for it had been known lately that he had a shrinking at the prospect of death. He wanted to live, this idea was in his mind, his actions suggested his fears but to the sheriff, he intimated his gladness that he was to have another chance, Williams, as result of quietness and good exercise is in better health than when he committed the awful deed of braining his wife. He does not show the nervousness he had when first apprehended. Williams will be removed to another part of the jail as soon as the official notification is received. The death watch by three guards will be discontinued and Williams, who is considered quite sane will not be guarded as was the case up to the time of his trial. His case will likely come before the Supreme Court, at the sessions in February next.

Birdsall

(Examiner Correspondence)

BIRDSALL, Nov. 8.—Miss Harvey, of London, England, was recently honored by the members of St. Michael's Church, Westwood, at the home of Colonel and Mrs. R. E. Birdsall, before her marriage to Mr. Bert Godfrey, of Otonabee.

Cards and music were enjoyed in the early evening and songs were given by Mrs. Everett Birdsall, Miss Harvey, Miss Barchay and Herbert Godfrey, and Mr. Colin. Later the gifts which were numerous and handsome were brought in by two little maids in white—Mary Birdsall and Rachel Elmhurst in a beautifully decorated little wagon. Mr. Godfrey, on behalf of Miss Harvey, thanked their many friends for their beautiful and appropriate remembrance and extended a hearty invitation to all to visit them in their new home.

After a buffet luncheon was served, the evening was spent in cards and dancing to the music from Henry Elmhurst's violin.

STRANGE AS IT SEEMS—by John Hix

ARE WE BECOMING HEALTHIER?

A study of census reports brings out some interesting facts about sickness. Some diseases are becoming less fatal with the advance of civilization, while others are becoming more deadly.

The average length of life has almost doubled within the last few centuries, and there is every indication that longevity will continue. I have made a study of some of the diseases having the most pronounced changes in the death rates, with the view of determining which diseases are becoming greater menaces to society, and which are being successfully overcome by society, also endeavoring to discover the reasons for these changes. To do this I have taken an average of the last eight years and compared it with the average of the previous eight years.

Typhoid Fever.

The number of deaths from typhoid fever has been reduced from 15.34 to 8.45 per hundred thousand. This is one of the most remarkable achievements of modern civilization. The number of deaths has been reduced almost 50% in the course of a very few years. I believe this is chiefly because of the preventive measures that have become possible because of our knowledge of this disease. The increased use of sanitary toilets and a better care in selecting the position of wells has reduced the possibility of contaminating the drinking water with the typhoid germ. We also have a careful quarantine of all typhoid cases, and all large cities have periodic inspections of the milk and water consumed.

Smallpox.

The average number of deaths from smallpox has increased from .28 to .56 per hundred thousand. Although this is not a large proportion of deaths compared to other disease, you can see that the average has exactly doubled within the course of sixteen years. If vaccination is as effective as it is supposed to be, what is the reason? My experience indicates to me that the methods of treating this disease, at present in vogue, can be improved.

Tuberculosis.

The number of deaths from this wasting disease has been decreased from 128.8 to 88.5 per hundred thousand. I believe this is largely because we are beginning to realize the importance of protective vitamins and mineral elements in foods and also because of the better treatment of this disease through the increased use of fresh air and sunbaths. The number of deaths from tuberculosis will undoubtedly be still further reduced as the correct treatment of this disease becomes more universal.

Cancer.

This dreadful disease is slightly on the increase in the number of deaths per hundred thousand. Formerly there was an average of 80.21 and now there is an average of 87.23. Although many of the causes of this disease are as yet unknown, I am of the opinion that it can only occur when preceded by a condition of pronounced enervation. Since in this hurry-up age all types of nervousness are on the increase, it may be that the same causes are responsible in some degree for the cancer increase.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

A Big Adam's Apple.

QUESTION: R. J. H. writes: "My Adam's apple is too large and sticks away out. Is there any way to have this operated on to make it smaller?"

ANSWER: The Adam's apple is normally larger in a man and it cannot be operated on to reduce its size, but it is usually possible to develop the neck muscles to such an extent that they will hide the large size of the Adam's apple.

Pus in the Blood.

QUESTION: R. M. asks: "Is it possible for pus to enter the blood stream, and what would be the result if it did?"

ANSWER: It is possible for pus to enter the blood stream but usually the lymphatic circulation takes care of pus, which is composed of toxic material along with the dead white cells. Pus in the blood cannot usually travel very far, as the lymphatics save the patient's life by carrying away the toxins and dead cells and rendering the toxins less dangerous.

Gas or Novocain.

QUESTION: K. G. asks: "Which is best, gas or novocain for pulling teeth?"

ANSWER: Whether a local or general anesthetic is used by your dentist depends entirely upon the condition of your health, the teeth to be extracted, and many other factors which your dentist alone can decide.

Feeding Baby.

QUESTION: Mrs. H. L. asks: "What is the best artificial food for a baby? How old should a baby be before he may have vegetable juice?"

ANSWER: After changing from breast nursing the baby should be given nothing but Holstein milk and orange juice up to about two years of age, after which he should take a little less milk and begin using the minced non-starchy vegetables. You may send for my free article on Infant Feeding, care of this newspaper. Be sure to enclose a large, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

LOYOLA TAKES FIRST INTERMEDIATE FINAL

MONTREAL CITY COLLEGE GAINS 12-POINT LEAD

Victors Play Good Combination in All Departments to Defeat St. Mike's 15-3.

SUPERB KICKING COUNTS.

Heavy Favorites To Win Dominion Intercollegiate Intermediate Football Title.

MONTREAL, Que., Nov. 8.—(Canadian Press).— Loyola continued on their uninterrupted march for the Intercollegiate intermediate football title when they defeated St. Michae's College, winners of the western section of the league, 15-3, here yesterday. Both on their performance yesterday and because of the 12-point lead which they will take into the final game of the home and home series at Toronto Saturday, Loyola are heavy favorites to win the championship they lost to western in the final here last year.

Superb kicking by Gene Savard, coupled with a scintillating performance in all departments of the game by Quain McCarrey brought victory to the Montrealers. Savard kicked seven rouges and McCarrey scored the only touch of the game when he fell on a St. Mike's fumble in the fourth, besides kicking a drop earlier in the final frame.

A strong wind blowing diagonally across the gridiron upset the visitors' play from the outset and Young, the St. Mike's punter was no match for Savard, either with the wind or against it. The Loyola punter drove low bounding balls against the wing that bounced in such treacherous fashion that the St. Mike's catching halves were bewildered in playing them and when the Montreal Irishman had the wind at his back, the punts sailed high and far over the pair's head to the deadline for rouges.

Good in Drives.

Although they were no match for Loyola in the air, St. Mike's made a game of it against the hard-driving Maroons on the ground and had not the Loyola aerial attack so disorganized them in the second and fourth quarters they might have kept the margin of defeat down to less imposing proportions. Young, Burns and Quinn in the Toronto backfield, uncorked some smart runs and the former stood out, by his sensational open field running, as the best halfback on the field.

The scoring of both teams alternated by quarters, depending entirely on whom was favored by the wind. St. Mike's as the visiting team had the elements in their favor in the first quarter and despite the fact that Young took the kick-off and ran it back sixty yards, the Toronto Irish could score but a single point in the first quarter.

The change-about in the second quarter brought an expected turn in fortunes of war With the wind in his favor, Savard stood on the St. Mike's yard lines and pounded over rouge after rouge that Young and Burns saw go over their heads to the deadline without being able to lift a finger. Savard kicked six single points in this quarter.

St. Mike's could do no better than score two rouges when they got the wind in their favor again in the third. A long kick-off to start the third brought the ball into Loyola territory and Young promptly kicked to the dead-line for a rouge. Half way through the frame, one of Savard's kicks went into touch short and the visitors booted over again for a point.

Rout in Final Quarter

Defeat for St. Mike's became a rout in the final quarter. Savard returned a kick for a twenty-yard gain, and play moved farther into St. Michael's territory when they were penalized for no yards tackling. From twenty yards out and directly in front of the posts, McCarrey sent the score mounting to 9—3 when he drove a drop kick between the posts with deadly accuracy.

Loyola dominated the play from that point to the end. McAlear started another march down the field when he tore round St. Michael's right after taking a punt, and the visitors lost the ball shortly after, when they failed to make yards on a third down. Savard's kick was touched by a St. Michael's player, and with the whole team onside, Loyola rushed down the field. Young, the St. Mike's left half, tried to dribble the ball into touch for a touch-in-goal, but in the excitement missed the ball. Quinn Shaughnessy made a wild lunge for it and missed, Young took another wild boot at the pigskin and also missed and then Quain McCarrey rushed in and rolled on it for a touch. It was not converted. Savard kicked another rouge before the end.

The period scores:—

BRIDGENORTH CREW WIN FIRST TUSSLE

Win With Cubs in Lakefield Softball League Double Program.

(Examiner Correspondence)

LAKEFIELD, Nov. 8.—Bridgenorth won from the De Laval team in the Rink Company's Softball League by a score of 24-8 on Tuesday night. Both teams were well supplied with rooters and a friendly spirit prevailed throughout the game. Both teams played a clean game and not a word of dispute marred its harmony. An outstanding feature of the game and a very unusual feature was the fact that in the seventh inning Bridgenorth scored 14 runs, each man batted twice and one man three times Gillespie made a home run in the eighth innings for Bridgenorth. R. C. Chittick was umpire at the plate and K. Junkin at the bases.

The line-up was as follows:

De Laval—Pitcher, Dyer; catcher R. Dyer; 1st base, R. Miller; right short stop, E. Woodhouse; left short stop, B. Jones; 2nd base, H. Fowler; 3rd, R. Evans; field, J. Cooper and K. Miller sub, H. Stanley.

Bridgenorth—Pitcher, L. Forsyth; catcher, E. Connors; 1st base, H. Dormer; right short stop, M. Wilson; left short stop, G. Dormer; 2nd base, W. Shearer; 3rd base, H. Bradshaw; field, K. Baker, J. Gillespie; subs, B. Jopling and Griffin.

The score by innings was:

De Laval ..... 100300 0 31— 8
Bridgenorth ..... 120060(14)1x—21

Second Game.

The second game was between two local teams, the High School and Cubs and resulted in a straight win for the Cubs. Both teams were minus several of their "strong men" but played nevertheless a good game with considerable "pep." The school boys scored well in the ninth innings but had not started early enough. The Cubs scored no less than four home runs, two by Frank Payne, one each by Kenneth Junkin and Harry Stabler.

The game, like its predecessor, was not held by any player trying "to tell the umpire" and while one has seen games more snappy it was at least harmonious.

W. Elliott was plate umpire and R. C. Chittick was at bases. The line-ups follow:

Cubs—Pitcher, H. Stabler; catcher, F. Payne; 1st base, R. Payne; right short stop, R. Junkin; left short stop, H. Hamblin; 2nd base, B. Wannamaker; 3rd base, E. Morin; left, J. Gibson, E. Northey.

The score by innings was:

High School ..... 221001006—12
Cubs ..... 70381310x—24

The next two games will be on Friday night, Cooneys and De Laval play at 7.30 and Harrisons and the Canada Cement Co. at 9 o'clock.

VIEWS ON SPORT

The two P.C.I. rugby teams will do or die on the Trinity College School grounds this Saturday.

There will be some aches and stiff muscles among the Petes prospective hockey players to-day after their hour of stiff exercise at the "Y" gym last evening. There was a sizeable crowd of the lads out and they went through their bends and stretches under the direction of Walter Perks.

• • • • • • •

The two important games in the playoffs of the central group of the Interscholastic O.R.F.U. in which the two P.C.I. teams play are scheduled for Saturday at Port Hope. The intermediate game between Bowmanville H.S. and Coach Legon's team will begin at about 12.15 p.m. and the senior battle with Oshawa H.S. opposing Coach Browne's fast twelve will get underway immediately after the finish of the first game. The fans who make the trip to the lakeshore will surely see two sparkling games because everything is at stake for all four squads.

• • • • • • •

P.C.I.'s two mentors were chasing their teams through a hard drill yesterday afternoon at James Stevenson Park. Both teams went over their repertoire of plays without a hitch. Coach Browne will likely fix his team up with some new plays with which to greet the team from Oshawa.

• • • • • • •

The "Y" Harriers met for supper at the "Y" yesterday and all the final arrangements were made for what promises to be one of the best Thanksgiving Day programs of racing seen in the city for many a day. Dicky Bates, Roy Tranter and many other well known are entering and are in great shape for the long run.

• • • • • • •

A unique relay race will take place from the City Hall, Atlantic City to the Penn A.C. club house, Philadelphia on Saturday. The distance is sixty-two and two-tenths miles and there will be ten runners to a team. Willie Ritola will run the anchor leg for the Finnish America A.C. There is a team entering from Toronto.

• • • • • • •

Now comes the report that the McGill team is rent full of holes because of injured players from the game with Queen's last week. Maybe so. Varsity are working harder than they ever do at their books to grab old Opportunity by the forelock and beat the Red team.

• • • • • • •

The noise in Kingston about the game being sold raises the question: Was there ever a game lost when the fans fully expected victory that some infinitesimal-minded person, who never played a game didn't whisper, "Sold"?

Cubs Will Help Big Four Team Work Out

HAMILTON, Nov. 8.—Out of the running after a very disastrous season, Tigers' O.R.F.U. team is not yet broken up. Eight members of the team have responded to a request made by the management of the Big Four squad, and will turn out tonight to give the champions opposition in the final practice before the struggle with the Ottawa Senators on Saturday.

The eight to turn out will be Dunkerley, Sweeney, Gathercole, Stradwick, Inksetter, Smithson, Eastwood and Clark. The Big Four team has twenty men, so there will be a total of twenty-eight, fourteen for each team, which will provide both sides with two substitutes each for the battle that has been arranged.

With the aid of the O.R.F.U. men the Cats hope to make tonights' workout a real "hummer" and it will put them on razor edge for their contest with the Senators.

BEACHERS WIN SENIOR HONORS

Dominion Champions Win the Group Without a Defeat.

WELL-PLAYED GAME.

CAMP BORDEN, November 8. — The Balmy Beach Dominion champions had their troubles here yesterday afternoon in beating the Camp Borden Airmen, 14 to 5 to take the group. It was a fast, interesting contest, the yardsticks being moved frequently by both teams, the champions featuring in this heavy work with a sortie that gained the necessary ten, nine times in a row in the second period to earn them their first try via Crowhurst.

Reeve secured the other Beach major score when he blocked a kick in the second period and rambled over. Harding ran 25 yards for the Airmen's touchdown, the Beach band letting him run, claiming the whistle had blown for an offside. The count was allowed, however.

Reeve, Mackenzie, and Earl Smith were the standouts for the titleholders, while Ussher and Ault dented the Beach line more consistently than any squad has been able to do this season. Cook also played well for the Airmen.

INTERMEDIATES IN FIRST GAME

Large Crowd of School Supporters To Witness Doubleheader On Saturday.

AT PORT HOPE.

When P.C.I. Seniors go into the game with Oshawa on Saturday they will have something to play for besides the championship honors. The parents of one of the members of the team have offered to treat the team to a big supper at the Empress Hotel if they win. P.C.I. should win because the way to a man's heart is through his stomach, and the boys always play better if there is any sign of a feed after. For the last few years the war cry of the rugby team has been, "When do we eat," and so with an opportunity like this staring them in the face they simply can't lose. The rest of the school is behind the team to a man and when the team lines up in Port Hope there will be a large number of supporters to cheer the team to victory. Some of the boys who aren't sure of a ride down on Saturday intend to take a chance by "bumming" their way. It's the spirit like this that wins the games. The intermediate game is called for 12.15, and will be immediately followed by the senior game. If P.C.I. wins, the contingent of supporters will surely make old "Hicketychike" resound in Port Hope and here, too.

SUNDAY SPORTS SCORE VICTORY

Massachusetts Votes To Legalize Most Athletic Events On Sabbath.

INDOOR HOCKEY BANNED.

BOSTON, Nov. 8.—Sunday sports won a decisive victory in Massachusetts, according to returns yesterday from all but 392 of the state's 1,605 election precints, returns from 1,213 precincts, including the Boston vote complete, gave 577,353 yes votes and 304,735 no on the Sunday sports referendum appearing on the ballot.

With only 480,000 yes votes needed to carry the referendum, its safety was assured on the basis of even the incomplete returns, and the way is now cleared for the passage of the act, which, among other things, will legalize Sunday baseball between the hour of 2 and 6 p.m., in all cities and towns that favor it under local option provisions.

Indoor sports, such as boxing and arena ice hockey, will not be allowed under the new act, although hockey may be played outdoors. Automobile and horse-racing and hunting also are not legalized; but all other outdoor athletic contests, either professional of amateur, can now be staged, provided the city or town in which they are played gives its consent.

The effort to legalize Sunday sports, which has met defeat on several occasions both in the Legislature in the form of a bill and on the ballot in the form of a referendum, has been backed chiefly by the professional sports promoters of the State, while chief opposition has come from the Lord's Day League and the Massachusetts clergy in general.

McGILL INDULGES IN HEAVY DRILLS

Quiet Confidence Is Feeling of Montreal University Team.

MONTREAL, Nov. 8.—Only 55 reserved tickets were left when the McGill Athletic Board offices closed last night, and indications are now that slightly more than 15,000 people will witness the McGill-U. of T. intercollegiate football title struggle here Saturday. Rush seats will go on sale just before game time.

Meanwhile, the footballers are preparing with quiet confidence for the coming of the Blue. There was another heavy scrimming yesterday, and a third is on the books for to-day, but Friday will see practices completed with a light signal drill. Friday is likely to be the last scrimmage the McGill team will have this year for, unless Toronto wins Saturday and forces a three-cornered tie. McGill will hang their helmets on the peg for another year after the Thanksgiving Day encounter with M.A.A.A.

Dr. Flanagan was back with his team yesterday, shouting as lustily for cohesive teamwork as if there were not such things in the world as stomachs that at times rebel on their owners. Chic Church, whose knee was injured in the Queen's game, was out jogging around the track. Captain Littlefield, Munroe and Young, however, are still nursing injuries that keep them off their feet.

Saturday will mark the fifty-eight meeting between the Blue and the Red. In the 57 times the two teams have met since 1898, Toronto won 37 encounters, McGill 19, and one was tied. Four times McGill and U. of T. have met in a play-off, and three times the Blue have been victorious.

The most crushing defeat McGill ever suffered in those 57 games was in 1922, when Toronto swamped McGill at Molson Stadium by 51 to 5. The Blue's worst trimming was administered in Toronto in 1919, the last McGill team to win a championship, triumphing 21-1.

Delaney Is Matched With Jimmy Slattery

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—Jack Delaney, former light-heavyweight champion, was signed yesterday to meet Jimmy Slattery of Buffalo in a ten-round bout at Madison Square Garden Nov. 30. It will be their third meeting, Slattery having won a six-round decision at the old Madison Square Garden in 1924 and again in 1925.

Both boxers have been conspicuous by their absence from New York rings of late. Except for a fairly easy bout with Nando Tassi, young Italian, at Ebbets Field, in September, the French-Canadian has not boxed hereabouts since he was knocked out in one round by Jack Sharkey in April.

Nervous and Run Down The Least Noise Would Bother Her

Mrs. R. Burton, Oshawa, Ont., writes:—"Three years ago I was so nervous and run down I could hardly bear to have the children make a noise it would bother me so.

"A friend advised me to take

MILBURN'S HEART AND NERVE PILLS

and after taking two boxes I began to feel stronger, looked better and the color came back into my cheeks, and now I am feeling fine again."

Price 50c. a box at all druggists and dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Ltd., Toronto.

INNOVATIONS IN RACING GAME

An innovation in racing is the use of numbers on the horses' heads as well as on the saddle cloths. Here is the device in operation at Tanforan Park, San Francisco. The numbers were made in Canada, and the idea originated with P. E. Callen, the well-known Canadian racing official. These numbers were first used last summer at A. M. Orpen's Kenilworth Park at Windsor, Ont., but were discarded after the first day because they were too large. Mr. Cullen made several new sets of smaller size, and Marshall Cassidy ordered them for use at Tanforan and Tijuana. Word comes from Tanforan that they have proved a great success. The photographs show the finish of a feature race at Tanforan in which Alex. Pantages, No. 11, on the rail, defeated Rip Rap, No. 4, by a nose in a sensational rush. The LOWER photograph shows the scene in the paddock after the race when Miss Dorothy Spreckels crowned the winner with a floral horse-shoe. The rider is Jockey Hurst Philpot. The winning horse is California-bred and owned by his namesake, Alexander Pantages, famous theatrical magnate. It is expected that these numbers will be universally used in eastern racing next year.

McGill Will Not Enter Dominion Rugby Play-off

MONTREAL, Nov. 8.—Regardless of the outcome of the University of Toronto-McGill game here Saturday, a tussle in which a win for McGill means the Intercollegiate title, McGill will not take part in the play-offs leading toward the Canadian championship.

This fact has been pretty well accepted, as Red teams in the past which have won the college title have not entered the Dominion finals.

Official notification that McGill would not go further, regardless of the result of Saturday's game was given by Dr. A. S. Lamb, Director of Physical Education at the university, to C. S. Holland, President of the Canadian Football Union, which supervises the Canadian finals.

THEATRES

AT THE CAPITOL.

HIGH CLASS VAUDEVILLE, TOM MIX IN "THE PAINTED POST" AND CHARLIE CHASE IN "IS EVERYBODY HAPPY" AT THE CAPITOL TO-NIGHT. "THE ROYAL ENTERTAINERS" THE STAGE ATTRACTION.

Cole Brothers known upon the stage as "The Royal Entertainers" will be the vaudeville attraction at the Capitol for the last half of this week commencing to-night. This clever team will be heard in song and dance and some excellent banjo playing. The screen feature will be "The Painted Post" with that ever popular western star, Tom Mix. This is considered one of Tom's best pictures in some time. The comedy of the two reel variety will be furnished by Charlie Chase in "Is Everybody Happy." It is a well balanced show and should please all.

AT THE REGENT.

DOLORES COSTELLO STARS IN BIG FOOTBALL FILM NOW SHOWING AT REGENT

Dolores Costello, loveliest of screen stars, in "The College Widow," makes her first venture into the field of light comedy, a venture so successful that it is doubtful whether the public will allow her to remain very far from it in the future. She is cast, as every one who remembers the spectacularly successful George Ade stage pliay, will recall, as the daughter of a college president, who, because of his inability to win athletic laurels for the school, is about to be ejected. The young lady sets about winning men for the team, and so successful is she, that each of the eleven fights as fiercely, as every knight of old, each believing that he is Jane's especial favorite. She wins the son of a rich man who has promised a legacy to the college, from idleness to industry. She loses the faith of the lot of her knights errant, only to win it back and also all she has fought for and more. "The College Widow" is the most delightful college play ever written and Dolores is the most delightful of heroines. Don't miss either.

C.G.E. RUNNERS TO ENTER RACE

White and Blue Team Will Take Part in Senior Ten Mile Relay.

THANKSGIVING PROGRAM.

With eight runners aspiring to a position on the C.G.E. relay team, the boosters of the white and blue monogram are confident that their entry in the senior ten-mile relay on Thanksgiving day will carry off the silverware. Ray Darling, Jim Mitchell and Sam Freeman are three newcomers in the C.G.E. ranks and have been training faithfully under the coaching of Alex. Mitchell, who has taken a keen interest in this branch of athletics during the last few months, and the result of his efforts is reflected in the splendid condition of the runners. The rest of the Harriers, Herb. Tranter, Dick Bates, Grant Palmer, Otto Laderach and Jack Trotter are more experienced in the game and can be relied on to give a good account of themselves in either event, as only four runners are required for the relay. The remainder will enter the three-mile run, which undoubtedly will be the most keenly contested event of the day.

Bowling

Alley Gossip

By Pin Boy

MANUFACTURERS' LEAGUE.

The ten teams in this league clash in league fixtures every Monday night at 8.30 and are in a class by themselves when it comes to displaying bowling ability and enthusiasm.

* * * *

Stock's Breadmakers sent the Raybestos bowling team home talking to themselves as a result of the excellent brand of pin toppling exhibited the winners in Monday night's duel when the dough slingers marched home with 8 points tucked away. Ireland turned in the nicest piece of consistent bowling that has been seen for some time when he made 240, 244 and 250 for a high three total of 734. Chester Grant and Joe Ahern were tied for high single honors for the Rays with 246 apiece, while Grant piled up a nice high trio of 612.

* * * *

The Peterborough Canoe Company's entry in this league sprung a surprise in their battle with the C.G.E. gang, winning the third game by over 200 pins. Searight, T. Taylor and Joe Moran hit their stride in fine style in this game by knocking them over for 307, 233 and 244 respectively.

* * * *

Jack Playford of the C. G. E. is turning out to be another 200 man. In last Monday's game he bowled 254, 263 and 227 for a total of 744, which was high for their league game.

* * * *

A. Shadgett keeps his bowling arm in trim by wielding a paint brush, and judging from his score sheet he is certainly getting results. In this week's tilt between Fitzgerald and Company and the Canadian Woollens, Shadgett plunked the wooden bottles for a total of 622, having every game over 200. These two teams were very evenly matched. Vinette for the Woollens was high man with 267 and 653, while Jack MacDonald showed up well with 255.

* * * *

The "polished maple" sang a merry tune of victory for the Merchants Press, who blanked the Canadian Packers in every game and accounted for 8 more points. S. Curtis was the "shining light" for the Printers, chalking up 641, and McLeod for the Packers was good with 249 and 626.

* * * *

Ackermans had the edge on the Ontario Mable and took 6 out of 8 points despite the clever bowling by Jack Wilson who made 372 in three, just one pin short of high three made by Jack LeBarr with 373. Wilson's score of 229 went for high single.

* * * *

Dave Grant, star pin toppler for the K.R.I. City League quintette of bowlers has been chalking up scores over 200 with a regularity that is worthy of mention. Up to November 1st he has bowled in 12 games, 10 of which were over 200. The exact scores for these ten games were, 200, 225, 236, 271, 232, 209, 221, 235 and 256, a total of 2,316 and an average of 231.6 which is the highest average in the city for this season that has come to our notice.

District Churches

MILLBROOK UNITED CHURCH

MILLBROOK, Nov. 8 (Examiner Correspondence).—Rev. R. M. Paterson of Janetville, a former pastor on the Frazerville circuit, and for some years Grand Chaplain of the Orange Order for Ontario East, had charge of the services in the United Church on Sunday, morning and evening, exchanging pulpits with the pastor, Rev. W. W. Jones, who preached anniversary sermons at Mount Horeb, an appointment belonging to the Janetville charge, on which circuit Mr. Jones at one time served a pastorate.

There was a large congregation at morning worship, an inspiring sermon being preached from Genesis 1, 1: "In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth"; coupled with this, the minister said he also wished to refer to Paul's words in Hebrews 11, 3: "So that things which are seen were not made of things which do appear," and also the first words of John's gospel, "In the beginning."

Asserting his conviction that it is necessary for Christian people to emphatically express their convictions regarding certain books and chapters of the Bible, because of discussions and writings of recent years, Mr. Paterson went on to state that it was not essential that we should know the time of "the beginning," but of paramount importance that we put God at the threshold of time; and be assured in our souls that He was there at the very beginning of all things.

Three facts stand out in the early chapters of Genesis: God, Man, and Sin; we can demonstrate sin, we can show man, but we cannot demonstrate God "Who is and was and evermore shall be." "Our text shows that the heavens and the earth are twins, born of God, and 'What God hath joined together, let not man put asunder.'

"There is no conflict between the two accounts of creation as given in Genesis 1 and 2, but in the one man is shown as divine, 'made in the image of God,' and in the other man is shown as being of the dust of the earth, but God was in the beginning in both instances. When man takes matters affecting his life out of God's hands and into his own control, disaster follows. To reveal His own image in which man had been created, but which seemed to have been almost obliterated from his nature, God sent His Own Son, hoping thereby that this act, which was Love beyond comprehension, might show man the way by whom he may come back to the likeness of his Creator."

"Our business is to reveal Christ; the only discord in all God's universe is caused by sin, and this is eliminated by coming to know God through Him who is the Way, the Truth, and the Life."

"The one great lesson is this: What is put into the beginning of a child's life will be there to the end. Childhood is like a mirror, catching and reflecting images from all around it. Give the little ones the picture of God in Christ Jesus, and let it grow into their very natures, through right example and precept, and it will be there at life's close, interwoven into the fabric of the years, and determining the manner of their eternity."

Stocks Average Lower, Oils Leading Decline

TORONTO, Nov. 8 (Canadian Press).—Declines were general among the stocks traded in on the Toronto Stock Exchange this morning, with oil stock suffering the greatest losses.

British American Oil, which has been the centre of interest in the unlisted section for some time, continued its decline, and at noon was selling at 52⅜, a net loss of 1¼ points. Imperial Oil and International Petroleum suffered losses of 1½ points at 97¼ and 52 respectively, while Beacon Oil was down a half at 22. Northern Bakeries and Super-Petroleum were fractionally lower. International Nickel sold as high as 193¼, but later dropped to 190, down three points. Brazilian, an active feature on the listed section, declined two to 71, and Massey-Harris 1¼ at 57½. British Columbia Power A and Page Hersey showed losses of 1½ and 2½ respectively. Hiram Walker advanced ¾ to 84½.

News From the Mines

Through Solloway, Mills & Company

Sherritt Gordon

Now that it is practically assured that a railway is to be pushed into Sherritt Gordon from the present railroad of The Pas Railroad, it is expected that operations at Sherritt Gordon will take on a more concrete form as soon as the railway is completed. It is quite conceivable that Sherritt Gordon will have to refinance during the coming year. In order to mine and smelt Sherritt's medium grade ore, large scale mining operations will be necessary. The cost of equipping such a mining enterprise will be in the nighborhood of $10,000,000. At the present time there are over 1,300,000 shares of stock in the treasury. This stock will have to be somewhere between $6 and $7 a share to net the money required to bring the property into production.

Noranda

Large blocks of Noranda have been taken off the market in the last month and a half. Recently the stock has had several false moves between $50 and $60. We believe that these false moves are preparatory to an advance of sustained proportions, the foundation of which is being built on the present large short interest that has been accumulated in this stock around its present price. On very few sales yesterday, Noranda's action plainly indicated that the available supply of stock for trading purposes was dangerously slim.

Murphy

The Mail and Empire has the following to say re Murphy Mines on which a report Tuesday stated that $4,00,000 worth of ore had been encountered in the new vein. 'A report yesterday on the results of recent work at Murphy Mines quoted officials as stating that $4,000,000 of ore had been indicated in the new vein alone. In an interview Tuesday night, Draper Dobie, Vice-President of the Company, claimed that such a report had not been issued by any official. "Any mining man knows that ore must be proven by actual development work and assays," he said. "Regardless of favorable indications and values obtained to date, work at the Murphy has not advanced far enough to permit of any such estimate being made." Crosscutting is now under way at the 100 foot level from the new shaft.'

Treadwell Yukon

In the current number of the Engineering and Mining Journal, President F. W. Bradley, of Treadwell Yukon, discusses the Terrington mine of Sudbury at some length, Mr. Bradley estimates that the present grade of ore so far developed averages $18 per ton and should show a profit of $5 a ton throughout. At the No. 1 shaft, three separate orebodies are being stopped on the 300 foot level, and on the 500 foot level a crosscut is being extended. At the No. 2 shaft development has been restricted to the 500 foot level, where the main crosscut, 1,300 feet long, has been intersected four veins in a zone 480 feet wide. Considerable work has to be done on these veins yet before any conclusion can be arrived at. Operations at the No. 3 shaft have been confined to the 400 foot level, where a crosscut is being pushed towards a vein 1,140 feet away.

The present capacity of the mill is 300 tons per day, but not effort is being made to use this capacity during the experimental stage. Mr. Bradley further states that the milling problem has been solved. There yet remains the work of perfecting it.

Newbec

Drilling operations on Newbec have been suspended for the winter months. A great deal of trouble has been experienced in supplying the drill with sufficient water. Starting to-day, two shifts are to be used in deepening the shaft from its present depth of 70 feet to a depth of 250 feet.

Mining Briefs

A Special Service to The Examiner

Capital Rouyn is occupying a prominent place on the mining board these days. This activity follows reports of the finding of a new and rich vein at about the centre of the Rouyn property. A contract for the sinking of a shaft on their Sudbury property has already been let and an extensive development programme is getting underway.

Surface work is being carried out on the northeast corner of the Pandora Gold Limited's property. A new vein was picked up recently by the adjoining Tonawanda Syndicate and it is thought that this cuts across the Pandora property. The shaft is now down about 100 feet, on it's way to the 500-foot horizon. The property is in the Cadillac-Malartic-Dubuisson gold area of Quebec and is said to be on the line of strike of the O'Brien and Thompson-Cadillac properties.

Tonawanda Exploration Syndicate ties on to the Pandora on two sides and they are at present centreing attention upon surface development, trenching, stripping etc. The Syndicate is capitalized at four thousand units of a par value of twenty-five dollars each. New Liskeard men are behind the venture and the head office is in that town.

Preparations are being made for the installation of a 100-ton concentrating plant on the properties of the Summerville Lead Mines Limited, in Victoria County, Ontario. It is expected that this mill will be in operation soon. Approximately 300 feet of drifting has been carried out on the 110-foot level and this is said to have revealed a good body of ore. The ore is of high grade character. The head office of this company has been removed from Toronto to Galt. Summerville is conservately capitalized at $600,000 in shares of a par value of $1.00 each, with approximately 180,000 shares remaining in the treasury.

The Bedford claims of the Goldbanks Syndicate have been optioned to an Ottawa organization known as the Goldsides Mining Corporation. A cash payment has been made already and this is to be followed by further cash payments together with a stock consideration The claims were staked by Harry Bedford and were later optioned by C. W. Baker and J. H. Sharman for the Goldbanks Syndicate. However, should the further payments involved in the recent deal be met the control will pass to the Goldsides interests. The work completed so far on the Bedford claims is said to have disclosed a long break in which an ore shoot occurs. The new interests have taken in another crew of men and intend pushing exploration as rapidly as possible.

Following upon the favorable results obtained in their survey of the Vipond, the Financial News Bureau understands that the Radiore Company of Canada will enter the Cadillac-Malartic field.

Stocks Gain Heavily, Much Profit Taking

NEW YORK, November 8 (Canadian Press). — The "Hoover market," which got off to a flying start yesterday, continued to press forward to-day under an avalanche of buying in copper, oil, motor, merchandising, and food issues. Fear that technical reaction would follow the initial celebrating of the Hoover victory inpired profit-taking in a few issues, which dropped two to eight points, but the general list pointed upward with gains ranging from one to twelve points. General Motors again became the centre of speculative interest. Heavy buying carried it up more than three points to 224, but heavy profit-taking was encountered around that level, and part of the gain was cancelled. All sorts of guesses as to the dividend action were circulated. Mack Trucks and Chrysler also moved up smartly and Brockway Motors attained a new peak.

Call money was in plentiful supply with renewal figures of six prices, but some uneasiness was apparent over the weekly Federal Reserve brokers' loan figures to be published after the close. Famous Players ran up two points to a new top at 92¼ on unconfirmed reports that new stocks would be placed on a $3.00 annual basis at the meeting next week.

Greene Canada Copper ran up eight and a half points. New high prices in the copper group were established by American Smelting, Cerro De Pasco, Magma, Miami, Calumet and Hecla, Calumet and Arizona, Nevada and others. In the oil group, new highs were recorded by Amerada, Mid-Continent, White Eagle, Texas Coal Oil, Shell Union, and Simms.

Trading Active—Prices Steady On the Standard

TORONTO, Nov. 8. — (Canadian Press.) — Trading was more active than yesterday on the standard stock and mining exchange with the price steady. Bathurst continued its upward movement and gained a half to 37. Newbec sales at noon exceeded yesterday's total transactions over 16,000 with a gain of ¼ to 26¼. Amulet advanced 12 at 2.97 and Dome Mines ten to 8.50, though there was little demand. After opening at 9.10 Hollinger Consolidated fell back to 9.00 for a net gain over yesterday of twenty cents. Teck Hughes was up 15 to 8.75. Noranda, Granada Rouyn, Barry Hollinger, Lake Shore, Murphy, Sherritt-Gordon, Sudbury Basin were unchanged while Howey Gold dropped two at 93, Kirkland Lake a similar amount to 1.06. McIntyre 9 to 20.05. Pawnee gained one to 11, Malartic four to 1.20 and Vipond one to 61, while Wright Hargreaves dropped 5 to 2.55. Abana was down 5 at 3.65. Jackson-Manion half at 35¼ and Pend Oreille 25 at 10.75 on the unlisted. Mandy gained four to 1.30, while Big Missouri, Hudson Bay and Coast Copper were unchanged.

Good Crop Prospects Lowers Wheat Prices

CHICAGO, Nov. 8 (Canadian Press).—Sympathizing with the trend in Liverpool quotations, wheat averaged lower to-day during the early dealings here. Declines were associated with favorable crop prospects for the new southern hemisphere. Opening 1-8 to 5-8 off, Chicago wheat later held near to initial figures. Corn and oats were relatively firm. Corn starting at 1-8 to 3-8 set-back but afterward scoring gains.

Wheat, Dec. 112 7-8, March 118; corn, Dec. 82, March 84¾; oats, Dec. 43 3-8, March 43 7-8.

TOTAL ENROLLMENT, 740

Editor, The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—The account of the meeting of the Board of Education in last night's issue was inaccurate as regards the report of the attendance at the Collegiate Institute and Vocational School. The correct figures are as follows: Total enrolment 740, average daily attendance, 719 or 97 per cent. 417 were enrolled in the academic department and 323 in the vocational department. In the vocational department 100 were enrolled in the industrial and household arts course, and 223 in the commercial course. The exact number taking the vocational night classes has not been determined as all fees have not yet been paid. In all probability the yet been paid. nI all probability the number will be in the neighborhood of 700.

Yours truly
H. R. H. KENNER.

IN MEMORIAM.

MILLAR. — In memory of a loving husband and father, James Millar, who departed this life November 8 1926.

"We weep with grief that one so dear
No more can share our smile or tear,
But weep with joy that God has given
The hope to meet again in heaven.

But call it not death, it is life begun,
The waters are past, the home is won,
The ransomed spirit has reached the shore,
Where they weep and suffer and sin no more."

KIWANIS CLUB HONORS ARMISTICE

CANADA'S GLORIOUS DEAD LIFT CROSS OF SACRIFICE AS SUMMONS TO 'CARRY ON'

Fighting Instincts of the Nation Should Be Turned Against the Things That Cause War, Says Speaker at Noon-Day Luncheon To-day.

TENTH ANNIVERSARY HAS PECULIAR SIGNIFICANCE RECALLING AGAIN THE PLEDGES TO THE FALLEN

Splendid Deeds of Canadians Recounted, and Sufferings of Those Who Gave Loved Ones Recalled—But Their Sacrifice Did Not End Duty.

(By W. J. E.)

A signal that the peoples of the earth should no longer war, one with another—that after four years of bitter conflict, the world was to be set free from the curse of war—and that Canadians, the bravest of the brave should turn from their pursuance of battle to rebuilding of their Own Dominion—the greatest Armistice in history was signed ten years ago. To-day, speaking before his fellow members of the Peterborough Kiwanis club, Lieutenant John R. Heron, of the 3rd Company, Machine Gun Corps, declared that on this, the tenth anniversary of the Armistice, Canadians may look back to sorrows and hardships as yet unsolaced, and to glorious deeds that will never tarnish, and on the score of their record in the great war, plead at the bar of History, unchallenged—the time, looking forward to that day when war may be abolished forever from the categories of human crimes.

It was after Charles H. Leslie, of Toronto, and Douglas Carlisle, of this city, had favored the gathering with splendid vocal numbers in keeping with the spirit of armistice, that Captain John A. Dewart began the discharge of his pleasant duty—that of introducing the speaker of the day. In so doing, he reminded his listeners of the career of the soldier speaker before, during, and after the war.

A Significant Day.

Declaring his object to be the recalling of the memory of Peterborough's war dead that they might be fittingly honored, Mr. Heron pointed out the particular significance of this tenth anniversary of Armistice Day. "Ten years ago," he said, "we were still waging the most devastating war that the world had ever seen. To-day we pay honor to the men who fell in that war, and ten years from to-day—who knows—war may be abolished forever from the categories of human crimes. This midway point has a particular significance. No anniversary can be quite the same as the tenth. To-day there are thousands of men in Peterborough who went through that war; there are thousands of homes in Peterborough where the memory of a loved one lingers as though he had marched away only yesterday. This is a generation that cannot forget, and would not if it could, the stirring days of a decade and more ago. Ten years hence, the memories will have been blunted; sorrows will have been solaced, and we who remember will have passed on, many of us, to meet those whom to-day we recall."

Many reasons were given why the men enlisted, the speaker remarked, and doubtless every man had reasons of his own. To him, however, it appears the Canadians, at any rate, recognized it as the thing to do. No one can pin the medal of patriotism on a soldier; it was not adventure that attracted the men; and certainly the fact that thousands of others were dying was no inducement to these men to die. "It has been said that the First Contingent was composed of men who were out of work and had nothing else to do, but this answers itself in the glorious deeds of that First Contingent at Givenchy, Festubert and St. Julien. In the first six months of the war they left thirty-six hundred dead in the fields over which they had fought. There were 8,000 more wounded in that period, or

JUDGE ORDERS TORAL TO FACE FIRING PARTY

Mother Superior Is Sentenced To Twenty Years' Imprisonment As Intellectual Author.

APPEAL NOTIFIED.

Jurymen Are Refused By Court Request For Protection After Trial.

SAN ANGEL, Mexico, Nov. 9. —(Canadian Press).—While a crowd of one thousand cheered and applauded a jury in the district court of San Angel at 4:50 yesterday afternoon returned a verdict of guilty in the case of Jose de Leon Toral, charged with murder in connection with his assassination of General Alvaro Obregon, Mexico's President-elect, and the nun Concepcion, accused as "intellectual author" of the crime.

Sentences of death by firing squad for Toral and twenty years imprisonment for Mother Concepsion were immediately handed down by the Judge of the court, the Defense Attorney Sedi announcing that he would appeal to the Mexican Supreme Court.

Toral's only motion as the verdict was read was to wet his lips with his tongue; Mother Concepsion dropped her eyes and sat motionless. Both were calm.

Five Days Allowed

The court allowed the defense five days in which to perfect its appeal. It was said that if the San Angel court's verdict is sustained by the higher tribunal the date and place for the execution of Toral probably will be fixed by the Governor of the Federal District.

The verdict of guilty for Toral was unanimous but Mother Cencepsion was convicted by a vote of eight to one, the jury being composed of nine men—mostly workmen. Under Mexican law a majority verdict is sufficient to convict.

Seeks Protection

In the near confusion in the courtroom a spokesman for the jury asked the Judge to give them guards to escort them home. The Judge answered that this was unnecessary but the jury insisted with the words "there are lots of fanatics around."

"You have performed your duty and returned a fair verdict," the Judge answered them. "The nation applauds you and you do not need guards."

THREE PERISH IN MOUNT ETNA LAVA STREAMS

Town of 10,000 People Is Mass of Lava and Shooting Flames.

FASCINATING SPECTACLE.

Villages and Fertile Fields Are Overwhelmed By Molten Discharge.

CATANIA, Sicily, Oct. 9 (Canadian Press).—Mascali, once the home of 10,000 persons, to-day was a mass of lava and shooting flames. Three persons whose escape was cut off perished in the molten stream rolling down the slopes of Mount Etna.

The onrush of the three principal lava streams which had threatened the region between Mascali and the sea, however, seemed to have diminished in intensity.

The disaster so stunned the simple folk of the countryside that the Gendarmes and firemen sent to the scene from Catania sometimes found it necessary to use force to drive them to places of safety. Efforts were being made to calm the terror-stricken people.

Fascinating Spectacle.

The spectacle of relentlessly flowing lava seemed to exercise a terrible fascination on the men and beasts. A number of cats were lured into Mascali by the fiery sight and destroyed by the molten mass. Birds which hovered over the river of lava were caught by the fumes and fluttered down into the fire like dead leaves.

Several companies of engineer troops were trying to lay mines in order to form trenches and thus divert the flow of the molten stream.

Thousands of spectators came from all over Sicily and Calabria. They were obliged to park their cars far from the scene of destruction and proceed on foot.

Heavy Property Damage

Although heavy property damage has been caused in the overflowing of fertile fields and several small villages, the loss of life was small, only three deaths being reported.

The onrush of the three principal lava streams, which for a time threatened the whole region between Mascali and the sea, seemed to have diminished in intensity to-day. They were then making between ten and twelve yards an hour. This slowing up of the flow was attributed to variations in the nature of the ground, which caused the three branches to deviate from their course.

The branch which last night overran a cemetery was proceeding faster than the central current, and it was impossible to predict its future course.

Wish to Remove Body

Pathetic incidents in Mascali were numerous. Last night two poor peasant women tearfully begged permission of the authorities to disinter the body of one of their relatives in order to bury it in a safer place. The ad-

FOUR PERMITS FOR BUILDINGS

Fred Rowan Receives Permission To Build New Garage For G. A. Gillespie.

ERECTS THREE HOMES.

Four outstanding permits for building in the city have been issued from the City Engineer's office to Fred H. Rowan, contractor, a total expenditure of $14,000 being represented.

The new public garage to be erected at 378 Aylmer street for G. A. Gillespie with an estimated cost of $5,000, was provided for on one of the permits. The new building, to be erected on the site of the old church, recently taken down, will be 42 feet square, and will be of brick and steel construction on cement foundation. It will be 23 feet high and of two stories, supported by 18 pillars. Tar and gravel will be the materials used for roofing and the date of completion has been set for January 1, 1929.

Three New Houses.

The three other permits secured by Mr. Rowan was to provide for the erection of three new dwellings on Rogers street, each to cost approximately $3,000 and to be completed by April 1, 1929.

East of the new houses will be of brick and stucco on cement foundation 26 feet long and 21 feet wide, and two stories in heigh. Six rooms, with interior walls of lathe and plaster, finished in pine, will be heated by means of hot air systems while the chimneys will of brick, flue lined. Asphalt and slate will be used as roofing.

The Silent Toast

The scene at Kiwanis Club luncheon to-day, when the speaker gave the toast, "Our Glorious Dead," recalls the poem by Canon Scott, the "Grand Old Man" of the First Canadian Division:

"They stand with reverent faces,
And their merriment gives o'er,
As they drink the toast to the unseen host
Who have fought and gone before.

It is only a passing moment
In the midst of the feast and song,
But it grips the breath, as the wings of death
In a vision sweeps along.

No more they see the banquet
And the brilliant lights around;
But they charge again on the hideous plain
When the shell-bursts rip the ground.

Or they creep at night, like panthers,
Through the waste of No Man's Land,
Their hearts afire with a wild desire
And death on every hand.

And out of the roar and tumult,
Or the black night loud with rain,
Some face comes back on the fiery track
And looks in their eyes again.

Again the love that is passing women's
And the bonds that are forged by death,
Now grip the soul with a strange control
And speak that no man saith.

The vision dies off in the stillness,
Once more the tables shine,
But the eyes of all in the banquet hall
Are lit with a light divine."

MEMBER PLANS TO TAKE LAND

British Commoner Suggests Scheme For Empire Settlement of Unemployed.

DEBATED IN HOUSE.

LONDON, Nov. 9 (Special Cable by Henry Sommerville).—The suggestion that the British Government take over certain territory in Canada and the other Dominions, and supervise the settlement of immigrants from the Old Land upon it, was voiced in the House of Commons by Sir C. Ellis, Conservative member for Wakefield.

"If our colonies," he declared, "are not prepared to take a large part in that distribution of population which is essential if the Empire is to continue to exist, we should take it into our own hands as a nation and attempt to get them to give us some portion of their territory for us to deal with in our own way."

The suggestion was put forward in yesterday's debate which Rt. Hon. Winston Churchill, Chancellor of the Exchequer, opened by defending the Government's efforts to solve the unemployment problem and referred to the arrangements with the steamship companies for a reduction in the third-class fare. He declared that the British migrants paying these cheap fares would be regarded by the Canadian Immigration Department as though they had paid the full fare.

"This means that they will turn the Hindenburg line of regulations which assisted settlers to cut through," Mr. Churchill said, "and they will be able to seek employment in Canadian towns instead of being drafted to the farms."

Mr. Churchill repeated that the Government was prepared to spend from £3,500,000 to £4,000,000 yearly on Empire settlement.

The back benchers and Opposition put forward Tom Shaw, Laborite, to answer Mr. Churchill. Mr. Shaw gave his blessing to the scheme for taking a large district like the Peace River for colonization. He was followed by Mr. Ellis with his more ambitious suggestion.

PRISONER TAKEN.

Escaped From Woodstock Jail While Serving Term For Auto Theft.

WOODSTOCK, Ont., Nov. 9 (Canadian Press).—Two hours after he escaped from the local jail while serving sentence for the theft of an automobile, Archibald Mackenzie, of Toronto, was captured in Stratford to-day. The prisoner with others was working at the court house near the jail. When a car was left standing at the rear of the building, he jumped in it and drove off, pursued by the police.

WINS AUTUMN CUP.

LIVERPOOL, Nov. 9 (Canadian Press).—Plantago, owned by W. M. G. Singer, won the Autumn Cup to-day. J. D. Robertson's Premtitude was second and L. Hemann's Saturn third.

6,000 MINERS BEING TRAINED

Minister Says Attempt Being Made To Place Immigrants in Canadian Towns.

PROGRAM IS CRITICIZED

LONDON, Nov. 9 (Canadian Press Cable).—The British Government is to negotiate with the Canadian Government so that the doors may be opened to people who want to go as workers to towns in Canada without agricultural training, Sir Arthur Steel Maitland, Minister of Labor, declared in a debate on unemployment in the House of Commons to-day.

He said it was hoped at least four thousand such people could go to Canada within the next six months. He also hoped to send five or six thousand miners trained in agriculture for farm work in Canada in the same period.

The Minister intimated that unemployment in mining areas would be reduced by at least 45,000 men in the next six months. "Unemployment in Germany, Russia and the United States is at least as great as here," he said.

Saw Men Imprisoned.

Rt. Hon. Thomas Shaw, Labor member for Preston, spoke of the British miner harvester migrating.

He declared he had seen men imprisoned in a room in Winnipeg, with filthy beds, without blankets. On the other hand, he said there was undoubtedly an attempt to preach "damnable doctrines."

Mr. Shaw believed arrangements should be made for community life in colonization schemes. He came back, he said, struck by the abounding wealth of the people in Canada.

ENTHRONEMENT OF JAPANESE EMPEROR COSTLY CEREMONY

KYOTO, Japan, Nov. 9.—(Canadian Press.)—Enthronement of the Emperor of Japan, the oldest and most solemn state ceremony among modern great Powers, is also the most costly. To celebrate the accession of Hirohito, 124th Emperor, will cost $12,000,000. Preliminary ceremonies, including the triumphal progress from Tokyo to the ancient capital, have taken place throughout the week. The actual coronation will be to-morrow.

Carload Of Paper Lost; No Armistice Number To-day

The Examiner regrets that owing to non-delivery of a car-load of newsprint it has been found impossible to print the Armistice Number to-day. The paper was ordered in plenty of time, and should have arrived a week ago. Efforts made to trace the car failed last night, and to-day The Examiner found itself short of nearly a hundred miles of paper.

It is hoped that the car will arrive in time to print this special number to-morrow.

MEMORIAL DAY PROGRAM TO BE HEARD BY RADIO

Great Remembrance Festival Will Be Broadcast From Albert Hall.

ROYALTY ATTEND.

Great Audience Will Assemble at 8.30—Ceremonies Commence at Nine O'clock.

London, Eng., Nov. 9.—(Special to Examiner).—If radio reception is good on Sunday night listeners throughout the Empire will be able to follow the remembrance festival in Albert Hall, London, which the King and Queen will attend. The listeners may imagine a vast circular building holding eight thousand people who are seated in tier rising upon tier from the ground, floor to the roof. There is a wide space along the floor from the main door to the platform. The audience will assemble at 8:30 and the Guards band will play until nine o'clock, five minutes later the broadcast service begins when trumpeters sound a fanfare from the centre of hall to be echoed back from the top balcony by a solo trumpeter.

Lights Lowered

The lights are then lowered and no sound is made in the hall but from the outside will come strains of an approaching band, voices of soldiers singing and the tramp of marching feet. Then the lights go up and the troops enter the hall. They march up wide centre space as the front line bands play and the audience joins in singing "Are We Downhearted"; "Take Me Back to Dear Old Blighty"; "Pack Up Your Troubles"; "Keep the Home Fires Burning"; "The Long Trail" and "Tipperary". During an interval in this community singing the kilted London Scottish with colours flying and pipes playing march through the hall, finally the massed bands play and the audience sing "Land of Hope and Glory."

At 9:40 Sullivan's "In Memoriam" is played by the bands and the organ. At 9:50 Admiral Jellicoe speaks for seven minutes before the lights are again lowered and the bands play Choppins "Funeral March". The hall still darkened when two hundred choristers in robes enter singing "Lead Kindly Light." At 10:09 Rev. Mr. Sheppard gives an address; at 10:17 the audience sings "O' God Our Help in Ages Past"; at 10:22 there is an anthem by the choir. At 10:30 prayers are offered by the Bishop of London. At 10:38 the audience sings "Nearer My God to Thee". At 10:42 there is the entrance of the flags of the Dominions and the Colonies each with an armed escort who form up round the Union Jack. At 10:45 there is a hymn "Abide With Me" and the lights gradually fade for the sounding at 10:50 of the Last Post. There is half a minutes silence followed by Reveille and then all present join in singing "God Save The King"

GAMBLER LEFT SILENT PLEDGE

Rothstein Enjoined His Attorney Not To Reveal Name of Assassin.

OWED $305,000

NEW YORK, Nov. 9.—Arnold Rothstein was buried yesterday, and after the simple service in a Brooklyn cemetery the police disclosed that the slain gambler had left behind a pledge of silence to shield his slayer.

Mute himself when the police asked who had shot him in a room in the Park Central Hotel last Sunday night, the shooting furnishing the climax of efforts by other gamblers to collect $305,000 owed by Rothstein, it developed that he had enjoined his attorney, Maurice P. Cantor, from speaking.

"I don't want to answer any questions," he said. "I don't want to know who you are. I will not make any statement."

Detective Patrick Flood said that he had been equally unsuccessful in questioning the attorney, who talked to Rothstein in Polyclinic Hospital for an hour on Monday and who was with him just before he died on Tuesday morning.

"Of course," said Flood, "it is the belief that before he died Rothstein confided in Cantor. I saw Cantor. I talked with him. I asked him if he would help us solve the crime. His answer was, 'Rothstein told me not to talk. I am bound to follow his wishes in that respect'."

City Improvements And Future Policy Are Ably Discussed

Mayor Denne and Council Are Lauded For the Services Rendered and the Busin ess Like Administration During Their T erm of Office.

CO-OPERATION TO MAKE A BIGGER AND BETTER CITY IS KEYNOTE OF MR. DUTTON'S ADDRESS AT BANQUET

Public Questions of Importance Aiming at a Greater Forward Movement of Progress For City Are Considered By Those Present.

That the City Council and the Chamber of Commerce are both alive to the needs of the City of Peterborough and are doing their utmost to meet these needs and improve the city in every possible way was amply proven at the banquet last evening when the members of the City Council were the guests of the Chamber of Commerce in the Empress Hotel. Various phases of city improvement and policy were fully discussed and many new ideas of a concrete nature brought forward for the betterment of the city and the common weal. Close co-operation between the City Council and the Chamber of Commerce for the public benefit was in broad evidence on every hand.

The work of Mayor Denne and the City Council was lauded; and a full expression of appreciation of their services during their term of office, their business-like administration, their wide-awake efforts to secure new industries, and their co-operation with any effort to make Peterborough a bigger city and a better place to live in was given by James Dutton, President of the Chamber of Commerce, who acted as chairman.

A wide range of subjects all dealing with public questions of great importance and all aiming at great forward movement of progress in the city were discussed. Old Home Week received the first consideration and the members of the Chamber of Commerce pledged themselves ready to do all in their power to make this a great success. The benefits to the city of Old Home Week in the way of advertising to the world, the progressiveness and co-operation of its citizens and the opportunities it gave to show the Old Boys and Girls of Peterborough, who will visit the city during that week, the improvements accomplished during their absence were pointed out in the discussion. The problem of traffic regulations on George street, a down-town woman's rest room, improvements to the tourist camp, and a successful advertising campaign of the city were some of the big needs that received close attention in the discussion.

Appreciates the Co-operation

President Dutton, in welcoming the mayor and members of the Council, expressed his appreciation of the Mayor's and Council's hearty co-operation with any proposals to the city's welfare brought forward by the Chamber of Commerce. He also said that he has full confidence in the Mayor and his associates on the Council, and he thought that they had given one of the best and most business-like administrations the city had ever had. He complimented them on the manner in which they had beautified the city and also their energetic efforts to induce new industries to locate here—efforts that did not always prove successful, but that were constantly being made.

Makes Suggestions

Mr. Dutton said that the purpose of the get-together supper was to talk over various suggestions that the Chamber of Commerce wished to make. He read letters in answer to a questionaire sent out by the local Chamber to the Chamber of Commerce in the other cities in the province to find out how they co-operated with their city councils and what financial aid they received from their councils, if any. The answers all expressed the existence of co-operation, and the following is the list with the population and grants received:

Alexandria	2,195	$ 100.00
Border Cities	58,704	2,150.00
Brockville	10,043	500.00

UNITED CHURCH IS SUBJECT OF FINE ADDRESS

Rev. Dr. Gandier Discusses World's Missions at Large Gathering.

FOREIGN AFFAIRS.

Speaker Makes Strong Plea For Greater Efforts On Part of Congregations.

First-hand knowledge of the world's mission fields were the basis of a most interesting and informing address in St. Andrew's Church last night. Coming here in connection with the United Church week, the Rev. Dr. A. Gandier, M.A., D.D., LL.D., of Toronto, spoke from a wealth of knowledge gained during fifteen years as chairman of the Foreign Mission Board of the Presbyterian Church, and during a visit to China, Formosa, Korea and Japan in company with the Rev. James Endicott, D.D., LL.D., then Moderator of the United Church of Canada.

Last night's meeting in St. Andrew's Church was quite as large as those of the first three nights of the week, and with the Rev. David Wren of Trinity Church presiding, got away to a good start, on time. Mr. Wren voiced the appreciation of the Men's Association for the splendid support accorded all the meetings. Two outside ministers, the Reverends McConnachie and Harrington, were invited to take charge of the Bible reading and prayer, while under the leadership of Charles H. Leslie, the singing was wholehearted and inspirational.

Rev. Dr. Gandier.

"The United Church — What It Is and What We Hope to Make It," was the subject chosen by the Rev. Dr. Gandier, and after expressing his pleasure at being present for such an unusual gathering as this United Church week had provided, "In setting aside our Methodist-Presbyterian differences, and becoming free from denomination in Union, our loyalty to Jesus Christ has been responsible," said the speaker, who went on to thank God that denominational arbitrations had been set aside, leaving nothing to stand in the way of Christ. "Christ for the world, and the world for Christ!" he declared.

Dr. Gandier went on to speak of the different foreign affairs of the United Church with all parts cooperating, declaring that the Church's missionary effort has been the finest example of its unity.

But more than that, the new

Hungary's Feminine Aristocracy Wages Merciless War On Baccarat As Family Heirlooms Are Pawned

BUDAPEST, Nov. 9.—Hungary's feminine aristcrocy has declared a merciless war on baccarat. Aroused by the danger threatening the family fortunes which find their way into the "cagnotte" ((cash box) of the gambling clubs of gay Budapest, they have formed a society to combat the gambling activities of their husbands. The primary object of the organization is to expose to public scorn the 100 or more clubs which flourish in this city.

Five of the best known clubs of the capital where millions of dollars are won and lost were recently raided by the police. The fair members of the anti-gambling organization have engaged private detectives to shadow their husbands and report to them the places they haunt. Many a precious family heirloom has found its way to the pawnshop to furnish money to the gamblers.

In the last few weeks four prominent business men took their lives when the wheel of fortune went against them. One slashed his throat, another took poison, and the two last fired a bullet into their heads.

Children To Teach Non-English Speaking Parents; Series of Lesson Leaflets Has Been Arranged

NEW YORK, Nov. 9.—A system of teaching English to the foreign born in their own homes by using their children as instructors, as sponsored by the Allied Patriotic Societies, has been adopted by Dr. William J. O'Shea, Superintendent of Schools, it was said yesterday. The announcement was made in a report of the societies' Committee on Education at the monthly conference of the organization yesterday. Children in ten public schools, to be designated soon, will receive a series of forty-one lesson leaflets, constituting a home study course for their parents, in which they will be the teachers.

The progress of the work is to be carefully and periodically checked by the children's public school teachers. Successful completion of the course will make it easy for anyone to pass the literacy test requisite to citizenship, the Chairman of the Committee on Education said yesterday. It was announced that the plan would go into effect as soon as the leaflets could be printed and distributed.

Cobourg Jury Finds Corkum Guilty

TORONTO MAN FOUND GUILTY FINED $1,000

Case Arose Out of Fatal Accident On Provincial Highway West of Port Hope.

JURY OUT THREE HOURS.

Accused Faced Charge of Criminal Negligence—Liquor Found in Car.

COBOURG, Nov. 9. — Finis was written last night at the Cobourg Fall Assizes of the Supreme Court, to a sensational day. John L. Corkum, Stephenson avenue, Toronto, was fined $1,000 by Mr. Justice Raney on a charge of criminal negligence, arising out of a fatal accident on the Provincial Highway west of Port Hope, on September 17, when the accused crashed into a buggy driven by Mrs. A. E. Symons, instantly killing her. The verdict was given after three hours deliberations to a cleared courtroom.

His Lordship said that he did not desire to imprison Corkum, crack engineer of the Canadian National, who piloted the heir to the British Throne and Queen Marie of Rumania over the Ottawa division of the Canadian National.

Retires at 6 o'Clock

At 6 o'clock the criminal negligence charge against Corkum went to the jury.

After the defense counsel and Crown prosecutor had addressed the jury, Mr. Justice Raney, the presiding judge, took the responsibility of telling the jury not to convict the accused on the first cause of causing bodily harm by wilful, wanton and furious driving, but to direct their attention to the second part of the indictment of negligent management of a motor car.

The Crown voiced its opinion regarding the testimony of Inspector Elliott of the Liquor Control Board who interviewed Corkum regarding his permit.

Sebriety Questioned

Chief of Police Thomas Murphy of Port Hope and A. J. Chesher, who had charge of the accused at the lock-up, stated that Corkum was apparently sober, but worried. Traffic Officer G. Hallick saw Corkum the night of the fatality, and he did not appear to be normal. "I smelled liquor on his breath, and I asked him what he had been drinking, and he said nothing. I told him he was lieing, and that he was under arrest." Cross-examined, the witness did not not think he was intoxicated.

For the first time since the fatality John Corkum took the stand at 1.55 o'clock yesterday afternoon in his own defense. He said he was driving at 30.35 miles on hour, and did not see the light on the Symons buggy. He stated that there was a half-filled bottle of gin in his car, and threw the bottle out before he got out of the auto after the crash. "I did not want the liquor found in the car," added Corkum.

M. J. Osborne, who resides a few rods west of the spot of the tragedy, said it was more dark than light when the smash came. F. Keesee corroborated this statement. The latter swore than the accused man's car was not exceeding the speed limit immediately before the fatality.

William Moore of the Canadian National Railways, Ottawa Division, said Corkum was an efficient and experienced engineer, and exceptionally careful in the exercise of his duties. W. R. Kelly, Superintendent of the Canadian National Railways, Ottawa Division, stated that the accused was a competent employee, and always selected Corkum to take charge of any special trains.

"In fact," continued Mr. Kelly, "I selected him from 50 men to pilot the Prince of Wales and Queen Marie of Rumania recent visits to Canada."

Hunters Return Home With Full Quota Of Deer

(Examiner Correspondence)

MADOC, Nov. 9.—The first deer of the season passed through Madoc last night. A group of hunters, having obtained their quota of game from the north country, returned home with six deer, carried on a trailer. Deer are reported plentiful, but dogs which are numerous, have driven the deer from the shelter of the woods to the more open country.

DEPARTING MEMBER HONORED BY CHOIR

Mrs. Hubert Lawrie Presented With Mantel Clock on Eve of Departure.

CAMPBELLFORD, Nov. 10 (Examiner Staff Correspondence).—Members of Christ Church choir and Sunday school were the guests of Miss Ethel Bedford on Wednesday evening. The time passed quickly with cards and music as the means of entertainment. Among those present was Mrs. Hubert Lawrie, and it was in her honor that the party was given. A few days ago it was announced that Mr. and Mrs. Hubert Lawrie would soon be leaving town to take up their residence in Toronto. For the past three years, Mr. Lawrie has been the accountant in the local branch of the Bank of Montreal, and is now about to assume a new position on the Toronto staff. During their time of residence in Campbellford, the Lawries have enjoyed much popularity among a wide circle of friends. Outside the bank, Mr. Lawrie has gained an enviable reputation as a marksman, and delights in frequent hunting and fishing trips. Mrs. Lawrie has been a capable and faithful worker in the interest of Christ Church, having been a member of its choir, of its Woman's Auxiliary, a leader of the Willing Workers and a teacher in the Sunday School. As a mark of appreciation and a remembrance, about twenty-five of her friends from the choir and the Auxiliary presented Mrs. Lawrie with a beautiful mantel clock Wednesday night. There was no formal speech of presentation, but everyone expressed their pleasure at being present and described the evening as most enjoyable. Lunch was served after the card playing.

Pet Lamb Enjoys Itself When Mixing With Family

(Examiner Correspondence)

BONARLAW, Nov. 9.—A pet lamb, owned by Jack Wellman who resides near Bonarlaw, has become very domesticated. It eats bread and butter, pie, pickles and is very fond of onions. When very young it used to ride in Mr. Wellman's motor car, sitting in the seat beside the driver. When it could not get in the car, it would be seen lying near the fender and would rap with its little feet on the running board. Whenever the lamb is spoken to, it always replies with its Ba! ba! The lamb is kept near the dwelling, tethered to a stake.

OLD RESIDENT CELEBRATES 91 BIRTHDAYS

John McDonald, of Dunsford, Was Born in Victoria County in 1837.

CLEARED LAND.

Mr. and Mrs. McDonald Will Soon Have Been Married 66 Years.

(Examiner Correspondence)

DUNSFORD, Nov. 9.—John McDonald, of the Scotch Line, Verulam Township, Victoria County, who is a descendant of the MacDonald clan of the land and one of the oldest and best known residents of the county recently celebrated his 91st birthday. Mr. McDonald who was born about two miles from his present home on October 31st, 1837, has lived 70 years at his present home and all his life in the community with the exception of ten years spent in the town of Lindsay. He helped cut down the forest and clear the land from which he afterwards had the joy and satisfaction of cutting with the cradle, fall wheat which yielded over fifty bushels to the acre. He can relate many thrilling stories of the howling of wolves and the ravages of wild animals which during his younger days were very plentiful around their home. Mrs. McDonald (nee Letissua Lithgow) who was born about three miles from her present home, states that in carrying water for house use from a spring about a mile distant through the woods she endeavored to keep with the cattle to avoid attacks of wolves and other wild beasts which were commonly found sleeping upon the door step of their habitation.

Mr. McDonald has the use of all his faculties and is smart for his age. He has been on easy street for many years and for sometime has not engaged in any active work.

Mr. and Mrs. McDonald were married nearly 66 years ago. They have four daughters and two son. Peter, of Taft, California; William, at home; Mrs. Nicholas Tully, Bobcaygeon; Mrs. James Morrison, Lindsay; Mrs. David Maunders, Toronto; and Miss Minnie at home. There are three grandchildren.

LODGE HOLDS ANNUAL SOCIAL

Toronto Entertainer Delights Very Large Audience in Sentinel Hall.

PROCEEDS $215.

(Examiner Correspondence)

PETHERICKS CORNERS, Nov. 9.—John Kelly, of Toronto, ventriloquist and comic entertainer, assisted by Mrs. Kelly attracted a large crowd to the annual pie social of L.O.L. 2322. Seldom has Sentinel Hall held a crowd of equal proportion to that which greeted Mr. Kelly, when he opened his program on Monday evening. He prefaced his entertainment with a short sketch of his experiences, many of which were very amusing. Among Mr. Kelly's first numbers were several Irish stories and songs. Mrs. Kelly, who is also a talented comedian, favored the audience with a number entitled, "Sis Hopkins" acting the part of a modern servant-girl flapper. Mr. Kelly's stock-in-trade, ventriloquism, featured the next act, when he entertained with the assistance of his famous boy subject. Rare talent in this particular line was shown by the entertainer at it was impossible to tell by any facial movement when Mr. Kelly was speaking for himself or the boy figure. Mrs. Kelly gave short recitations, followed by her husband in humorous impersonations of a visit to the farm. Mrs. Kelly's impersonation of the bride, waiting at the Church for the intended husband who did not appear, made a decided hit. Mr. Kelly then gave a more serious number, a poem by James Whitcombe Riley, entitled, "That Old Sweetheart of Mine." The concluding number of these entertainers was theier act, "The Happy Family." This again brought forth the famous ventriloquistic accomplishments of Mr. Kelly.

The draw for the Walnut Chest was in charge of Ernest Irwin, Master of L.O.L. 2322. Mrs. Theodore Reid drew the lucky ticket, held by Thomas McKeown, of Rylstone.

The total proceeds amounted to $215.

LADIES' WORK ANNUAL SALE

Church Basement Presents a Bright Appearance With Beautiful Articles Offered.

AT ST. GEORGE'S.

St. George's Church basement presented a bright appearance on Wednesday afternoon and evening, when the annual sale of ladies' work took place. This annual event for which the ladies work during the whole year is always a great success and Wednesday kept up the usual good record. The attendance was very large, especially in the afternoon.

The Ladies' Guild had a booth of plain and fancy articles, a large number of quilts, as well as much beautiful hand embroidery showing that a great deal of time had been required in the preparation of this stall. Mrs. T. Monk, president, was in charge of this work, assisted by Mrs. H. Rew and Mrs. R. King.

Woollen goods of all descriptions could be purchased at the Woman's Auxiliary stall, where Mrs. E. G. Brown, president, and Mrs. J. Brownlie were in charge.

The Junior Auxiliary had a table of handkerchiefs, dressed dolls and small goods and was taken care of in the afternoon by Mrs. J. L. Hughes. The girls of this organization also had a fish pond in the evening. Mrs. W. Rew and Mrs. G. Howarth had an attractive table of home made cooking and candy, and carried on a brisk business. The "country store" where groceries, vegetables, and even new laid eggs could be bought was in charge of Miss I. Parkes, president, assisted by Mrs. F. Dorrell, Miss T. Allen, Miss K. Robertson and Mr. S. Robertson.

Afternoon tea was served by the ladies who undertook the refreshments being Mrs. P. Malsch, Mrs. J. McWilliams and Mrs. H. Wood.

The total proceeds for the day proved to be a record over past years.

Stammering school children are said to be cured by one schoolmaster's novel treatment. As soon as the child begins to stammer he is told: "Before you begin to speak lift up the fore part of one foot without lifting the heel from the ground." This diverts the speaker's attention and helps him to overcome his defect

LEGION TO HAVE FIRING PARTY

Memorial Day Service To Be Honored By Squad of Soldiers.

NO SACRED CONCERT.

CAMPBELLFORD, Nov. 9.—(Examiner Staff Correspondence).—Whether or not there would be a firing party at the memorial service at the Cenotaph on Armistice day was the burning item which called forth the most prolonged discussion at the meeting of the local branch of the Canadian Legion in their club rooms last night. The meeting was called principally for the reports of the committees and others in charge of Poppy day and the Memorial service but there was some general business dealt with.

After the customary opening ceremonies and procedure, the name of one new member was voted on, and accepted as soon as the application was submitted. It was explained that at the time the ex-service man was approached, there were no application forms immediately available. Among the correspondence was a letter from the MacLean Publishing Company regarding an order from the Legion for a number of copies of articles referring to the war which they had published. It was pointed out that the edition was exhausted before the receipt of the order and the request was being held pending the possible publication of a second edition.

The reports and arrangements of the poppy day committees were accepted as satisfactory and the poppies and wreaths will go on sale Saturday morning about ten o'clock. The matter of a firing party for the memorial service was then discussed with some heat and feeling. It was thought that the procedure was out of order by some and others were very much in favor of it. When the matter was put to a vote, the firing party was agreed upon but some of those present did not wish to vote at all on the question. The next trouble was to find a commissioned or non commissioned officer to take charge. This was done after considerable difficulty. When the meeting closed, half the number required had been arranged and it is expected that the remainder will be arranged for before the end of the week.

During the general business of the meeting it was announced that there would be no sacred concert next Sunday evening.

FLYING CLUB IS DISCUSSED

Campbellford Has Many Citizens Who Are Anxious To Become Members.

REQUIRE PILOT.

CAMPBELLFORD, Nov. 9 (Examiner Staff Correspondence).—Occasionally the opportunity has been offered local citizens to ride in an airplane, both at home and at various air ports throughout the continent. But it is only within the last few days that anything at all of a serious nature has been done toward forming a local flying club. It appears that there are many flying enthusiasts in the locality and some of these have been getting their heads together to discuss the possibilities for such an organization. As nearly as they can estimate, the initial cost would be in the neighborhood of ten thousand dollars. It would be necessary to employ the services of a competent pilot to give instructions to members of the club and other students who wished to learn the profession. So far, the most favored plan has been to form a stock company and sell shares to any who wished to purchase them. It is expected that in due time, there would be some revenue from commercial aviation, but that point has not yet been investigated at all thoroughly.

Mr. Dutton said, in regard to Old Home Week, that: "The Chamber of Commerce has observed with much gratification a move which is under way, sponsored by the Peterborough City Council to hold an Old Home Week. We, of course, are ready to co-operate when called upon. As the chief work of the Chamber in the past has been publicity, it might be considered that we could assist the Old Home Week movement by taking part in the publicity program and, possibly, the registering and reception of old Peterborough people during the week.

Traffic Regulation

"Complaint has been registered by a number of George street merchants in the block from Charlotte to Simcoe streets regarding the "no left hand turn" at the intersection of George and Charlotte. This regulation, they claim, has affected their business during the past summer and will continue to affect it adversely until such time as motorists are allowed to make the left hand turn and proceed up George street. If what they say be true, it might be well to give the matter serious consideration with a view to amending the traffic by-law so as to permit the left hand turn from Charlotte and George and also to permit parallel parking on the west side of George street for the twenty minute limit.

City's Tourist Camp

"It is generally admitted, we think, that cooking appliances placed in the tourist camp would greatly enhance the camp's drawing power and utility. At the same time, as the camp does not border on a river or lake as many of Ontario's camps do, the possibility of placing showers at the disposal of campers could be considered. In this connection a small fee could be charged for the use of the showers which might eventually wipe out the capital charge and take care of the upkeep.

Advertising

"The Chamber of Commerce recommends and is willing to co-operate in the publishing of an up-to-date City Booklet, stressing the city's industrial and tourist advantages. Information in such publication to be based on data collated in a complete civic survey now being made by the Chamber.

"Tourist Bureaux at the city's principal highway inlets would be a decided advantage during the coming summer in taking care of the major.y of tourists, giving them necessary information and literature and obtaining at the same time a mailing list of visitors which would be very valuable to the city for advertising purposes. Such bureaux might be financed jointly by the City Council and the Chamber, and could be manned and managed by the staff of the Chamber.

"The success which we have enjoyed during the past summer in placing in various American cities transparencies depicting Kawartha Lakes scenes would seem to warrant a program of such publicity to be Take 1 continued—City improvements broadened and take in as many American points as possible. It has been found that by buying such matter in Peterborough, our costs are cut by two-thirds. Therefore an extensive program of this nature could be carried on for a few hundred dollars annually. This past summer the Chamber has had touring bureaux operating in the cities of Pittsburgh, Cleveland and New York.

"In the undertaking of various activities as enumerated above, the budget of the Chamber must needs be increased. Towards this end we would recommend that the City Council consider granting the Chamber a portion of the municipal grant for publicity purposes now available under the Municipal Act. The total amount which can legally be expended by the City for publicity purposes is in the neighborhood of $3,000.00 annually. During the past eight years the Chamber's budget has not been less than $6,000.00 per annum. Two-thirds of the annual budget is expended along publicity lines which would give us, at $4,000.00 per annum, a credit for publicity expenditure of not less than $30,000.00 during the past eight years. That it has been expended wisely is borne out by the tourist statistics available from the chartered banks of tourist money expended in the district this year amounting to a minimum of $315,299. It would seem that the more money available for tourist work, the greater the return to the city and district.

Stimulating Industrial Life

"In regards to the purchase of the gas plant, we recommend that this be submitted to the people for decision. A valuation by reliable appraisers is, we understand, about $360,000.00. From information which we have, it is intimated that private interests are anxious to secure this utility. We understand that the plant is in good condition and is equipped for modern manufacture of gas."

In bringing up the question of securing new industries, Mr. Dutton said that the city's Mayor and Council had been alive to their responsibilities and had done all in their power to secure them. All cities and towns were awakening to this need and all are in the field for new industries. "Oshawa," he said, "is setting aside one dollar per person of the population for the advertising and work of securing new industries; Toronto too is spending money to bring new factories to the city." He expressed the view that more money should be appropriated for this work by Peterborough and then the work would not be hindered by any reasonable expense.

Great Benefits Derived.

Mayor Denne, in replying to President Dutton, expressed his appreciation of the work of the Chamber of Commerce and his pleasure at being able to discuss with them these important questions and policies. He said that he was to call a public meeting of all the citizens of the city to get their suggestions and wholehearted support of the Old Home Week. He thought that the benefits to be derived from such a week would be tremendous and far-reaching.

Dealing with the question of the traffic by-laws, he said that Chief Newhall and the Council had gone into the matter thoroughly before passing the by-law, and they all felt it necessary and a good thing. He could not see where it was hurting any of the merchants and he thought that any tourists who shopped would do their shopping between Simcoe Street and Charlotte Street.

He said that John Gillespie had received full instructions from the Council to open the buildings in Exhibition Park wet nights, and this had been done for as many as thirty-eight persons had slept in the buildings in one night. He suggested that the Motor League be approached in fitting up the camp with stoves and other necessities.

He said that the matter of more extensive advertising and new booklets were matters for next year's Council.

He thought that the tourists' agency was a very good idea, and suggested that a small building could be set up in some strategic point under the management of a returned soldier, who would give the directions and information to the tourists.

Women's Rest Room.

On the matter of a women's rest room, he said that the Council had gone into the matter and found the big difficulty was securing a good location for it. It was suggested that the Chamber of Commerce inform the Council at some later date a location for the rest room.

The Mayor also expressed himself as thinking that the necessity of a grant to the Chamber of Commerce was also a matter for the new Council.

On the question of the buying of the gas plant by the city, the Mayor heartily endorsed the idea of giving a by-law to the people after they had received full information concerning the whole business.

Clean Up Parks.

Speaking of the needs for the city, the Mayor stated that the parks should certainly be cleaned up more and sanitary conveniences put in. "A proper City Hall building has got to come too," he said. Mr. Denne, in speaking as a commen citizen of Peterborough, expressed his high opinion of the work of the Council this year. He said: "Every alderman has worked hard for the benefit of the city and more work has been done and faster than ever before. Every member of the Council has something at stake in the city and everyone gives sincerely of his best efforts. Peterborough must prepare for the big advancement and progress that is in sight for Canada and Ontario or we are going to miss the wagon."

He pledged his support to the Chamber of Commerce and any other organization or movement which is helping to build a bigger and better Peterborough.

G. S. Matthews added further to the formation on the gas plant question.

Alderman Cotton said that the gas plant should be put to the people, and he was eager to see a women's rest room built.

The Mayor brought up the need for improving and installing a proper heating plant for the market building. He said that the farm women should have comfortable quarters in which to sell their fowl and dairy produce.

F. D. Kerr, K.C., expressed his appreciation of the work of the Mayor and the City Council and brought forward suggestions for the betterment of Jackson Park, so that it will serve the public better.

Alderman Hamilton said that he thought strong efforts should be made for the securing of more highways to serve this part of the province and pressure exerted to rush the completion of the present highway.

Alderman Phelan moved a vote of thanks to the Chamber of Commerce for inviting the members of the City Council to the banquet. The motion was seconded by the Mayor.

Mrs. Robert Waterman Is Honored On Eve of Her Departure.

FRASERVILLE, Nov. 9. — The Fraserville Ladies' Aid took the occasion at their regular monthly meeting, held in the Orange Hall on Wednesday afternoon, to present to Mrs. Robert Waterman, president of the Aid, an electric table lamp, prior to her departure from this community. The presentation was made by Mrs. H. Cunningham, and the address read by Mrs. J. O. Pue.

Mrs. Waterman responded in an able and cheerful manner, thanking them for their kind act and words, and inviting them all to come and see her in her new home in Peterborough.

Mrs. Waterman has been a true and faithful member of the Ladies' Aid since the time of its organization over twenty-two years ago, at that time being elected to the office of vice-president, and for the past six years has occupied the president's chair.

Mrs. Waterman will be greatly missed in the Aid, always showing her kindly spirit and ready to do her share, and more.

After Mrs. Waterman's response, all joined in singing, "Blest Be the Tie That Binds."

There was a good representation of the members of the Aid present for this special occasion, there being an attendance of about twenty. The ladies accomplished some quilting as well as some time spent socially. After which a dainty supper was served.

MAGNESIA BEST FOR YOUR INDIGESTON

Warns Against Doping Stomach With Artificial Digestants

Most people who suffer, either occasionally or chronically from gas, sourness and indigestion, have now discontinued disagreeable diets, patent foods and the use of harmful drugs, stomach tonics, medicines and artificial digestants, and instead, follow the advice so often given in these columns, take a teaspoonful of four tablets of Bisurated Magnesia, in a little water after meals with the result that their stomach no longer troubles them, they are able to eat as they please and they enjoy much better health. Those who use Bisurated Magnesia never dread the approach of meal time because they know this wonderful anti-acid and food corrective, which can be obtained from any good drug store, will instantly neutralize the stomach acidity, sweeten the stomach, prevent food fermentation, and make digestion easy. Try this plan yourself, but be certain to get Bisurated Magnesia especially prepared for stomach use.

STROPPING IS ESSENTIAL TO THE PERFECT SHAVE

a Million Boosters say it's GREAT

The Million Dollar Valet AutoStrop Razor shows the necessity of stropping before each shave

BECAUSE it solves the problem of men with stubborn beards, the new Valet AutoStrop Razor is taxing our factories' capacity to meet Canada's demand.

Everywhere wise men are turning to the improved Valet AutoStrop Razor because it is teaching them the vital importance of never shaving with a blade that has not been properly stropped.

All barbers know that until it is stropped the cutting edge of every blade is a row of tiny needle points that scrape and tear the skin. Stropping smooths them out.

With the automatic self-stropping device of the new Valet AutoStrop Razor you can do this in a few seconds.

And the new model offers you many other modern features exclusive in this razor. It is the result of 21 years of experiment and the expenditure of a million dollars.

Both the razor and the blades have been distinctly bettered. Made of the costliest steel, treated by the exclusive Valetite process, Valet blades have a perfect edge. The self-stropping feature keeps them so. New type guard gives you full use of the shaving surface of these keener blades. Instantly inserted or removed by pressing a button. Locked in a firm non-flexible grip, they put blade vibration and razor pull out of the picture for good. No need to remove the blade to strop and clean it. Try this new Million Dollar Razor. You'll quickly learn to like it. And once you know its soothing shaves and friendly angle, you'll stick to it for life.

POPPY DAY.

The Canadian Legion is called upon many times in a year to extend a helping hand to ex-service men and their families, and the assistance the organization has been able to give has been of real service to those in need.

It is well to bear that fact in mind in connection with the sale of poppies to-morrow, inasmuch as the proceeds obtained in this way are utilized for relief purposes by the Legion.

The wearing of poppies has become a recognized feature of the observance of Armistice Day; naturally so since the flower has been named the flower of remembrance and since it was such a familiar object to the soldiers of Canada's army overseas.

It is fitting indeed that every citizen of a community which distinguished itself by its splendid recruiting record during the war should on Armistice Day wear this generally accepted emblem of the occasion, and when this is made possible through a street sale of poppies that raises funds to relieve cases of distress, there should be a 100 per cent. response to the appeal.

Buy a poppy to-morrow, and be sure to wear it on Armistice Day.

CARING FOR THE PARKS.

Nice things were said at the last meeting of the City Council about the manner in which the local parks have been cared for this year, and the majority of citizens who have been impressed by the appearance of these beauty spots will agree that the praise was merited.

Confederation Square and Victoria Park have been carefully groomed and looked after, and their trim appearance has been most favorably commented upon by many visitors.

Unfortunately, under the system by which caretakers are engaged, there is no guarantee that these conditions will be maintained.

Tenders will be asked for next spring, and it may happen that Caretaker Hayward, whose good work this year has been so much praised, will find himself underbid by somebody else.

Surely in positions of this kind it would be more satisfactory in the long run if some attempt were made at continuity of policy by making sure of the services of a good official when they can be secured, rather than depend upon a system of appointment that is more or less of a lottery.

THE CHANGE IN THE SOUTH.

It is not surprising to find the Republican and Democratic leaders differing widely in their interpretation of the significance of the fact that the "solid South," so long held by the Democratic party, has been successfully invaded.

The Republicans argue that the appearance of some of the rock-ribbed Southern States in the Hoover column is a splendid thing for the nation, representing a weakening of sectional feeling.

Democrats, on the other hand, attach great importance to the defection of party strongholds in the South, but view it in quite a different light.

They do not see in the result the dawn of a new era in American politics, but merely evidence, as the New York Times puts it, that "the Republicans have profited by appeals to bigotry and fanaticism in the South," and the same paper says "the extent to which they benefit will retard and not advance the American political structure because they are negatively cast votes, based largely on a harmful superstition."

In short, the Democratic view seems to be that the Hoover victory in the South was won on grounds which will do the United States harm, not good, and that Southern votes were not given for Hoover, but against Smith, most of them because the Democratic candidate is a Roman Catholic, and the rest because he is an anti-prohibitionist.

THE AMUSEMENT TAX IS UNDER FIRE.

Mr. W. E. N. Sinclair, Liberal leader in the Province, recently made a strong attack against the continuance of the Amusement Tax in Ontario. There is exemption up to 25 cents. As remarked in these columns, once a tax is imposed by a Government, there is the greatest reluctance to give it up. This special tax was a war-time measure, and it has not been relinquished in the ten years since the war, which is a strong point made by Mr. Sinclair in his address.

Where we think Premier Ferguson is wrong is when he declares that the tax is not absorbed by the people. It may not be in every case with the movies, but when it comes to outdoor sports and many other attractions, such as the recent Hart House concert in this city, the tax is paid by the public. And to remove the tax on outdoor sports of all kinds, even hockey, would be a good thing. Even high-class professional sport should be encouraged; it is a factor every time in a good labor situation where workers get a thrill from watching champions meet and play.

The Motion Picture Distributors and Exhibitors of Canada, are waging a quiet campaign for relief. Suppose the Premier is adamant, as he sometimes is, and the exhibitors take it in their heads to wage war on Mr. Ferguson from the screen in the next provincial election? They would have that right, should they desire to do so, the same as they carry advertisements on the screen. Sometimes it does not always pay to wield the big stick. Thousands of votes could be turned against the Government by the movie picture houses if they united on this tax business. The whole point is, however, whether the Government needs the money. It is not a large sum of revenue, but it is annoying to many seekers after pleasure in this Province.—St. Catharines Standard.

BRITISH LABOR GAINS.

Decisive victories for the British Labor party in municipal elections, following hard upon the defeat of the Baldwin Government in the by-election of Ashton-Under-Lyne, has created a great stir in the Old Land. The Daily Mail, as usual, becomes hysterical, and is using both incidents to vent its antagonism toward Mr. Baldwin; but that, in itself, means little. What is much more serious is the attitude of papers like the Times and the Observer, both of which are friendly to the Government, but which see in the Labor victories an indication that the Government is in rough waters that are likely to grow much rougher.

Mr. Baldwin, certainly, has had three bad years. Inability to solve the unemployment problem; the Trades Union bill of two years ago; the attempt to strengthen the position of the House of Lords; unpopular steps in foreign policy—all these have combined to weaken the Ministry's support. Labor, unquestionably, has become much stronger. It has fought and pretty much freed itself of the Communists; it is no longer weighted with a handicap like the notorious Zinovief letter; and it is better organized and more sanely led than for years.

Also there has been a Liberal revival. In the last election the Asquith-Lloyd George feud made the party impotent. To-day, however, with the schism healed, with a brilliant organizer at its head, and with Lloyd George in unchallenged command and always dangerous, it is much more formidable. Lloyd George and MacDonald, too, have much abler lieutenants than Mr. Baldwin. Mr. Baldwin's Cabinet, although an eminently respectable one, is by no means weighted with genius.

Mr. Baldwin's chance is the seeming inability of the Laborites and Liberals to unite against him. Yet Ashton-Under-Lyne seemed to indicate that even with three-cornered contests the Conservatives are by no means certain of a victory. Much, of course, may happen between now and next spring, when the election comes on; but the present signs would seem to be that when the contest is over Britain will be faced with the necessity of a coalition.—Ottawa Journal.

DOLLAR-A-WEEK SLAVES.

Life in the United States and to a lesser but rapidly increasing extent in Canada has become a matter of a dollar down and a dollar a week, if we are to believe an analysis of business methods appearing in a recent issue of a retail clothing journal. "People are going time payment mad," is the charge, which declares further that wage earners have signed away their wages for years to come to procure the immediate use of both necessaries and luxuries, mostly luxuries.

Credit not only is the life of business, but it is the salvation of a modest home. But isn't there a possibility that business rivalry makes credit so easy to get that we are inclined to abuse it? To-day we buy homes, insurance, automobiles, musical instruments, washing machines, magazines, furniture, clothing, electric equipment, engagement rings, radio sets—in fact, about everything imaginable on the part-payment plan, mortgaging our incomes for years.

Discounting the future is, to a certain extent, an aid not only to our social, but to our economic life. It not only establishes our faith in to-morrow, but it heralds the fact that our financial transactions are honorable enough for us to obtain credit. But there is always the danger that over-indulgence in this form of buying is going to make us dollar-a-week slaves. Desire for the comforts and pleasures of to-day should not lead us to place too big a mortgage on to-morrow. —Oshawa Times.

STOPPING BORDER GUNPLAY.

(From the Detroit Free Press)

The border patrol having been ordered to cease firing into Canada, would it not now be in order to make it cut out reckless gunplay on this side of the line as well? Are the lives of American citizens going about their peaceful vocations in this country less deserving of their Government's solicitude than the lives of Canadians in Canada? Apparently Washington thinks so.

The danger to which Windsorites were exposed by the careless marksmanship of American enforcement officers has been removed because Canada protested to the State Department. Americans can't protect their lives by making an international incident out of the shooting of a duck hunter or the maiming of a young woman driving with her father on an Ohio highway; but they have another means of making Washington realize its responsibility, which sooner or later they are going to exercise.

About the cheapest commodity on the market to-day is American life on American soil; cheaper than Canadian life in Canada, cheaper than American life in China or Mexico or Central America, where the taking of it creates an international incident. The sponsors of the Eighteenth Amendment could not have intended that the enforcement of that measure should be made the excuse for killing or maiming peaceful and law-abiding citizens, as it has been made by legal officers of the Government itself. When the law catches thugs in the act it is permissible to "shoot first and ask questions afterwards." When it is dealing with the citizenry generally it should be sure it is right before it goes ahead—to the length of taking human life.

The recklessness of a type of enforcement officers has put the Government of this country in the murder business. A stronger protest than has been heard from the people yet will be required to take it out again; yet that protest will be voiced if the Government continues to place a lower value on the lives of its own citizens than it does on those of citizens of other countries.

The Question Box

CANADA'S APPLE INDUSTRY

E. A. T.—Q. What is the extent of Canada's apple industry?

A. Canada's apple industry is an important element in the orchard products. Over 200,000 acres are devoted to the production of apples of a value of $120,000,000 and the annual apple crops ranges from 3,250,000 to 4,500,000 barrels. Even with these large figures there is ample room for expansion in the Dominion in apple culture.

GOD'S MINUTE.

Be not afraid, only believe—Mark 5: 36.

Our Heavenly Father, we thank Thee for the child's right of approach and of expectancy. Humbly pleading Thy promises, relying alone upon the merits of Thy Son, we pray; in our sorrow, send the Comforter.

In our helplessness, supply efficiency for service. In our ignorance and loneliness show us the way wherein Thou wilt walk with us.

Dwell Thou within us, that we sin no more against Thee, that Thy will be our pleasure, Thy cause our masked passion. Give us the courage of faith, the consolation of conscious forgiveness, and the blessed assurance that underneath are the everlasting arms. Make us to cleave to that which is good, and abhor that which is evil.

Above all, O Thou Giver and supreme Lover of life, we pray for ourselves not only but for all men and women, and particularly for all children, that Thou wilt give everlasting life—saving spiritual life, vigorous physical life, pure social life, beneficent mental life—all the life there is that is worth having, for we ask it in His name who lovingly confided to us, "I am come that ye might have life, and that ye might have it abundantly." Amen.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

TORONTO, November 9. — Good demand for cattle on current light receipts has given a stronger tone to trading. Few, if any, holdovers will be on yards at the close yesterday. This will leave a clean sheet to start operations next Tuesday, as market is closed on Thanksgiving Day, November 12.

Sales of baby beeves show a steady market. Choice are $13.00 to $13.50 with an odd fancy higher.

A Thought

SERVICE

In one of the battles of the Crimean War, a cannon-ball struck inside a fort, crashing through and destroying a beautiful garden. But from the ugly chasm there bursts forth a spring of water which is still flowing. How beautiful it is that the sorrows which make great chasms in our lives may, in a similar way, become a blessing to others, through our determination to live and to do for those who need our help. Life is not given for mourning, but for unselfish service.—O. S. Marden.

MISSION OUTLOOK MOST FAVORABLE

Rev. George A. Williams Intends Visiting United Church Presbyteries in Eastern Ontario.

Rev. George A. Williams, secretary of Missionary and Maintenance Fund of the United Church of Canada for Bay of Quinte Conference, sends word that the outlook for missionary givings in the churches of the Central and Eastern Ontario area is more favorable than a year ago.

Having completed a preliminary survey of the situation in all Presbyteries, he will visit this month in Cobourg, Lindsay, Belleville, and Peterborough Presbyteries with Rev. Geo. C. F. Pringle, noted padre and missionary from the Pacific Coast.

Presbytery committees have divided their territory into from three to five sections and the laymen of each group of churches are meeting together for supper in order to secure information, perfect organization and hear inspiring addresses from various leaders.

Rev. Mr. Williams, who has been loaned again to the conference committee as organizer, was for years a missionary among the Chinese of Formosa and knows the foreign fields at first hand. He says that last year the Maintenance and Extension Fund, now known as the Missionary and Maintenance Fund, was less understood than to-day in its relationship to carrying on the evangelization of countries abroad.

He will be in Lindsay, Nov. 13 and 14, Belleville Nov. 16 to 22, and Peterborough, Nov. 23 to 30.

MRS. W. ROCHESTER ADDRESSES MEETING

Ladies of Lakefield Presbyterian Church Hold Enthusiastic Thankoffering Service.

LAKEFIELD, November 9. — The thankoffering meeting of the Women's Missionary Society of the Presbyterian Church in Lakefield, was held on November 7. The meeting opened by singing a hymn, followed by a Scripture reading and prayer by the president, Mrs. Redpath.

A solo by Miss Olive Cullen, "O Rest in the Lord," was beautifully rendered. Then followed an address by Mrs. W. M. Rochester, of Toronto. This was an outline of the work done by the W.M.S. since it was formed. Her address was under two headings: First, Stewardship, noting the blessings God has given us and our duty to our Church, our home, and our friends; second, Our work, prayer, and consecration, including a review of W.M.S. work in the schools and hospitals, the devotion of the workers, and the need of women upholding the works by prayer.

"The opening of the Huntingdon School Home in the Province of Quebec, which makes the seventh, is the latest national work," said the speaker.

Mrs. Rochester also stated that the work of the Church through Canada is one of great encouragement.

A vote of thanks was moved by Mrs. Simpson, seconded by Miss Tanner, for the splendid address, which was thoroughly enjoyed by all. The society considered itself very fortunate to secure such a person as Mrs. Rochester, who devotes so much of her time and talent to the good work of the W.M.S.

The meeting closed by the singing of the National Anthem, followed by prayer by Mrs. Ross. A social time, while refreshments were being served by the ladies, brought a very pleasing event to a close.

LAD FROM ENGLAND IS MONTH OVERDUE

Brother On Way To Visit Sister in Brantford Misteriously Disappears.

BRANTFORD, Nov. 9. — Clifford Smith, aged 15, sailed from Liverpool on Sept. 28 to visit his sister, Mrs. A. Acton here, and has not yet arrived.

Much alarmed by his disappearance, the sister yesterday asked police to aid in a search for the lad. It is known that the boy sailed on the Duchess of Bedford for Quebec. He was coming direct to Brantford. Doubt as to the exact date he was to sail kept the sister from notifying police until word was received from Liverpool confirming his departure.

Police say the lad may have gone out west to help with the harvest. It is suggested that he might have been sent to the Vimy Ridge training school at Guelph. This is considered very unlikely because he was coming to Canada for a visit and not to learn farming.

Police are trying to verify his arrival in Canada from C.P.R. steamship officials.

ARGO SQUAD READY FOR MONTREAL CREW

TORONTO, Nov. 9. — Argonauts drove through a fast drill last night under the direction of Coach Frank Knight and wound up their preparation for the invasion of Montreal to-morrow at Varsity Stadium. The feeling in the Scullers' camp is that they would rather take this game than humble Tigers. The defeat in Montreal has built up a bitter feud and the local team is determined to do or die in this closing engagement of the Interprovincial Union campaign.

URGED TO OPPOSE OLD AGE PENSION

Many Resolutions To Come Before U.F.O. at Annual Convention.

CADET TRAINING.

TORONTO, Nov. 9.—No less than thirty-two resolutions, covering the usual wide range of topics are scheduled to come before this year's convention of the United Farmers of Ontario, which gathers in Toronto on December 4, 5 and 6 next.

Of particular interest this year is the resolution bearing upon Old Age Pensions. The proposition which will be submitted to the gathering recommend that the farmers go on record as opposed to any such legislation.

Also of particular interest this year is the proposal urging the Government to withdraw its financial support from the Ontario Women's Institutes. Two resolutions bear upon this matter, although they approached it from somewhat different angles.

Four resolutions this year deal with the liquor question, pointing to the increase in the jail population, the increase in crimes usually associated with liquor, calling upon the Dominion Government to stop the export of liquor and to abolish home brew licenses, and generally expressing disapproval of the Government Control system.

Other resolutions of a general character urge the convention to go on record as repudiating the expenditure of every dollar of public money for the purpose of cadet training in the public schools; that musical instruction in all public schools be made compulsory.

Canada's Glorious Dead Lift Cross of Sacrifice As Summons to 'Carry On'

in other words, only half of the 30,000 that sailed from Canada so inconspicuously escaped spilling blood on Flanders fields—and some persist in calling that contingent wastrels!"

"Since Time Immemorial . . ."

It was nothing new for men to be called from home and kindred to fight at the call of king or priest or tribal leader, the speaker said. The ancestors of these men had been so called since time immemorial. The Scotsman thrilled to the passing of the flame- and blood-marked cross that summoned him—

'When flits this cross from man to man,
Vich-Alpine's summons to his clan,
Burst be the ear that fails to heed!
Palsied the foot that shuns to speed!
And be the grace to him denied Bought by this sign to all beside!"

And when the great call was sounded in 1914 the nobility of manhood had but to hear again the summons of duty and honor to make response which shook the world. "Danger to the treasury of common things—for common things when challenged are the most sacred of all—danger to these things ever stirred our fathers to action, and it has not lost its appeal to their sons."

What Canada Did.

The glorious record of Canada overseas could not be detailed in a day or a volume, the speaker remarked. First, Canada sent one division, then an Army Corps; first 30,000 men and then 418,000 men; first a mob of colonials, and then Foch's pets, the spearhead of every major offensive. "If one would go into particulars of any one exploit of Canadians in the war," he said, "he might choose any one of a dozen major actions in which the Canadian soldier was acclaimed by the Allies and damned by the enemy. There was Ypres in 1915; Sanctuary Wood and the Somme in 1916; Vimy Ridge, Hill 70, and Paschendele in 1917; Arras, Amiens, Drocourt-Queant, Canal du Nord, Cambrai, Valenciennes and Mons in 1918.

"Probably for our purposes to-day we might take the closing battles of the war, the last hundred days. In that period the Canadians captured 31,000 prisoners, 600 heavy and field guns, 3,000 machine guns, and 350 trench mortars. They released 500 square miles of territory, with 228 cities, towns and villages. Between August 8 and October 11 the Canadian Corps of four complete divisions engaged and defeated 47 German divisions. That was nearly one quarter of the total German forces on the western front. In all of this the Canadians suffered 46,000 casualties, including 6,800 killed in action.

"That is a small part of Canada's work overseas, but typical of the achievements of Canada in Flanders and France."

Those Who Lost.

Going on to speak of those who had lost loved ones through the war, Mr. Heron said, "Many a mother thinks to-day of the boy with the sunny brow and the lips of love and of song
As he hurried away, young heart of joy, he'd the best of his life to live;
And I'd loved him so, and I'm old, I'm old, and he's all I had to give.

"We cannot understand the love a mother holds for her son; we men cannot adequately express our own. All that we can say to the mothers who lost is: 'How worthier could he die?' A loss like that is glorious gain, for peace must be bought with blood and tears, and though, over there, there is only a name on a cross, the gold of the youth he so gladly gave has not been expended in vain.

"And fathers, who had proudly planned for their sons—this loss we who are men understand. When the boy came home one evening and said he had decided to enlist, it was not unexpected. It was the thing to do. He told it offhandedly, and he was so sure he would be back to carry on the ideals and plans his dad had made. Then, fateful day, there came the terse message that blasted the hopes of years, and the father learned he would have no son to carry on—

"But you'll live, you'll live, young fellow my lad,
In the gleam of the evening star,
In the wood note wild and the laugh of the child,
In all sweet things that are.
And you'll never die, my wonderful boy
While life is noble and true,
For all our beauty and peace and joy
We will owe to our lads like you.

"There were hundreds of wives, too, who allowed their husbands to enter the conflict; and to hundreds of homes in Peterborough the husbands did not return. This is the pitiful part of war, children left without the influence and support of a father; wives thrown upon their own resources and mourning their loved ones—what can we say to them?

"Lo! a million woman faces drift
Like pale leaves through the sky.
The cheeks of some are channelled deep with tears
But some are tearless, with wild eyes that stare
Into the shadow of the coming years
Of fathomless despair."

Honor the Men Who Fell.

Returning to the thought of the men who are particularly honored on Armistice Day, the speaker remarked that the nightmare of war cannot be pictured except by those who passed through it. Their sufferings bequeath a duty to those who remain, and this duty must be taken up.

"The six hundred men from this district who gave their lives in the Great War rest in the quiet of well-kept cemeteries, whose ground has resounded to the drums and tramplings of many conquests, with the brave of all the world," he said. "At death they sheathed in their hearts the sword of devotion. No words can add to their fame, nor so long as gratitude holds a place in men's hearts can our forgetfulness be suffered to detract from their renown. On this Armistice Day anniversary we desire to remember them, and to us to-day comes a vision of their hands holding aloft from stricken fields the cross of sacrifice, mutely beckoning those who would share their immortality.

"About the righteousness of our participation in the Great War we have no doubt. France and Belgium live and are free, and Canada is the nobler for her sacrifice to help free France and Belgium to live. I have met many men who poked fun at their idea of their being at war for any other reason than that they liked it, but not a man in the Canadian Expeditionary Force who mocked the great cause which was our battle standard, liberty of nations, the right to live, and freedom from acquisitive aggression. On the score of our record in the Great War we are ready to plead at the bar of history, and this tenth Armistice Day anniversary finds our case unchallenged.

"But understanding bought at the price of the lifeblood of a generation must not be lost. It remains for the living to complete the magnificent work of the dead. The marble and bronze visible memorials which we may erect, whatever their usefulness or beauty, are but symbols of our gratitude and affection. The gratitude and affection themselves are manifested in seeing that the work of the dead is not left half done.

"We say they fought and fell for freedom and justice and love and the triumph of right over might. But have we stopped with the triumph these men won? Are we satisfied that our foe for this time has been vanquished? Does sheathing a bright sword meet our ideals?

"If this be all: by the blood-drenched plains, by the havoc of fire and fear,
By the rending roar of the war of wars, by the dead so doubly dear—
Then is our victory a vast defeat, and it mocks us as we cheer!"

Still Work to Do.

The country cannot stop with this victory, now celebrated nine years, Mr. Heron continued. It must go on in the spirit of the men who call from Flanders Fields, it must seek the end of the task they began. "Let us turn loose our fighting instincts against greed of conquest, which is the basis of wars; against racial and religious prejudices, which foster hatreds that beget wars. Let us seek to so build up this victory won by our generation that, buttressed by international goodwill and that individual peace toward all men commanded by the angels, the sacrifices of the Great War need not be suffered by our sons or their sons' sons."

A Wonderful Vision.

In his closing sentences, the speaker told of a wonderful ceremony in an eastern country, described by an eyewitness. On a great open meadow were drawn up thousands of soldiers and tens of thousands of civilians, all gazing steadfastly across the waving grass and trees. The onlooker saw nothing there, but one of the natives told him the people were reviewing all the men who had fallen in the recent war. The generals on their horses raised their swordpoints as if reviewing troops on parade, the soldiers presented arms, and all the people cheered.

"I wish we had that vision to-day," the speaker said. "I wish we could see passing before us those shadowy forms that went out when Canada called them in 1866; the boys who answered the call of the Motherland in 1900, and fell on the sun-swept veldt.

"I wish to-day we could see marching proudly before us the lads who stood for hours in the gas-swept trenches of Ypres in 1915, and then plunged headlong to death in an effort to stem the enemy flood pouring through the gap on their left; and all those other eager youngsters who poured in to take their places and were left there in the salient in later years, after so splendidly upholding the traditions of Canada's first contingent. I wish we were able to see, marching down the street to-day, the gallant lads who stormed the impregnable heights of Vimy; who plunged through merciless fire to capture Courcelette; who gave their lives as the price for Hill 70; who triumphed over bottomless mud and black death at the capture of Passchendaele; who fell in the stubborn defence of Sanctuary Wood.

"I wish it were possible for us to see the boys who fell in the last great push, at Amiens and beyond, up to Fransart and Fresnoy and Goyencourt; at Arras and Telegraph Hill and Tilloy and Wancourt and Eterpigny; at the Hindenburg line and up the beetling heights of Bourlon; in the dash for Cambrai and up the road to Mons.

"I wish we might see them all, and have them call out to us as they march past, 'Carry On.'

"And after we have honored this toast which I will give you, and as we stand for a minute's silence, if we stand very still, and try very hard, perhaps we will see them."

"Our Glorious Dead."

Mr. Heron then proposed the toast to "Our Glorious Dead," and after it had been honored the Kiwanians stood for a minute's silence, appropriately closed by the speaker with a quotation seemingly made for the occasion:

"From the voiceless lips of the unreplying dead there comes no word; but in the night of death hope sees a star, and listening love can hear the rustle of an angel's wing."

Champions Honored.

During the past season, the Kiwanis baseball team, under the management of Jack Deannard, was successful in winning the city juvenile championship, and to-day the Kiwanians indicated their appreciation by inviting the manager and members of his team to luncheon, together with W. J. Prindible, president of the City League. Two presentations, that of gold fobs to the players, and that of the J. M. Greene Cup (emblematic of the championship) to President Joe John, brightened the occasion, Manager Deannard making the latter and President John, the former. The players present included K. A. Jones, A. Weir, G. Cuthbertson, J. Dunkerley, A. Saunders, Thomas Foley, John C. Huggins, Cyril Whatley, D. McCulloch, and G. Braund.

Introduced as Babe Ruth, Kiwanian Art Reynolds was declared ineligible by silent consent.

Other guests at the luncheon were W. H. Gillespie, C. S. Cummer, J. Turnbull, J. Y. Kellough of Port Hope, and the two singers, Mr. Leslie, who is in Peterborough in connection with the United Church week, was the original president of the Toronto Lions' Club, and his numbers included "Song of the Bow," words by Conan Doyle, and Harry Lauder's new composition, "The End of the Road."

Doug. Carlisle, always a pleasing entertainer, was heard in an impressive rendition of "In Flanders Fields" to the accompaniment of which George Liddle did full justice.

Regret Departure.

The members of the clug, through President John, voiced their regret at the departure of W. Harry Dickin, who, for the past four years, has been a member of the club and who is soon to leave for Toronto. Mr. Dickin, in turn, thanked all present for their fellowship in the past and best wishes for the future.

To J. J. Turner the club respectfully tendered its sympathy in his recent bereavement, by standing for a moment of silence.

Wilfred Huycke moved the vote of thanks at the conclusion of Lieut. Heron's address, and he, too, recalled the days leading up to the Armistice, especially as they affected Canada. He thanked Messrs. Leslie and Carlisle for their contributions.

TEACHERS HEAR FINE ADDRESS

R. J. Bolton Discusses Subject, "Work and Wages" at Convention.

REGULATIONS CHANGED.

At the morning session of the teachers' convention on Thursday Mr. Bolton gave a paper on "Work and Wages." "It is generally conceded that teachers render services; how are they repaid for their labors? Is money the sole reward? To consider this question he divided teachers into three classes: those who must teach because it is an inborn instinct, others who use teaching merely as a stepping stone, and finally those who have drifted into the profession through the force of circumstances or by accident as it were.

"One reward the teacher has is the satisfaction of doing one's work well. The chief reward however is the effect on the teacher himself. Our characters are being moulded every day. Are we receiving good or ill? Does teaching actually do us harm? Are our minds narrowing or are we getting into ruts? We occupy a more respected place in the community that we did formerly but we might occupy a still greater place. We ought to broaden our minds by reading, recreation, hobbies, etc. We should mingle with the outside world more. We are not inferior to the general citizens of the community. Let us meet them and mingle with them on an equal footing."

Silver Lining

"Every cloud has a silver lining. Many teachers find this work a great joy. The society of the children promotes youthfulness in teachers. Doctors deal with disease, lawyers with crime, bankers with importunate borrowers. We have a distinct advantage over these. Children are happy and happiness is contagious so the teacher has a great opportunity. Aristotle said that happiness was the aim of life so teachers seem to have a most excellent chance for this blessing and this is one of their great rewards concluded the speaker.

Discusses Regulations

Mr. Mowat discussed some recent changes in the regulations and referred to other matters of interest to teachers.

The period of teaching in order to receive the maximum superannuation has been reduced from forty years to thirty-nine. The maximum has been increased from one thousand to twelve hundred and fifty dollars a year. There is a surplus in the fund so that it is possible that the time limit may be further reduced and the annual grant increased. Teachers who drop out on account of disability are given liberal consideration by the Department and funds paid in are given to the heirs of those who die before receiving superannuation.

Mr. Mowat discussed various topics dealing with character-building. He did not favor having regular lessons to teach virtues; These should be taught incidentally or when they can be dealt with most effectively. In speaking of patriotism he thought that the importance and significance of the war memorial might well be brought to the attention of the children.

A motion was passed that prints of the war memorial be obtained for the various schools.

Reference was made to a book which said that an atmosphere of interest and fearlessness should be evident in every class-room to promote progress. The pupils should not fear the teacher or be afraid to ask questions

PROBE IS WELCOMED ANNOUNCES VENIOT

Postmaster-General Is In Favor of an Investigation Into His Record.

OTTAWA, November 9. — Hon. Peter J. Veniot, Postmaster-General, has announced he will favor investigation of his record respecting the treatment of returned soldiers applying for positions in the Post Office Department if an investigation is asked for by organized war veterans.

This was his attitude yesterday, when his attention was drawn to the suggestion of the Hon. G. N. Gordon, K.C., of Peterborough, that a Royal Commission should be appointed to consider the Simcoe postmastership episode. Mr. Veniot is ready to defend his action in Parliament or the country, but it is doubtful if the Government will name a Royal Commission.

LINEN DISPLAY AT HALL'S STORE

Historic Interest Shown in Model of Irish Weaver's Cottage.

A wealth of historic interest is possessed by a special display in the south show windows of the Richard Hall Ltd. store, George street, and much favorable comment has been heard from those who have paused to note its details.

A large model of an Irish weaver's cottage, replete with its thatched roof, canopied bed, large fireplace and open cupboard with life-like figures, is seen in the more southerly part of the window, while forming a background is a beautiful display of Rose of Sharon linens. To the north is seen a weaving machine, in full motion, working industriously though utterly devoid of any threading.

Worthy of special mention is the section of linen damask of design identical to that used on the table of King George V. In its four corners are the royal inscriptions while the weaving itself is strikingly unusual.

STRANGE AS IT SEEMS—by John Hix

HELD FOR FRAUD.

Alfredo E. Kros, who was supposed to have been a young man with influential Holland connections, whose self-styled mission in Canada was to help fellow Dutchmen get settled, came to grief in Toronto recently when arrested on the complaints of two of his women dupes, one of whom said he got $1,025 from her on the promise of marriage. The magistrate remanded him to see if he could make good his claim that he could get money cabled from Holland. Police found in his trunks a number of "mash" notes from girls all over the country, many of which were "leap year proposals." He is 27, good-looking and a facile linguist. He said he had toured the West extensively, working as dishwasher and farm "scion of the nobility."

D Kerr, K.C., speaking in the Empress Hotel last night to the gathered members of the City Council and Chamber of Commerce, said: "There are many cities in Canada who have long years of service by their city clerk, but no city is so blessed with a better, more efficient, more faithful or more cheerful city clerk than the City of Peterborough." Those present then stood and gave three cheers and a "tiger" for Mr. Armstrong in token of their appreciation of his services.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, November 9 (Canadian Press). — Brisk demand for corn, together with a decided falling off in country offerings of the yellow cereal, turned all grain values upward late yesterday. Special attention was directed to a report that the five chief corn-producing nations of Europe have a total corn crop of only 294,000,000 bushels for 1928, compared with 403,000,000 bushels last year and 600,000,000 bushels in 1926.

Closing quotations on corn were unsettled, ½c to ¾c net higher. Wheat finished ½c to ¾c up, oats showing ¼c to ⅝c to ½c gain, and provisions varying from 5 cents decline to an equal advance.

Bulging prices for corn future deliveries were stimulated primarily yesterday by a notable falling off in the volume of corn receipts at Chicago and at other leading centres. Yesterday's arrivals in Chicago amounted to but 174 cars, against 348 cars a week ago. On top of this was the announcement that vessel charters had been made here for 150,000 bushels of corn to go to Montreal, and that Argentine corn abroad is being quoted at 9c per bushel over the price of corn from the United States. Meanwhile, spread trading in which corn was bought and wheat sold tended further to strengthen the corn market.

One of the largest commission houses in Chicago subsequently gave out a statement laying stress on indications that although as a rule the corn market has been considered a domestic affair, corn this year is apparently a matter of international concern. The statement cited figures from an authoritative source as pointing to a big shortage of corn supplies in Europe. It was added that the remaining corn surplus in Argentina is very small, and that now Argentine corn will not be available before April next. Under such circumstances, the corn market here mover upgrade, and closed at nearly the day's top level, with late despatches telling of good bookings of ocean freight room, said to be for corn.

Wheat, after an early decline, advanced with corn, despite the fact that news about wheat itself was bearish. Wheat export business from North America was confined to 500,000 bushels largely low-grade wheat from Canada. Liverpool wheat quotations were lower than expected, weather was auspicious for the Argentine harvest, and Argentine old crop wheat was being offered for November shipment at a discount under the new crop. Oats yesterday were governed mostly by the action of corn.

Packers' selling of lard made the provision market easy.

STERLING EXCHANGE.

MONTREAL, Que., November 9 (Canadian Press). — Sterling exchange rates were quoted here yesterday as follows:

Demand—$4.84 13-16 to 15-16.
Cables—$4.85¼ to $4.85⅝.

BUTTER AND EGGS.

TORONTO, Nov. 9.—Business volume in the local butter market yesterday was small in a wholesale and jobbing way and spot sales revealed no direct change in prices from the previous day. In some market quarters slightly higher prices than the nominal range were mooted, but the premium was usually obtained for extra fancy butter. The general market's quotable range was from 40c to 40½c per lb. for finest creamery solids, with most of the small demand for strictly immediate requirements. The steamship Devon, reported to have sailed from New Zealand on Tuesday, October 30, en route to United States and Canadian ports of call, is carrying shipments in the neighborhood of 56,000 boxes of finest creamery for Canadian use. Unloading will take place at Halifax for distribution to markets in the interior. The Devon is not expected to report arrival at Halifax until about Dec. 15.

Cheese marketing conditions at Toronto are practically unchanged. Business volume is distinctly light and quotable range for No. 1 large, colored, paraffined and Government graded is from 21½c to 22c per lb., delivered basis.

Listen!

Have you heard about Peps? Peps is a scientific preparation put up in pastille form, which provides an entirely new and effective treatment for coughs, colds, chest and throat troubles.

Peps contain certain medicinal ingredients, which, when placed upon the tongue, immediately turn into vapor, and are breathed down the air passages to the lungs. On their journey, they soothe the inflamed and irritated membranes of the bronchial tubes, the delicate walls of the air passages, and finally enter and carry relief and healing to the lungs.

While no liquid or solid can get to the lungs and air passages, these Peps fumes get there direct, and healing commences.

FREE TRIAL. Cut out this article, write across it the name and date of this paper, and mail it (with 1c. stamp to pay return postage) to Peps Co., Toronto. A free trial package will then be sent you. All druggists and stores sell Peps, 25c box.

A Story of Revenged Love, by Ruby M. Ayres

CHAPTER XXVIII.

THE STORY THUS FAR:

GILES CHITTENHAM returns to London from the United States, where he has contracted a secret and unfortunate marriage, to help wind up the affairs of his younger half brother, RODNEY, who has recently killed himself for love of the notorious flirt, JULIE FARROW. In Switzerland he meets Julie Farrow, through his friend, LOMBARD, and makes love to her with the intention of spurning her in revenge for her treatment of Rodney. But, after he realizes that he really loves her, he finds out that she is a cousin of the Julie Farrow whom his brother loved. He tells her the truth—of his mistake, and that, because of his marriage, he cannot marry her. He meets her later to find that she is leading a wild, gay life, and is apparently heartless. A rich, recently widowed older man, named SCHOFIELD, wants to marry her. Chittenham hears that SADIE, his wife, is in London. Then he meets the other Julie, who tells him she is ill and cannot live long. Then she leaves England. Bim asks Julie why she and Chittenham fell out and Julie says he's married.

"Married"

Somehow such a possibility had never occurred to Bim. She knew that in Switzerland something that in a moment had shattered their newly found happiness, but Julie had never explained.

One moment she had told her: "I'm so happy. I didn't know there was such happiness in the world. I know it sounds absurd when we hardly know one another—but he loves me and I love him, and we're going to be married."

And then—an hour later:

"He's gone. Never speak about him again. I hate him. I wish we had never met."

That was all. Bim had never known until now, when Julie flung the truth at her.

"He's married."

There was a long silence, then Julie said again with a pathetic attempt at mirth:

"So you see it's no use my forgiving him. It wouldn't help at all." She looked up at Bim and tried to smile.

"I daresay I could offer to live with him, only he'd be so terribly shocked."

"Julie, don't talk like that."

"Well, why not? Jewel does that sort of thing, or at least people say she does."

"You are not like Jewel."

"People often mistake me for her, so there isn't any reason why I shouldn't be." Julie said recklessly. She began to laugh. "Can't you imagine Giles's face if I went to him and said: 'Look here, I can't be happy without you. I know you can't marry me, but that doesn't matter. I'll live with you if you'll let me. Thank you, kindly.' Poor man, he'd die of horror."

Her head went down again on her outflung arms and she began to sob.

"Julie, you'll make yourself ill."

Bim tried in vain to soothe her, but now Julie had allowed the flood to rise and break her down it seemed impossible to check it.

Bim sat quite still, her hand on the girl's hair till Julie was quieter, then she tried again.

"Don't be a coward, Julie. Cut it all out and come away with me."

"I should be more of a coward if I did that. He'd know I was afraid."

"Don't you think he knows it now?"

"If I thought he did, I'd kill myself."

"No you wouldn't. I said just that sort of thing years ago, and here I am, you see."

"You're different."

Bim smiled sadly.

"I think we're all very much alike when it comes to this sort of thing," she said.

Julie scrambled to her feet again. She went over to the dressing-table and dabbed her flushed, tear-stained face with eau de Cologne.

"A nice sight I look! That's your fault, for making me cry. What's the use anyway, and I've got to go out to lunch with Lawrence."

"You're being very unkind to that poor man."

"I can't help it. It's his fault. He knows I don't want him."

"You may have told him so, but he won't believe it as long as you let him take you about and give you expensive presents."

"Oh, stop preaching!" Julie said wearily.

"I can see it's no use," Bim answered.

Julie fidgeted with the scent bottle. She was bitterly ashamed of her outburst and angry with Bim for having caused it.

"Well, it will all be the same in a hundred years' time," she said hardily. "I'll go and put on some rags."

She slipped away, leaving the doors open, and now and then she called across the dividing passage.

"What's it like out—cold? Shall I want a coat? No, well then I'll wear my green frock. Bim, you'd better come tomorrow."

"Come where?"

"To Mrs. Ardron's. It'll be a new thrill, whether you believe in it or not."

"I don't want a new thrill."

"Rubbish! Of course you do. It's the only thing that makes life worth living."

There was a little silence, then Bim asked:

"Julie, have you seen his wife?"

"Whose wife?"

"Mr. Chittenham's?"

"Good Lord, no! He told me they were separated or something; but if they are I daresay it's his fault. He must be a brute to live with."

"Is she in England?" Bim persisted.

"I don't know. No, I believe he said she was in America."

Bim got up slowly and walked into Julie's room.

"I suppose it's true," she submitted hesitatingly.

"What is true?"

"That he is married?"

Julie turned round, her eyes wide, her lips parted.

"I suppose so," she said slowly, then the color blazed suddenly in her cheeks. "Do you mean that you think he just said it—as an excuse to get rid of me."

"Well—"

Julie went on with her dressing, but her hands shook badly.

"If I really thought that—" she said.

"Perhaps I ought not to have suggested it." Bim said hurriedly, "but he makes love to you—asks you to marry him—"

"No, he never asked me to marry him," Julie interrupted ruthlessly. "He just said—oh, why need we go all over it again?" she asked passionately.

"I'm only trying to help you, Julie. If it is true that he is married, why did he make love to you?"

Julie laughed.

"Don't all married men make love to other women?" she asked cynically.

"I shouldn't have thought a man like Mr. Chittenham would," Bim said.

Julie made a little sound of anger.

"I suppose I shall have to tell you all the truth," she said. "It all sounds so silly—like a cheap drama. He thought I was Jewel—I never told you that, did I? He had some quixotic idea of paying me out for what he thought I had done to Rodney—they all blamed Jewel because he killed himself, you know. Well, Giles thought it would be a good idea to make me fall in love with him and then laugh at me as a punishment—funny, isn't it?" she submitted quiveringly. "Well, I fell in love with him all right—and then after he'd found out his mistake and that I wasn't Jewel after all, he told me the truth. But first he said that he really loved me—he said that part of it wasn't pretence at all, but the real thing—I remember I was fool enough to think it must be all right then. I was quite ready to fall into his arms again and forgive him." Her voice was hoarse with dreary self-scorn. "And then he had to tell me the rest—that he was married— Funny, wasn't it?"

"Oh, Julie, don't be so hard! We all have to have trouble."

"Well, I've had mine. Shall I wear this hat or the green one? I've done with trouble. It's all rot to say it has a softening effect on people. Mine has just turned me to stone. I never wanted to fall in love. I always dreaded it. There! That's the bell! It's Lawrence, I suppose. Bim, that man bores me to tears with his devotion. If only he wouldn't look at me as if I were the most beautiful woman in the world!"

"I daresay he thinks you are. Come in!"

A maid had tapped at the door and entered.

"Please, Miss Farrow, will you see Mr. Chittenham?"

Julie swung round from the contemplation of her pale face beneath the brim of the green hat which she had picked up from the bed to try on.

"No," she said sharply. "I'm just going out. Say I am engaged."

"Very good, miss."

The door closed quietly behind the maid, and Bim said, a trifle maliciously:

"He will think you are afraid of him, Julie."

Julie's cheeks flamed.

"Afraid!"

She made an impetuous rush to the door and opened it.

"Wait a moment!"

The maid, already half-way across the little passage, turned.

"Tell Mr. Chittenham I will see him in five minutes," Julie said, and went back to her bedroom.

"Afraid!" she said again scornfully.

Bim made no comment. She was sorry now that she had spoken. After all, what good could come of a meeting between these two?"

"Afraid!" Julie said again shakily.

She took a little make-up box from a drawer and began to apply rouge and lipstick with a too-liberal hand. "I've never met a man I'm afraid of yet," she said defiantly.

She took off the green hat and tossed it away from her across the room. "Give me a cigarette."

She almost snatched the case from Bim's hand. She was trembling very much, and she wasted three matches before she succeeded in getting a light.

"Damn the thing—damn everything," she said passionately.

"What shall I tell Mr. Schofield if he calls?" Bim asked diffidently.

Julie laughed.

"Tell him I'm ill—dead—tell him to go to the devil—anything you like," she said, and was gone.

AUBURN FIRE.

It always strikes me as strange the way facts are somewhat distorted either unknowingly or with the idea to suit the occasion more fittingly.

The Examiner of Wednesday indicated that the efforts of the Auburn fire fighters were very weak, and might lead one to think that the Auburn Mill would to-day be a total wreck had it not been for the timely arrival of the excellent Peterborough Fire Brigade.

For general information I would like it to be known, that when the Fire Outfit did arrive, the fellows at the mill already had two hose playing on the fire from two separate hydrants, and another hose attached to the fire pump which was ejecting water onto the fire with a pressure behind it of one hundred and ten pounds, and it took five and six men to hold it down.

We also had another few lengths of hose extended on the ground and attached to another hydrant in preparation to play upon another warehouse adjacent to the fire. The length was not sufficiently long enough to reach the fire but would have been of excellent use had the other building been in danger.

The Peterborough Fire Brigade did lay out onto the ground one length of hose, but I don't think it was attached to the hydrant. There certainly was not any water passed through it. Also their arrival was just in time to see the extinguishing of the last of the flames.

This is written to dispel the idea which may be prevalent after The Examiner's report that the Auburn fire fighters are not quite a bunch of dubs.

Yours truly,
O. C. Auburn Fire Fighters.

THE MIRROR OF THE MODE

By Mary Marshall.

Sports hat above made of two shades of brown wool tricot and the evening headdress of golden-colored velvet trimmed with an aigrette like ornament prove that the turban may be worn as appropriately for sports as for formal evening occasions.

East is East and West is West
And never the twain shall meet—

And yet in matters of women's dress the east is rapidly becoming Occidental and there is just as truly a tendency among us women of the western continent and western Europe toward ideals of dress that were once distinctively Oriental. The so-called enlightened women of China, Japan, Persia, Turkey and India adopt Western fashions as part of their emancipation from age-old repression. The Japanese woman discards her comfortable native sandals and puts on French heeled slippers and feels that in so doing she has acquired something of the new freedom—and in the meantime Occidental women are gradually breaking away from age-old dress conventions of the West and adopting garments of a more Oriental sort because they realize that they are more comfortable.

It is usually with no conscious effort or desire to become Oriental that these changes are made, and yet a dozen or more radical changes in women's dress that have taken place within twenty or thirty years might be looked upon as of Eastern inspiration and precedent. The tightly laced stiff corset which we have discarded was of purely Western invention, the easily adjusted one-piece gown was Oriental. Stiff high collars were Occidental—and we gave them up. Low-cut shoes have almost entirely taken the place of shoes that buttoned or laced over the ankles—another Occidental invention. Stiff hats with elaborate trimming could never have been evolved east of Suez—and these, too, we have thrown into the scrap heap. And this new type of turban which is so important in the present mode is not a mere Occidentalized version of the real turban, mounted on a stiff frame and perched on the top of a Western coiffure. It is light of weight and is worn closely drawn around the head in true Eastern fashion.

OYSTER POCKETS.

These are delightful surprises for the platter luncheon. Drain and dry oysters, allowing 6 to each pocket. Make a pie crust, not too short, and cut into 6-inch squares. Mix oysters with a rich, highly-seasoned cream sauce and put 1 tablespoon of the oyster sauce on each square of pastry. Fold over into a triangle and pinch edges together to hold the mixture. Prick in a few places on top to allow steam to escape and bake until crust is done, baking them in a buttered pie pan. Serve hot, garnished with parsley or wtaercress.

SPLIT PEA SOUP.

As cooler weather approaches our thoughts turn to good soups. One cup dried split peas, 2½ quarts cold water, 1 pint scalded milk, 1 onion, 1 carrot, ½ cup chopped celery, 3 tablespoons butter, 2 tablespoons cornstarch, 2 teaspoons salt, ½ teaspoon pepper, ½ pound fat salt pork. Wash and soak peas over night in cold water. Drain and pour over the peas 2½ quarts of vegetables and salt and simmer for 4 hours. Rub through a strainer and add creamed butter and cornstarch. Add enough of the milk to make it the thickness desired; usually all of it will be necessary.

THE WHATNOT

A Place for Little Bits of Everything of Local Interest

By MARION

Well! After all my rush—and your rush—to get the Armistice number ready for Friday, it is not being issued to-day. A car of paper went astray, and there was not enough on hand to print this huge number.

* * * * * * *

It is planned, now, to issue it on Saturday. But it will be worth waiting for! There is more than a full page of letters from the neighbors, telling about Armistice—and every one will give you a thrill.

* * * * * * *

I have a mind full of inquisitiveness, and when they told me they wouldn't have enough paper I started out to find how much it will take to print the Armistice number. They told me "16 rolls," but that did not mean anything to me.

* * * * * * *

I measured a page, 23 inches, and figured that there will be 26 sheets (52 pages) in the special edition. With 11,000 copies printed, that means 104 miles of paper 36½ inches wide.

I don't blame them for being a little short, now; do you? Just think, in this edition there will be 208 miles of printing! Which means that each subscriber will get 800 feet of column-wide reading!

* * * * * * *

It's disappointing, just the same, when you have been all het up as I have been over this number to have its issue postponed. But it's all in the day's work.

* * * * * * *

You will remember a few weeks ago I promised to give you some letters which I received some time ago on family relations. Well, here is one from Mrs. McK. that you will enjoy. The others will be published as I get room.

* * * * * * *

"My husband's big failing is that he never gets up when the alarm rings. He expects me to take up its duties and act as a sort of repeating alarm every five minutes until he finally decides to rouse himself and get dressed.

* * * * * * *

"He doesn't pay any attention at all to my reminders. From the complete indifference shown toward my efforts to convince him another day has dawned you might think he was a king being pestered by a particularly objectionable subject.

* * * * * * *

"'Come on!', I shout up the back stairs. 'It's after 8. You won't get to the office on time.'

* * * * * * *

"I know just what he does then, because I have been in the room when I've sounded this warning, before I learned it was just as effective if shouted from the ground floor. He opens one eye and tries to look as though he'd never heard of anything so foolish as going to an office.

* * * * * * *

"Finally, in exasperation, I tell him I'm not going to call any more, and then—because neither the alarm clock nor I, not anything, nor anybody else tells him to—he gets up and hurries into his clothes.

* * * * * * *

"I've often wondered, Dear Marion, what would happen some day if I let him sleep! Perhaps some neighbor who has tried the experiment will tell me?"

* * * * * * *

The new crush collar help is in good demand. It is really a splendid addition to an outfit, looking luxurious, at small cost. Please send me the coupon and I will mail the help at once.

When I dropped in at a certain house for afternoon tea the other day I had another new sandwich filling, and Mrs. H. kindly allowed me to print it: Diced celery, coarsely chopped pecans and cut-up figs on lettuce with mayonnaise.

MARION'S MAIL

Address correspondence to Marion, at The Examiner Office.

"Dear Marion:

I read in your Saturday Whatnot about imagination and I want to say something about it if I may. I am only a factory girl, but that doesn't lower me in your imagination, does it? I often wondered if being a factory girl turned any boy's respect for a girl? I am not one by my own choice. I even had ambitions to be an author but they were dimmed early. I would still love to be one but financial difficulties won't allow.

About my imagination, Marion, I work by myself usually and when I have no one to talk to I create dream people of my own. In fancy I am far away from the noisy factory and in some place I long to be. I will admit I have wonderful powers of imagination because at school I took prizes for all my compositions and essays. I wanted my education but didn't get it. Did get a couple of years high school but I dreamed of great things. I read in a book the other day a wonderful paragraph discussing books. I will look it up and send it if I may. It said books are wonderful companions and open up a new world for us. They do, don't they? Well, Marion, I don't want to tire you with any more. May I write again, I have so much to say?

Dreamer.

P.S.—I want to compliment you on your wonderful page which I read with interest every night. Please answer my letter soon through your columns."

I think, "Dreamer," you and I must be very much akin. You have exactly my idea—if one can't have actualities one can at least have dreams—and, really, they are not so unsubstantial as people think.

I think the boy who looks down on a girl because she works in a factory is not worth that girl's attention, "Dreamer." As for my idea, why you'd be surprised to learn some of the things I've done to earn my daily bread! It's not what we are compelled by force of circumstances to do that counts—it's the real US behind and inside it all.

Do write to me again; I have enjoyed your letter so much.

"My dear Marion:

I am staying in Vancouver for some time and am having The Examiner sent to me, and I cannot convey to you the pleasure I get from reading your household helps, etc.

I am sending for some helps for which I thank you in advance.

Sincerely yours,
Mrs. W. Galbraith,"

Vancouver, B.C.

I am delighted to hear from so far away and to know that we can be neighborly with folk even in Vancouver.

"Dear Marion:

I am seeking your advice as to the correct way a flower is worn on a coat.

There are so many different ways but yet they do not give a good appearance.

Hoping I am not opposing on your good judgment.

I am,
Yours faithfully,
Doris,"

Trent River.

This depends almost entirely upon your own personal taste, Doris. Fashion just now says in the extreme centre of the back of the collar, but for better taste, I think, it would appear on the right of the collar in front. Some girls prefer to have the flower on the left side, but in buttoning the collar, the flower would become destroyed.

LYRICS OF LIFE

TREASURE HOUSES

The treasure houses of our youth
Are built for wealth we mean to win,
And so we shall, if we find truth
And put both truth and treasure in.
Gold without honor is not much,
However great the gold we clutch,
But who his honor keeps may find
He has not gold, and yet not mind.

The treasure houses of our years
Are built for love we mean to own,
And so we shall, if it appears
We loved, but not for self alone.
The love that only loves to take,
That is the love that loves forsake,
But he who loves, and loves to give,
Will never need to loveless live.

The treasure houses of our age
Are built for memories without end,
And filled they are, if every page
Is sweet with memories of a friend.
Dishonest gold who would possess?
Life without love is even less;
But when with love and truth we build
Our treasure house is always filled.

UNCLE WIGGILY

By HOWARD R. GARIS

To-day's Bedtime Story

UNCLE WIGGILY AND THE COLD CLAPPER

(Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate.)

Dazie Wogglejig was doing a funny dance in the Hollow Stump School to amuse the animal boys and girls. The Lady Mouse Teacher had asked Uncle Wiggily to bring Dazie to dance and the rabbit gentleman had come early with the little Wogglejig girl, who was made of wooden pegs, a round ball for a head and two egg-shaped pieces for a body.

Then, all of a sudden, as he was whistling a tune while the Lady Mouse Teacher was playing dance music on the piano, Uncle Wiggily saw the Wolf's eyes staring in the schoolroom window, as I told you last night.

The Bad Chap ran away.

"Well do I know that Wolf is there for no good," said Uncle Wiggily, but he kept on whistling for he did not want any of the animal boys or girls to be worried about the Wolf's eyes looking in at them. "I hope the Wolf isn't after Dazie," said the rabbit, taking a second thought. "If she sees his eyes looking at her it may twist her all up in her dance. That would be too bad!"

All this time Dazie kept on dancing, cutting up the funniest capers and making Jackie Bow Wow and his brother Peetie and Lulu Wibblewobble and all the other children laugh so hard "as never was."

But all the while the Wolf's eyes kept looking in that window which was open to let in the fresh air, which we must always have in school.

"He'll jump in pretty soon," thought Uncle Wiggily. "Oh, if Dazie should see him looking at her she would break down in the middle of her wonderful dance!" And all the while Uncle Wiggily kept whistling.

Then, all of a sudden, Dazie danced toward where Uncle Wiggily was sitting near the piano and, without stopping her steps, the little Wogglejig girl whispered out of the side of her wooden mouth:

"Do you see that Wolf's eyes, Unkie Wig?"

"Of course I see him!" whispered back the rabbit gentleman, and he had to stop whistling to whisper, but Miss Mouse kept on playing. She, too, had seen the Bad Chap.

"Don't be afraid of him, Dazie," whispered Miss Mouse, as she kept on playing and none of the animal boys or girls noticed the Wolf, for they were watching Dazie dance.

"Oh, I'm not afraid!" said the Wogglejig girl. "A Wolf won't nibble me because I'm made of wood. But do you want to see me drive him away?" she asked.

"Can you do it, my dear?" Uncle Wiggily inquired.

"Of course!" said Dazie with a laugh. "Watch me!" Then, dancing on three legs she kicked her fourth leg at the window and it hit the Wolf in his left eye.

"Wow!" howled the Bad Chap, but he didn't go away.

"Have another leg!" said Dazie and, dancing on two legs, she kicked her third one at the Wolf. This leg hit him in the right eye.

"Zow!" howled the Bad Chap. But still he didn't go away.

"Well, you want another leg, I see!" cried Dazie. "I can dance on one as easily as on two." She was going to kick another wooden peg at the Wolf, but he didn't stay to let it hit him. Jumping down from the box, on which he stood outside the Hollow Stump School window, looking in, the Bad Chap ran away.

"Good for you, Dazie!" cried Uncle Wiggily, clapping his paws.

"Indeed, she is a brave little Wogglejig," squeaked Miss Mouse.

And not until then did any of the animal boys and girls know that the Bad Chap had been staring at them with his big eyes. They thought when Dazie kicked off her legs it was all part of the dance. And my! How they cheered and laughed when it was all over.

Then Dazie went home to her Bungle-ump, after Miss Mouse picked up her legs, and Uncle Wiggily started out of school to go have an adventure. But the old rabbit gentleman had not reached the bottom of the outside steps when, all at once, he heard a voice calling to him from up in the air.

"Uncle Wiggily! Uncle Wiggily!" called the high voice. "Please take me with you!"

"Why, who are you?" asked the rabbit, seeing no one.

"I am the Cold Clapper," was the answer.

"What in the world is a Cold Clapper?" Uncle Wiggily wanted to know.

"I'm the clapper in the school bell," was the reply, "and I am very cold up here. Can't I go with you adventuring?"

"How are you going to get down?" asked the rabbit.

"I'll show you," said the Cold Clapper. There was a clanging of the bell and down at Uncle Wiggily's paws fell a long piece of iron with a knob on one end that had a sort of face on it. This was the bell clapper. "I'm tired of staying up there, so cold all the while and being knocked against the sides of the bell," said the Clapper. "I want to go with you, Mr. Longears."

"Come along," invited the rabbit, and soon I shall tell you about their adventure.

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, But Do Not Compel

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 10, 1928

(Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate.)

Benefic stars rule today, according to astrology, which finds that the sway is exceedingly stimulating and energizing.

Promoters and agents should profit under this rule of the stars, which encourages speculation and business ventures.

Advertising is especially well directed under this planetary government which benefits newspapers and magazines.

Topics of worldwide interest will arrest public attention with the new year which is to be one of supreme moment, it is prognosticated.

Bankers and financiers should profit from some development in international relations. All the signs appear to favor banks.

This should be a lucky day for settling one's debts and for looking after the family budget.

One of the next important subjects for national reform will be the waste of money and the extravagance that mark Americans of small incomes, the seers prophesy.

Administration of salaries and wages according to the best standards of economics should be studied at this time when astrologers foretell distant events of greatest moment to the world.

Good luck should attend all who sail today for foreign shores. While voyaging on the Atlantic and Pacific oceans may be unusually popular all winter, heavy storms are to be expected.

The stars presage increased appreciation of color among Americans who will use gay hues wherever possible.

Astrologers stress the effect of color upon the mental outlook of a man or a woman and counsel all persons to study their own color harmonies as revealed through the science of the stars.

Manufacturers and merchants will exercise a greater power than ever in encouraging the use of lovely tints in all manners possible, it is prophesied.

Persons whose birthdate it is have the augury of a prosperous year in which they may benefit through legacies. They may expect new friends.

Children born on this day may have real literary gifts. Many editors and authors belong to this sign of Scorpio.

Why We Do What We Do.

WHY PEOPLE COMMIT CRIME

By Mehran K. Thomson, Ph.D.
(Author, The Springs of Human Action)

Technically we are all criminals. The criminal is one who violates some law or other. And who is there among us who has not at some time done some thing contrary to law? If nothing more we have certainly all violated traffic laws. There is no way of avoiding this altogether. In some towns if you drive above twelve miles an hour you are a criminal and liable to arrest.

The enactment of every new law virtually creates new criminals. Nothing is a crime which is not prohibited by law. In a superficial sense the law makes criminals because if there were no laws there would be no criminals.

The motive for crime may be anything from sheer ignorance and indifference to a hardened anti-social attitude which aims to get revenge on somebody in particular or everybody in general.

Money has always been one of the strongest motives for crime. Practically all robbery, thievery and hold-ups are prompted by the desire to get money without working for it. To some it seems like an easy way. Even murder is committed in cold blood for money. According to a newspaper report the president of the Chicago Crime Commission says there are sixty men in Chicago who will kill anyone for prices ranging from five dollars to two hundred and fifty dollars.

But when you get right down to the human elements involved in the committing of crime you find that some commit crime because they are too lazy to work. And once they have taken in a few thousand or even a few hundred dollars in one full swoop it is next to impossible for them to work all day for a few dollars. Others think they are too clever to get caught. Still others enjoy the thrill of the adventure, and the greater the risk the more thrilling the experience.

Many simply drift into a life of crime through bad companions and unfortunate circumstances. Some are practically forced into it to shield a friend or because they have no will power of their own and are dominated by a "master mind."

The respectable citizen is likely to look down upon all criminals as inherently bad, as out of the pall of humanity. And yet when you examine the facts you do not even find the so-called instinct for crime. Criminals are human beings whose impulses and desires are misdirected and mismanaged partly through unfortunate circumstances and partly through poor inheritance and the wrong sort of bringing up.

Why do you do what you do. Ask Dr. Thomson. Write care of this paper and send stamped, self-addressed envelope.

52 MILLION BOTTLES USED

YOUR HEALTH

(By Dr. Frank McCoy.)

Dr. McCoy's menus suggested for the week beginning Sunday, November 11:

SUNDAY—Breakfast: Coddled eggs, waffle (browned through), stewed pears. Lunch: Cooked asparagus, cooked carrots, lettuce. Dinner: Tomato jelly, baked chicken or rabbit, baked parsnips, oyster plant, combination salad of string beans, cucumbers and lettuce, peach whip.

MONDAY—Breakfast: Cottage cheese, sliced pineapple. Lunch: Boiled rice, cooked string beans, raw celery. Dinner: Celery soup, broiled steak, cooked spinach, salad of grated carrots and chopped celery, minced prunes molded in gelatin, with whipped cream.

TUESDAY—Breakfast: French omelet, Melba toast, stewed figs. Lunch: *Potato soup, cooked oyster plant, lettuce. Dinner: Roast pork, cooked turnips, cooked okra, salad of raw spinach leaves, baked apple.

WEDNESDAY—Breakfast: Wholewheat muffins with peanut butter, pear sauce. Lunch: Baked squash, cooked lettuce, cucumbers. Dinner: Mushroom soup, boiled lamb chops, steamed carrots, McCoy salad, apricot whip.

THURSDAY—Breakfast: Baked eggs, Melba toast, stewed raisins. Dinner: Buttered noodles, cooked turnip tops, celery. Dinner: Clear tomato soup (beef broth with tomato added), roast beef, cooked string beans, salad of tomato-spinach-asparagus, pineapple sponge.

FRIDAY—Breakfast: Coddled eggs, broiled ham, waffle applesauce. Lunch: Sandwiches of real wholewheat bread and peanut butter, salad of shredded lettuce, ripe olives. Dinner: Baked halibut, stewed tomatoes, spinach, McCoy salad, no dessert.

SATURDAY—Breakfast: Cottagecheese, stewed peaches. Lunch: Carrot loaf, cooked lettuce and parsley, celery. Dinner: Vegetable soup, Salisbury steak, buttered vegetables (carrots, turnips and beets cooked separately and diced together), head lettuce with olive oil, apple whip or ice-cream.

*POTATO SOUP: Peel and dice potatoes to equal three cups and place over fire with three or four cups of water. Cook until tender and add about three cupfuls of milk or thin cream and the desired amount of chopped parsley. Serve with thin strips of Melba toast. By using celery instead of potatoes you have a delicious non-starchy soup.

WHOLEWHEAT MUFFINS: To a well-beaten egg add one cupful of sweet milk. Stir in one cupful of real wholewheat flour and beat until smooth, then add a half cupful of the wholewheat flour into which has been sifted one level teaspoonful of baking powder. Mix thoroughly and bake in muffin tins in a moderately hot oven until brown. The quantity makes six medium or eight small muffins.

Those who are overweight or who, for any reason, which to eliminate the starches from their diet, may substitute any of the luncheons with any one kind of the following raw acid fruits or their juices: apples, apricots, peaches, pears, grapes, oranges, grapefruit, plums, pineapple, tomato or melon.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS:

Soft Teeth.

QUESTION: Ollie B. writes: "My teeth are very soft and brittle. Will you please tell me what causes this and can it be remedied?"

ANSWER: Your diet is probably lacking in important mineral elements, such as calcium, magnesium and flourin. I have a special article giving a list of these mineral elements which I will be glad to send you if you will send me a self-addressed envelope and four cents postage.

Feeding a Three-year-old.

QUESTION: Mrs. K. H. asks: "Should not cheese and raw carrots and other raw foods be fed children three years of age?"

ANSWER: Children of three years can be fed any foods suitable for an adult. The foods you have mentioned may often be used to advantage when the child is only two years old, but the proportions and combinations of foods must be carefully watched. Send for a special article on "Feeding the Baby After Weaning," enclosing a large self-addressed stamped envelope.

Asthma.

QUESTION: M. D. J. writes: My father, 75 years of age, is troubled with asthma. He has tried eating only an orange for breakfast, but a nurse has told him that going out in the cold morning without a hot drink will make the asthma worse. Do you recommend dieting?"

ANSWER: Any typical asthmatic case which is not too complicated with other disorders can be cured through diet treatment alone. Special instructions will be sent upon request.

Strychnine for Heart Trouble.

QUESTION: S. G. asks: Should one take medicine containing strychnine if the heart is fast, painful and jumpy, or is it only for slow hearts?"

ANSWER: Strychnine is usually given to enervated patients with slow pulses. When the heart is fast, painful and jumpy, it is usually because of overeating or gas pressure against the heart at that particular time. Strychnine is not usually necessary when the correct diet is used. I have a special article on Heart Derangements that I will be very glad to send if you will write to me care of this newspaper and enclose four cents in stamps, and a large, self-addressed envelope.

VICAR IS PELTED WITH EGGS AND SOOT

By NEA Service.

LONDON, Nov. 8.—"Hooligan agitators" will not force the Vicar of Galleywood, Chelmsford, to tender his resignation.

Shortly after a vestry meeting Rev. Francis A. Roughton was attacked by malcontents who hurled eggs and soot at the newly appointed pastor.

"As was to be expected the bishop has condemned the cowardly conduct of the gang who assaulted under cover of darkness, and I do not intend to be driven out by a set of hooligan agitators," is the defy hurled at his enemies by Rev. Roughton.

It has been found that the smoke of a cigaret will aid in keeping wasps at bay.

REV. COURAGE RECEIVES CALL

Former Minister of St. George's Anglican Church Asked To Go To Utica.

PROMINENT MASON.

Though years have passed since he came to Peterborough from Newfoundland and since he departed to Westfield, Pa., and thence to Watertown, N.Y., old friends in Peterborough, and members of the local Masonic Order will read with interest of the present activities of the Rev. W. R. courage, a former rector of St. George's church. His latest call has been to the Church of the Holy Cross, in Utica, which he has not as yet accepted though it is a larger field than his present one, the Church of the Redeemer, in Watertown.

The Rev. Mr. Courage went to his present field in December, 1924 from Westfield, Pa., diocese of Harrisburg.

Prior to his rectorate in that diocese he was at Peterborough, Ont. He has been in the priesthood 17 years and is 44 years of age. He was ordained to the diaconate June 5, 1911, and to the priesthood June 11, 1912, at the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, St. John's, New Foundland. He served parishes in Newfoundland before going to Peterborough. Rev. Mr. Courage's father is a magistrate in Newfoundland.

The rector is prominent in fraternal organizations, being a member of the Masonic Lodge of Peterborough, Ont.

NEW CIRCUIT TO TORONTO

Bell Telephone Company Completes New Long Distance Circuit.

SPENDS $525,000.

The completion of an additional circuit between Peterborough and Toronto has recently been announced by W. C. Beamer, Peterborough District Manager, while in discussion activities along the Bell Telephone Company's long distance lines of the Montreal-Toronto group he gave some interesting information as to Peterborough's connection with them. The sum of $525,000 is to be expended on rebuilding these lines and erecting new circuits.

The lines from Montreal northwest run through Smith's Falls, Peterborough and Oshawa, connecting at Smith's Falls with the Ottawa circuit. In the vicinity of Madoc important changes will be made, including the re-locating of the line in order to avoid exposure to damage or noise from high-voltage power circuits alongside the present location. This has been done in many other towns with satisfactory results.

MAJORGRAPH OF CHAMBERLAIN

One of the empire's foremost statesmen in the person of Sir Austen Chamberlain, British foreign secretary, is visiting in Canada. He is accompanied by Lady Chamberlain, Miss Diane and Master Lawrence. Sir Austen is popularly regarded as a most austere man, but the above majorgraph of Sir Austen by Henry Major, famous cartoonist, takes a little liberty. The inset photograph is of the late Joseph Chamberlain, Sir Austin's illustrious father. Speaking of his father, Sir Austen said in an interview in Canada: "He was father, friend, colleague, to me. We sat in the same cabinet, side by side. I rather think I am the only man living—probably the only man in the history of England—who has sat in the cabinet of Great Britain with both his father and his brother. Some may have had the one, some the other. But I have had both."

YOU CAN QUICKLY LIMBER UP SORE, STIFF, SWOLLEN JOINTS

Even Chronic Rheumatic Swellings in Knee, Elbow, Shoulder or Finger Joints Yield to the Mighty Powerful Influence of JOINT-EASE.

It's here, right in town and Bond's Drug Store, McDermid & Jury, McDermid Drug Company and every live druggist has it.

It's a low price remedy, to be sure, but that doesn't stop it from taking the kinks, lameness or torture out of your troubled joints.

Joint-Ease is the name so called because it is compounded solely for the purpose of relieving all joint ailments.

Just rub it on the tormented, lame joints and in just a few seconds it will penetrate to the bone and blessed comfort comes quickly

It absorbs instantly and is so clean and stainless that you can rub it on often and get thereby results much more quickly, when the joint is inflamed and the agony intense.

Being such a powerful counter irritant, it cannot help bringing speedy and helpful results in congestion, sore throat, chest colds, lumbago and neuralgia much quicker than almost any remedy you can buy.

But you must remember that it is for joint afflictions that it is mostly dispensed and its helpfulness will astonish you after all ordinary liniments and other treatments have failed.

When Tiny Infants Cannot Sleep

When a tiny infant at mother's breast gets into a condition where it fails to sleep most of the day, steps should be taken to give it attention immediately.

The greatest demand of the growing body is for sleep and nothing that makes an infant nervous must be allowed to go unattended. No child is too young for chiropractic adjustments. Nervousness and crying are quickly checked and sleep and relaxation are restored.

Mothers! try my chiropractic method and be convinced. Delays are dangerous.

HOCKEY VETERANS ON KITCHENER SQUAD

DUTCHMEN TO HAVE STRONG DEFENCE LINE

Players Western Ontario and Border City Leagues Signed. MOORE IN NETS.

Actual Stregth of New Entry in Canpro Still Somewhat Uncertain.

KITCHENER, Ont., Nov. 9.—(By the Canadian Press). —With the opening game rapidly approaching, the Flying Dutchmen, as the Kitchener entry in the Canadian Professional hockey league will be termed this winter, remain a somewhat uncertain proposition. This is due partly to holdouts and partially to the fact that four players, whose indentity is yet unknown have still to join the team.

The four players will be turned over to Kitchener by the Toronto millionaires under the terms of an agreement made when F. C. Oke bought the old Toronto Falcon franchise and later sold it to the Flying Dutchmen backers. Mr. Oke is not yet prepared to name the four players.

The Kitchener team will be managed by Hughie Lehman, one of the original Flying Dutchmen when Berlin (now Kitchener) was in the old trolley professional league. He will substitute in goal with Alfie Moore, last year with the Kitchener Millionaires, the regular net guardian. For the defence the management has Gordon McFarlane, husky stalwart of the millionaires, Jack Kentner, who finished the season with the millionaires after playing with Windsor and Stratford, Art Berlet, star of the Twin City intermediate Ontario Hockey Association finalists last year, and Jim Crompton, who was farmed out to the Marquette Copper League last winter by the millionaires.

The forward line material includes Lloyd Gross and Art. Randall of the Toronto Falcons last year, Alfie Skinner, manager of the Kitchener millionaires last year, Werner Schnarr, of this city, who tried out with the Boston Bruins some years ago, Freddy Brown, Montreal Maroon sub last year, and "Spiff" Campbell, Hamilton and Stratford forward last season.

In addition George Hillier, well-known Twin City amateur star who turned pro last year is a holdout so far but is expected to come to terms as he has been practicing regularly with the players under contract. The other holdouts are Tony Savage, Ed. Gorman and "Sil" Acaster, all of last year's millionaires' lineup.

C. O. BAKER IS NEW LEADER

Succeeds W. J. Turk As President of Northern Ontario Hockey League.

MEET TO-MORROW.

NORTH BAY, Nov. 9.—The offices of president, vice-president and secretary-treasurer of the Northern Ontario Hockey Association have been filled by acclamations.

The officers elected are as follows: President, C. O. Baker, North Bay; vice-president, D. E. Sutherland, Haileybury; secretary-treasurer, W. A. Thomson, North Bay. The new president succeeds President W. J. Turk, Iroquois Falls.

On Saturday afternoon the N.O.H.A. will hold its annual meeting here. The executive will be chosen from the following nominations: C. E. Roach, Timmins; J. E. Patterson, Iroquois Falls; D. R. Mitchell, Sudbury; T. J. Faught, Chapleau, and J. H. McDonald, Sault Ste. Marie.

Want Additional Subs.

It has been learned that the Timmins Club will present a resolution advocating a four-substitute rule.

A resolution to be presented by the North Bay Club would change the age limit rule for N.O.H.A. juvenile series to read as follows:

"To include only a player who has not attained his 16th birthday on the first of January in the season in which he intends to compete."

Grand National Race Course Is Reprieved

LIVERPOOL, Eng., Nov. 9.—(INS).—The Grand National race course at Aintree, on the outskirts of Liverpool, one of the most famous race tracks in the world, has been reprieved.

For six years now it has been threatened by the housing propositions of the local rural council, which desired to construct houses on the site of the famous track.

The ground landlord is the Earl of Sefton and he resisted the scheme from the outset. Arrangements have been made whereby Lord Sefton foregoes any compensation providing that the race course is preserved for racing for fifty years at least.

Thousands of Americans have visited Aintree during the past ten years to witness English and foreign thoroughbreds compete for the world's classic steeplechase prize. The performance of Billy Barton, the American horse, in last year's race, when he finished second after a gruelling struggle, is still fresh in the public mind.

HAMILTON SQUAD STILL UNKNOWN

Expected That Club Will Be Built Up To Full Strength Over Week-end.

HAMILTON, Ont., Nov. 9.—(By the Canadian Press).—Although the Hamilton team of the Canadian professional hockey league is scheduled to open its season at London on Monday night next, the make-up of the squad is still an unknown quality. Harold "Hap" Watson, coach-comedian of the Osler baseball club, Toronto, is the new owner, and only to-day he announced that Friday he would have enough players in here to man two teams.

Mr. Watson will have Fred Hamilton, also of Toronto, and a number of local men on the Board of directors, but none will have any financial interests.

The only players to report here for practice so far have been Freddie Faught, goal-tender last season with the Toronto Falcons; George Duncan, who is to make his professional debut this season, and Eddie Baker, another amateur who played in the Hamilton city league during the 1927-28 hockey campaign. Mr. Watson on his return to Hamilton today stated that the New York Rangers, Montreal Canadiens and one other club in the National Hockey League had offered him material and they will be here not later than Friday.

Bernie Morris, for many years a star in the coast league, and a member of the Detroit Cougars for the past two seasons, has been appointed manager. Morris left his home in the West on Sunday night. He will manage and play centre ice for the Hamilton team.

World-Wide Ban Placed on "Big Bill" Tilden

TENNIS STAR IS BARRED IN 34 NATIONS

Man Without Country As Far As Amateur Tennis is Concerned.

CHANCE IN RUSSIA.

Would Be Still Under Control of U.S.L.T.A. If He Turned Pro.

TORONTO, Nov. 9.—Big Bill Tilden now finds himself not only an exile from the courts of his own land, but literally a man without a country so far as his right to play amateur tennis is concerned, says Associated Press.

By order of the International Lawn Tennis Federation, the ban applied to the famous American star by the United States Lawn Tennis Association in August has been extended to its thirty-four other member Nations and thus embraces the entire tennis playing world.

This latest move in the Tilden case is vealed by the U.S.L.T.A. in the current issue of its "Official Bulletin," which says the international body has sent to all of the associations affiliated with it a copy of the resolution disqualifying Tilden together with an order that, "conforming with our rulings," you will kindly extend this action also to your association."

Chance in Russia.

A glance at the world-wide membership roster of the International Federation quickly shows that the only territory still available to Tilden for tournament competition comprises such countries as Russia and Abyssinia.

The nations which have received the "ex-communication order" and are required by the Federation's rules to comply with its are: Argentina, Australia, Austria, Belgium, Canada, Chile, Cuba, Czechi-Slovakia, Denmark, Egypt, Equador, France, Germany, Great Britain, Greece, Holland, Hungary, India, Ireland, Italy, Japan, Jugo-Slavia, Mexico, Monaco, New Zealand, Paraguay, Poland, Portugal, Roumania, South Africa, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, and Venezuela. These together with the United States comprise the international body.

Thus, Tilden, six times American champion, is without a place wherein to swing his racket. The only chance for relief in sight is a possibility that the U. S. L. T. A. will decide at its February meeting to give the storm petrel of the game another chance. Removal of the ban in this country would mean its removal elsewhere.

Case Not Re-opened.

While it most effectually prevents Tilden from making plans to sally abroad for amateur play in Europe next season in defiance of the U. S. L. T. A., it is true that the federation order making his ineligibility world-wide was an unquestioning or automatic ratification of the American governing body's action rather than the result of any consideration of the merits of the case.

Some months ago, for example, when Baron Umberto De Morpurgo was suspended temporarily by the Italian Association its action was supported by the U.S.L.T. A. the English Association once banned some of its players with a similar result.

Even if Tilden should turn professional—something he has long asserted he had no intention of doing—he still would not be outside the jurisdiction of the U.S.L.T.A.

That body has announced itself as being favorably disposed toward professional tennis competition and apparently is no longer antagonistic even to matches between amateurs and pros, but it proposes nevertheless to keep the new game as strictly under control as the old.

An "official notice" sent out to U. S. L. T. A. member clubs impressed them with the necessity of obtaining the association's sanction for matches or tournaments in which professionals, or amateurs and pros together, are to compete.

The new co-operation between the amateur and professional governing bodies also is shown by the added information that such sanction will be forthcoming only after the U. S. Professional Tennis Association has given its o.k.

VIEWS ON SPORT

To-morrow is the big day in rugby. Important games will be played in nearly every union.

The P.C.I. teams will go to Port Hope one hundred percent strong. They are all set for the big games and are confident of victory. The coaches had them out for a full work out yesterday afternoon and to-day they had a light signal practice.

* * * * * * *

The team that wins the Oshawa H.S. vs. P.C. tilt will play Albert College in the next round. Albert College defeated Picton H.S. and is waiting to play the winner of to-morrow's game. There will be two games, a home and home series, points to count, the first game on Wednesday and the second on Saturday.

* * * * * * *

The Varsity team will be carrying all the fervent hopes of Toronto and Queen's for a victory, but we fear not the expectations of winning. If Varsity wins Queen's get another chance for the championship and Kingston will await the result with the same inerest as Toronto.

* * * * * * *

The Regina Rough Riders, champions of Western Canada, will come East to play the Eastern champs. Reports that come out of the West paint this outfit as a real rugby team and the opinion is expressed that they will uphold the honour of the West by their classy playing. Western rugby has always been below the Eastern brand and it is not likely that this team will give the Hamilton Tigers or Balmy Beach anything but a good workout.

Knotty Lee is trying to form another Michigan-Ontario pro ball league with Western Ontario cities represented. It is improbable his plans will meet with success there, and it is one sure bet they wouldn't here in Eastern Ontario.

MARMORA HAS HOCKEY TEAM

Will Seek Re-instatement in the Trent Valley League.

OFFICERS ELECTED.

MARMORA, Nov. 9 (Examiner Correspondence).—An enthusiastic gathering of hockey fans, held in the Royal Hotel on Wednesday evening, under presidency of F. R. Wells, accomplished the reorganization of the Marmora club, which will seek re-instatement into the Trent Valley League. The chairman, having asked W. J. Cottrell to act as secretary, pro tem, called for the election of officers which resulted as follows: Hon. president, Dr. H. Crawford; president, Alphonse Shannon; vice president, John Finnegan, Sr.; manager and coach, Fred R. Wells; secretary-treasurer, Thomas W. Rhind; executive: R. Murray, M. Auger, G. Scott, C. Shannon, and captain of team when appointed.

Messrs. F. Johnston, J. Finnegan and R. Murray were appointed to look after the subscription list.

The executive meeting afterwards appointed John Hart as trainer.

The next meeting is to be on Nov. 16. The president and manager were appointed delegates to the Trent Valley League meeting. The extension of the rink and erection of new dressing rooms received favorable discussion. Mr. Finnegan, who will be ring manager, is later arranging for a bee to assist in the necessary improvements. The team will have the same colors—green and white — but jerseys will be of a somewhat different style.

FAMOUS CANADIAN RUGBY GAMES, PLAYS AND PLAYERS

By NICK BAWLF— Former star football, lacrosse and hockey player, now coach at Cornell

Old-timers love to recall the good old football days of long ago. I am going to take you back forty autumns to 1889, and take a peep at the two great teams of that year, Ottawa college and Queen's.

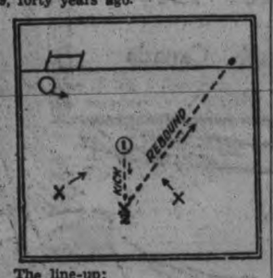
Ottawa College had won 24 consecutive matches and held the Ontario Rugby Cup, emblematic of the Dominion championship. Queen's had a great team led by Jimmie Smellie, famous as a manhandling quarterback during that decade. The Kingstonians challenged and met the champions in Ottawa. They lost 11-9.

A funny play happened in that game. Guillet, College's great punter, tried a drop kick. The ball struck a goal post and rebounded back into the powerful arms of that huge Glengarian, "Big" McDonald. He lunged for the Queen's goal line and just managed to shove the ball across for a touchdown that tied the score 9-9. Guillet converted and won the game by two points.

Queen's challenged again. The union accepted the challenge and ordered the game to be played at Brockville. After a terrific struggle Ottawa college was again returned the victor, 11 points to 9.

Queen's led at half time 9-0. The tri-color slowed up during the second half. College started a great dribble, and a muff by a Queen's halfback gave the garnet and gray a touchdown—6 points. A rouge netted another. The Ottawans were now playing like men possessed.

Another great dribble was started from a throw in towards Queen's goal. Pirie—No. 1 in the diagram—an old soccer player, attempted to clear by a flying kick. The ball struck "Big" McDonald—No. 3 in the diagram—on his chest and flew back over the Queen's man's head and over the goal line where Big Mac fell on it for a touchdown, four points, making the score 11-9. Never was an Ottawa team before or since given such a welcome home as M. F. Fallon's 1889 champions received Saturday evening, November 9, forty years ago.



The line-up:

Ottawa College—Fullback, Paradis; halfbacks, Cormier, J. Murphy; quarterbacks, Gaudet, Guillet, wings, McCauley, Murphy, McDougall, Hillman; forwards, McDonald, Chatelain, O'Brien, Gurran, Fitzpatrick, Masson.

Queen's—Fullback, Farrell; halfbacks, Pirie, Parkin; quarterbacks, Smellie, Smith; wings, White (Candler, Phelan, Rankin; forwards, Marquis, Cameron, Grant, Ross, Morgan, Echlin.

Officials: Capt. M. F. Fallon and Capt. J. Pardee.

BIG PROGRAM IN QUEEN CITY

Two Games and Varsity-McGill Score For Rugby Fans.

LOYOLA PLAY FIRST GAME.

Last night Varsity and Argos wound up their training for Saturday games—Varsity with McGill at Montreal and Argos with Montreal at Toronto. Last night's workouts were only light affairs so that all the players now efficient will be left uncrippled for the Saturday fixtures.

Granted fine weather it is expected that six or eight thousand people will go up to the Varsity Stadium to see the Argo-Montreal tilt and to keep track of the college score at Montreal. The Argo-Montreal game should be a worth while attraction all by itself, but with the Loyola-St. Michaels intermediate play-off game fitted in ahead of it as part of a double-header and the McGill-Varsity scores posted right up to date, it is bargain day for the fans and no mistake. The Argos and Montreals play the most open football in the Big Four and this Loyola team must be a real aggregation when it can take a smart team like St. Michaels by twelve points as they did in the first game of the play-off series down in Montreal Wednesday. This Loyola team is coached by Frank Shaughnessy, late leader of the McGill teams.

Bowling Alley Gossip

C.G.E. SHOP LEAGUE.

Tool Room No. 1 Bowlers stepped on the Porcelain Crew rather heavily in Thursday's league fixture, walking away with every game, and were it not for the sterling work of Reg. Dyer, the captain of the losers, the battle would have been a very one-sided affair. Dyer piled up 267 and 639 for both high scorers. Bill Bolam and G. Williams were the gunners for the Diemakers, the former having a high three score of 567, while Williams made 568.

Tool Room No. 3 fared worse than their fellow mechanics at the hands of the Structural Steel Workers, who applied the clamps in no uncertain manner, taking every game. With the exception of Barnard, no one Toolmaker reached the 300 mark, while every one of their opponent had at least two scores over 200. Reg. Green was exceptionally good, accounting for both high single and three with 246 and 631.

Tool Room No. 2 turned in the nicest performance of the night, whitewashing the Industrial Control No. 2 by the score of 3 to 0, and although handicapped by a dummy in two games, the winners had a comfortable margin of 500 pins in the total pinnage. Freeburn uncorked the nicest piece of bowling for the night with a score of 671, which was high among the eight teams, and made 243, 204, and 224 singles. Holmes displayed some nice bowling also, collecting 240 in the third game, while the losers, who seem to have bit a bad slump, failed to make 190 with one exception, Clegg, who had 217 single.

Tool Room No. 4 rounded out a perfect evening by rustling a winning streak and taking every game from Industrial Control No. 1. Norman Gordon picked them off with a vengeance and was responsible for a high single amounting to 273, which was also high single for the night.

C.G.E. ENGINEERS' LEAGUE.

Price Setting No. 1 again managed to take the lion's share of the score in their encounter with A. C. Section this week, and as a result are still in the lead with a total of 42 points, and unless they suffer a total defeat in their next battle their position is quite secure as the next in line is D. C. team, who have 36, while the Industrial Control quintette of sharpshooters are right at their heels with 34 points.

Two of the best bowlers in this league joined the Quince Club as a result of their erratic demonstration on Wednesday, Miss G. McCarthy having 95 in one game and J. Benson 86.

The Mechanical Engineering team were hard pressed by the Laboratory gang, but were able to garner six out of the eight points, taking two games and the total pinnage. Frank Doris made high single and high three 236 and 596, but was closely followed by Rutherford with 595. Beason was a little off his usual form and had only one game over 200, while Girven, captain of the Laboratory team, was going good with 214, 211, and a trio amounting to 591.

* * *

The Induction Motor aggregation are beginning to pep it up a little, making a six-point gain on Wednesday against Price Setting No. 2. Hooper was the outstanding performer, taking both the high single 231 and high three 538.

CANPRO SEASON STARTS SUNDAY

Windsor and Detroit Net Tenders To Stage Goalies' Duel.

LINE-UPS UNKNOWN.

WINDSOR, November 9. — A goal-tending duel between two of the smallest and smartest custodians in minor league hockey is in prospect for Sunday night when the Windsor Bulldogs amble out on Olympia ice and attempt to skate the Detroit Olympics "bow-legged."

Arena railbirds, after watching Abby Cox in action for a week have come to the conclusion that the duel will be an attraction in itself. Herbie Stuard, stocky guardian of the Detroit cage, is generally considered as a goalie of major league calibre, but Abby, not so husky and perhaps an inch shorter, still measures up to the former Edmonton wizard.

In a sixty-minute practice game yesterday when Manager Mitchell had his athletes going at full speed all the time, the puck was lodged behind Cox exactly once. That time Rolly Huard beat him after working right in on top of the net.

Cox Well Protected.

Cox was getting good protection, of course, but his defenders were facing the best attack that the lines led by Roach and Huard could muster.

Rene Fournier and Stan Brown are the probable starters on the defence, since it is almost certain that the Maroons will not send Hicks or McBride, until next week. Both men are going better than ever, blocking well and rushing in their old-time form. Andy Bellemer and Gerald Green are giving them a race, too, for the privileges of protecting Cox.

Until the referee's whistle for the face-off, Mitchell will not announce his starting forward line. He has no choice between Roach and Huard at centre; Gregg and Carson at right wing; Emms and McGuire on the left board. Johnny Sorrell is also a contender for a job on the attack, and will figure in the game some time and

ROVERS MAY REGAIN LEAD

Derby County, Present Leaders in League, Play Leicester City.

HARD GAME FOR SECONDS.

LONDON, Eng., Nov. 9.—Blackburn Rovers, cup holders, dispossessed of the leadership in the averages of the First Division of the English Soccer League last week, will have a chance to get back again next Saturday. They are at home to Bury, the bottom team in the table, while Derby County, on top just now, must meet Leicester City, who are contenders for leadership. Leeds United, also near the top, have a harder task than the cup holders, because they must travel to Bolton. Sheffield United, whose win over Blackburn last Saturday caused their demotion, will have a chance to show whether their improved form means anything. They must meet Arsenal in London.

Will Have Trouble.

Notts County and Hull City, leaders in the Second Division section, both will be tourists on Saturday and both have tough opponents. Notts County must go to Clapton Orient, where a warm welcome awaits them, though they should win. Hull City play Bradford and this should be the feature game of the Division. Chelsea are at home to Preston North End and a capacity house will doubtless watch them perform.

Hearts versus Motherwell is the headliner in the Scottish First Division, though hardly less attractive will be the meeting of Aberdeen and Celtic. Rangers, league leaders, have a soft spot, for they meet Falkirk, who do not seem to be going anywhere particular just now.

SENATORS HAVE REGULAR LINE-UP FOR TIGER TILT

OTTAWA, Nov. 9.—Ottawa Senators preparing for their final "Big Four" rugby game of the season at Hamilton Saturday, went through a fast hour of signal work at Lansdowne Park yesterday as a final training session. All the players were on hand and with every man in good condition, they should be able to stand up to the relentless pounding of the Tiger Tanks. Ottawas may not win, but they will fight hard and they should keep the Bengals hustling all the way.

Ottawa will start practically the same team that held Toronto Argonauts to a one-point stalemate here last week-end. Ruddy Clarke, who showed well as a plunger against Argos, may start out at one of the inside wing berths, but this will likely be the only change from last Saturday. Joe Tubman seems sure to start at the kicking station after playing most of the game against the Oarsmen. The Senators entrain today for Hamilton.

HOCKEY'S TOWER OF BABEL

Yes sir, something must be done about this or the famous old Stanley Cup in about 1978 will put the modern skyscraper to shame.

Since the cup changed hands last fall and went into the possession of the New York Rangers in the dramatic world's hockey series, another base has been added to the once squatty trophy presented by Lord Stanley, in 1893, when he was governor-general of Canada.

This famous and historic piece of silverware has literally travelled from coast to coast in both the United States and Canada. It has crossed the line three times into the States, at present being held by the Rangers on the Atlantic seaboard. In 1916 it was held by the Portland, Oregon, Club and in 1920 it was in possession of the Seattle Club. In Canada it has journeyed as far east as Quebec City, whose Bulldogs held it in 1912-13, and it has travelled as far west as Vancouver and Victoria.

In all these years of travel the winners of the trophy have scratched their names on it, so that now it bears the names of the world's greatest puck chasers of all time.

The result is the old silver bases have become so covered with inscriptions that it has been necessary to add another base.

So the cup has now three added bases built in pyramid style. The battered, scratched and dented trophy is one of the most highly prized and colorful cups in the sporting world of to-day.

DOLORES COSTELLO NOW EARNS LIGHT COMEDY CROWN.

"The College Widow" Proves the Versatility of Fair Star.

Regent Theatre Presents Dolores Costello in "The College Widow," An Adaptation of the Play by George Ade — Scenario by Paul Schofield and Peter Milne — Directed by Archie L. Mayo.

The name, "Dolores Costello" suggests both mirth and melancholy. Heretofore the latter has dominated, but for the moment at least, clouds have passed utterly and the sun shines in undimmed splendor.

Dolores Costello is starred as Jane Witherspoon, college widow, wooer and winner of men, most pensive, most demure, most determined of all the flirts of the silver screen. She thinks, too, that her armor is invulnerable — not having met Billy Bolton alias Jones. Jane's father is about to lose his job as president of the college, all because he is unable to interest athletes in it. A promised gift to the institution is also at stake. Jane gets an idea. With Jane, to get an idea, means both to keep it, and to use it. She sets about recruiting a football team and succeeds. Each man on the team believes himself to be her future husband.

The Big Game is almost won. The gift almost secured. Papa's job almost saved. Then appears fate, in the form of a jealous co-ed, who tells Billy Jones how he and all the rest have been the dupes of Jane Witherspoon. Billy rebels. So do the others. Jane explains. They surrender. All but Billy. Then Jane deftly winds Billy around her little finger, and all things hoped for are not only almost, but altogether won.

Liquor Stocks Lead In Heavy Trading

TORONTO, November 9 (Canadian Press). — Liquor stocks, which were heavily traded in, featured the Toronto Stock Exchange to-day. Hiram Walker's, with sales totalling 15,075, advanced as hight as 87½, and at noon showed a net gain of 1¼ points over yesterday's close. Carling's, another active stock, also advanced 1¼ to 35¾ after selling as high as 36. Canadian Industrial Alcohol made one point gain to 42. The oil stocks continued their downward trend. Imperial Oil opened at 97¼, but weakened to 94 at noon for a loss of 3½. International Petroleum at 50½ showed a decrease of 1¼ and British-American Oil, another feature of the market, dropped to 51½, down ¾. McColl-Frontenac registered one point loss at 33. Massey-Harris and Loblaw made advances of 1¼ and one points respectively. International Nickel dropped to 188½ for fractional loss. Brazilian and Building Products were fractionally firmer.

Adverse Weather Reports Increases Grain Values

CHICAGO, Nov. 9 (Canadian Press).—Adverse weather both over the wheat harvest region in Argentina and the United States corn belt tended to lift all grain prices early to-day. Besides, corn traders were expecting the government crop report this afternoon which would show the reduction of the yield compared with the latest unofficial figures. Opening ⅛ to ⅝ up, wheat later scored slight addition gains. Corn started at ⅛ to ⅝ advance and afterward hardened a little more.

Wheat, December 114¼, March 119⅝. Corn, December 83¼; March 86¼. Oats, Dec. 44⅛, March 44⅝.

Bullish Movement Is Resumed At New York

NEW YORK, Nov. 9.—(Canadian Press).—The Bull movement in stock prices which was interrupted by heavy selling late yesterday was resumed in to-day's market under the leadership of railroad shares. Nearly a score of which advanced 3 to 12½ points. Some irregularity developed in the industrial list as result of the usualy week-end profit-taking, but the general list pointed upward with Merchandising, Independent Steel, food and high priced specialties in forefront of the advance.

Trading facilities of exchange were again inadequate to handle large volume of trading, the ticker falling 45 minutes behind the market by early afternoon. Total sales crossed the 2,500,000 share mark before end of the third hour. Call money renewed at 6½% as against 6% yesterday and advanced 7 as banks called upwards of $15,000,000 in loans to meet the week-end currency requirements. Time money and commercial paper rates held steady.

Railroad shares, which with few exceptions, have taken little part in the upswing of last few weeks were brought forward by operators for advance when some of popular industries showed signs of lagging. Although gain in Brokers' loans was less than generally expected. The sharp expansion in recent weeks nevertheless induced considerable selling by the cautious investors and traders. Volume of loans now outstanding exceeds total money in circulation in United States.

Mining Briefs

A Special Service to The Examiner

The No. 709 ore shoot at the 733-foot level of the Vipond is reported to show a length of 250 feet at present, with grade said to average $9.00 over a width of 9 feet. The face is still said to be in ore. This ore is said to have been located on the 630-foot level also and here it is said to average $20.00 per ton. Men down from the north state that our section of this latter stuff averaged $100 for a considerable length.

A Toronto mining house has secured some "jewellery shops" samples from a property in Deloro Township, South Porcupine. The shaft is down 160 feet and picked samples run into "thousands per ton. More news will be available later when a public offering of shares is anticipated.

An extensive program of surface exploration, including trenching, is planned by the Hamilton Porcupine Gold Mines Ltd., preparatory to diamond drilling on the vein already exposed. H. H. O. Loull, of Guelph, president of the company, together with a party of the shareholders, recently visited the property. About 1,500 feet of trenching has been completed over several claims. Work is now being concentrated on a shear zone which indicates basalt and quarts stringers and mineralization for pyrite.

The decision of the Pennsylvania Railroad to electrify their system will necessitate the spending of $100,000,000, according to a recent statement made by the president of the electrification of railroads throughout the United States and Canada. Any such electrification would require a tremendous amount of copper. The present available amount of copper is less than one week's ordinary consumption.

E. W. Beatty, K.C., president of the Canadian Pacific railway reiterates his recent denials of the reports that the company, through the agency of the Consolidated Mining and Smelting, was working on a comprehensive plan to eventually acquire control of the smelting industry of the Dominion, and that the railway and it's associates might turn up as the controlling interest in the International-Mond nickel merger. "Neither the C.P.R, nor the Consolidated Mining and Smelting," he said "have any such association with the nickel situation, nor am I aware of either of these companies having formed any of the other alliances alluded to. What Smelters is doing, is going into whatever field in the Dominion which offers reasonable prospects for successful operation and development. They are big enough, strong enough and able to succeed if anyone can, and I hope that they will continue with their present policy in this respect."

It is thought that three or four months will be required to complete the diamond drilling contract on the Kirkland Hunton. Further financing will then be necessary if the results from the drilling warrant this. It is reported that nearly half a million dollars has been spent on the property to date.

Machinery for deep work has been purchased by the Duparquet Mining Company for it's property in Quebec. It is proposed to get to 500 feet as quickly as possible, establishing levels at 125-foot intervals. A. syndicate has undertaken to finance operations but terms have not been announced as yet.

New McDougall-Segur.

Our Calgary office reports that New McDougall-Segur No. 2 struck a flow of gas estimated to average 1,000,000 cubic feet. This company is a subsidiary of McDougall-Segur Exploration Company, Limited, having three wells on thier property.

No. 1 well produced around 50 barrels daily from the Dakotas for some months. From February 1 to September 30, 1927, sales of crule oil from No. 1 and No. 2 wells amounted to $19,606. Both wells are now being carried to the lime. No. 3 well was taken down part of the way, but drilling was halted pending the completion of the other two. The company is capitalized at $500,000 in shares of $1 par. Of these, 457,075 shares are outstanding, of which 256,000 shares are owned by McDougall-Segur Exploration Co. Both stocks were recently listed on the Standard Stock and Mining Exchange, but have not been active.

Dome.

All indications point to a great income for Dome during 1928 of approximately $3,700,000 with costs of less than $2,000,000, leaving $1,700,000 as operating profits before depreciation equal to $1.78 per share. After payments of $100 per share as dividends and the usual appropriations for depreciation, a surplus of over $300,000 will be available for current account bringing this amount to approximately $5,035,000, or $5.28 per share.

Mine conditions will show considerable improvement due to the extremely large developments being had in the igneous formation. Return to development work in the extension ground is confidently expected to yield favorable results. In any event the mine will start the new year with further assured life of at least two years, during which period the profits per year may be expected to be approximately equal those of the present year. It is apparent that Dome is in a position to reward shareholders with a bonus in addition to the next regular dividend and still maintain a cash surplus of $5,000,000 for the development of any property considered worth exploitation.

Copper.

The decision of the Pennsylvania Railroad to electrify their system will necessitate spending of $100,000,000, according to a recent statement made by the president of the company. A wide vista of possibilities is opened up by the electrification of railroads throughout the United States and Canada. Any such electrification would require a tremendous amount of copper. The present amount of copper available is less than one week's ordinary consumption.

In Wednesday's big bull market coppers were very prominent in Wall Street, several of the more prominent copper issues showing substantial gains. A price of anywhere from 18 to 20 cents is being talked of for copper. The Canadian copper stocks will bear watching at the present time, as they undoubtedly will appreciate in sympathy with the movement which has been under way for some time in copper stocks in the States.

The annual general meeting of the shareholders of Teck Hughes Gold Mines, Limited, will be held in the Hotel Statler, Buffalo, on the 19th of November, 1928, for the purpose of receiving and adopting the report of the directors and financial statement, and the election of directors for the ensuing year.

UNITED CHURCH

Church has given expression to the faith of its people, not exhausted nor restricted. The people may differ in many ways, but they are alike in their loyalty to God, and in a broader sense the Christian churches would not be of use at all if all thought exactly the same. By differing, each makes a contribution to the other.

Greater Effort.

Dr. Gandier went on to make a strong plea for greater congregational effort in the future, for even greater missionary zeal and for a more constant adherence to the principles of the United Church and of God.

The United Church week will be continued with service in George Street Church to-night, when the Rev. T. W. Gunn, M.A., D.D., will be the special speaker. During last night's meeting, it was brought to the attention of the Executive that another Church was praying for its success, a thought most satisfying and encouraging to those responsible for United Church week in Peterborough.

THREE PERISH

vance of the lava, however, made it necessary that the request be refused, as time had become too precious.

A monument to the World War dead which was to have been unveiled this coming Sunday was hastily dedicated just before the lava reached it, Fascists performing their rite of calling the names on the roll of dead while the crowd answered "Present" after each.

Etna's eruption, which began last Friday, reached an acute stage yesterday, Professor Ponte, director of the volcano institute estimated that the quantity of lava thus far thrown out equalled in one day that of the first two days of other eruptions. The eruptions of 1910, 1911 and 1923 each lasted about eight days, which fact led to fears that the present flow would continue at least several days longer.

The three branches of lava travelled more than six miles in the past 72 hours, or about five times faster than the flow of 1923. If the lava forms on a wider front, the Town of Giarre would be threatened as well as the Village of Carrabba.

FISHING CRAFT IS LOST AT SEA

Believed Swallowed Up By Raging Seas Off Washington Coast.

NO TRACE FOUND.

HOQUIAM, Wash., Nov. 9.—(Canadian Press.)— An unidentified ship, presumably a fishing craft, was believed by coast guardsmen to have been swallowed up to-day by raging seas in Grass Harbor Bar, near here.
The ship, obviously in distress, was sighted shortly after midnight, battling fifty to sixty mile gale and enormous seas just outside the harbor. Coast guard boat put out to her aid, but returned two hours later and reported that no trace of the vessel could be found.

Around the City

At 11.31 a.m. yesterday the Fire Department answered a call to 220 Mark Street, where a small chimney had taken fire. It was extinguished by the use of chemicals before any real damage had been done.

C.G.E. RUNNERS HOLD WORKOUT

Bates, Palmer, Freeman and Tranter To Make Up Senior Relay Squad.

FAST STEPPERS

The C.G.E. runners were given a chance to show their stuff last night in a fast workout under the direction of Herb. Tranter, and as a result Coach Mitchell has decided to use the following in the senior relay race: Dick Bates, Grant Palmer, Sam Freeman, and Herb. Tranter. This quartette of road racers are of a calibre that will undoubtedly tax the fast steppers on the other teams to their utmost, and in all probability will carry the blue and white monogram to victory.

IN MEMORIAM.
In memory of our boy, Jack R. Hollingsworth, who died Nov. 9th, 1927:
One year has passed, our hearts still sore,
As time flies by we miss him more.
His loving smile, his welcome face,
No one can fill his vacant place.
—Sadly Missed By His Father, Mother, Sisters and Brothers

IN MEMORIAM.
In loving memory of my dear sister, who passed away so suddenly on Nov. 9th, 1918:
O, sleep on, dear Ada, in peaceful sleep,
Your memory I will always keep.
Gone and forgotten by this world you may be,
But the earth that enshrouds is sacred to me.
Friends may think that we've forgotten you
When at times they see us smile,
But they little know the sorrow
That those smiles hide all the while.

Speaker Says Sir Arthur Currie Was One of Ablest Corps Commanders.

LONDON, Nov. 10 (Special Cable by Henry Somerville; Copyright).—Over four hundred veterans of the Canadian Expeditionary Force reunited at dinner at Hotel Cecil tonight. The most exciting moment of a thrilling evening was about 10.30. Field Marshal Lord Plumer had just finished a speech when the announcement was made, "Gentlemen, your Commander, Lord Byng of Vimy."

Byng had come from the Lord Mayor's banquet and was in levee dress with decorations and sword. The whole company rose and cheered and then broke into song, "The Gang's All Here."

Plumer had paid a glowing tribute to the Canadian Force. He was their army commander when they withstood the first German gas attack of Ypres. Conditions were then so terrible that in manoeuvres, the umpire would have ruled them out as impossible and no troops would have been asked to hold such positions as the Canadians were in; "But," said Plumer, "the Canadians defended the indefensible and accomplished the impossible."

Their conduct, said Plumer, filled him with confidence that with such troops defeat was unthinkable and victory was certain.

Rose Step by Step

Plumer said of Sir Arthur Currie that he rose step by step to be one of the ablest and most successful corps commanders on the western front.

Sir Arthur, in reply, humorously referred to hot times given him by Plumer. Sir Arthur said when he himself met men in Canada who have been his junior officers, they recalled uncomfortable times he had given them. "They seemed to think," said Currie, "that the corps commander never had a hot time himself; but he remembered his first meeting with Plumer, which was at Ypres."

Early in 1915, Plumer was inspecting the Canadians. "All I will say about him," said Currie, "is that to-night he looks younger, more pleasant and more benign than he did then. It was weeks later that Canadians received their baptism of fire and we had such a time in General Plumer's corps that we left it as soon as we could. But it was not long before we were back."

Col. Hon. J. L. Ralston Addresses Members of Canadian Club in New York.

APPLICANTS INCREASING.

NEW YORK, Nov. 10.— Canada's effort in the Great War and the duty of Canadians to keep alive the memories of the country's sacrifice was the theme of an address delivered to the Canadian Club of New York by Col. Hon. J. L. Ralston, Minister of National Defence, to-day.

The consequences of the war were increasing annually as manifested by the swelling of the amount paid in pensions. Last year Canada paid over $36,000,000 and the Pensions Board was receiving new applicants at the rate of five hundred a month.

Col. Ralston reviewed the various commanders of the Canadian Corps, paying generous tribute to each. He recalled the achievements of the men at St. Julien, Festubert, Givenchy, Vimy and other battles.

NEW ROUTES OUTLINED FOR COLLECTORS

Garbage Collection Discussed at Meeting of Property Committee.

COLLECT AFTER HOLIDAY.

New Women's Rest Room Is Considered By Aldermen Present.

Amending the routes of city garbage collection preparatory to calling for tenders for the year 1929, was the main function of the Property Committee of the City Council, when it met at the City Hall last evening, and in so doing it made provision for service to several new sections. A new provision to be included in the 1929 contract as a result was that stipulating that routes missed because of holidays must be covered on the following days, thus avoiding trouble in warm weather.

Alderman Malcolm McIntyre presided at the meeting, and as a means of finishing the matter of garbage collection, Mayor Denne moved, seconded by Alderman Greene that the contract for garbage collection be amended to include the refuse in the waste baskets from Victoria Park, Confederation Square, Inverlee Park, and the Gore, corner of Charlotte and Park streets; the tourist camp from June 1 to September 15; both sides of Reid street, from Smith street to Victoria avenue; both sides of Vivtoria avenue from Reid to Downie street; Douro street from Rogers street to Armour Road; Armour Road from Douro street to Clifton street; the north side of Albert street from 530 Albert to Alfred street; and that all routes missed because of holidays must be covered the following day.

Alderman Stocker and Huffman moved that tenders be advertised for in the usual way on November 10, 15 and 17.

A resolution was received from the Peterborough Chamber of Commerce urging the selection and fitting up of a municipal air field.

The matter was referred to Mayor Denne and Chairman McIntyre.

Representatives Of Twenty-six Nations Present At Crowning Of 124th Emperor Of Japanese Nation

KYOTO, Japan, Nov. 10 (Canadian Press).—A new sovereign to-day formally took his seat on the age old throne of Japan. Hirohito, 124th Emperor of the unbroken line of sun goddess, who have ruled Japan since before the dawn of history was crowned.

Representatives of twenty-six foreign nations were present, but only one envoy represented an emperor. The envoy of the King of England, who is also Emperor of India.

The ceremony, for which preparations have been made for months, was the most gorgeous as well as the most ancient of modern rituals. The central point is the worship of the sun goddess who ruled the high plain of heaven before earth took its shape and form, and from whom the long line of Japanese emperors are sprung.

The War Cannot Be Forgotten

THE tenth anniversary of the end of the World War will be observed on Sunday, and The Examiner in stressing the historic importance of the occasion by a special Armistice number, urges all citizens to participate as far as possible in the ceremonies arranged for the observance of this significant anniversary.

There are those who say, "Forget the war," as if the tragedy and suffering and heroism and self-sacrifice of those four crowded years could be banished from the minds of the people of Canada as something that never happened.

Forget the war when women still weep at the thoughts of dear ones who never came back?

Forget the war when ten years after the end of the struggle broken-down veterans are in some cases still struggling for a recognition of the fact that their condition is due to their war service?

Forget the war when only a decade ago hundreds of thousands of our bravest and best were offering their lives that their country might not feel the heel of a militaristic despot?

No, the war cannot be forgotten, and it should not be forgotten.

It must be remembered, first, because of the revelation it gave of the fact, that the men of Canada in a time of national peril were ready and willing to face death and hardship and privation as gallantly as any people on earth, and that the women of Canada were capable of a fortitude and resignation unequalled anywhere, as they worked at home for the boys "over there" and waited bravely, not knowing the day when a War Office report would bring tragedy into their homes.

And it must be remembered, in the second place, as a horror that must not be known again, as a disaster against the repetition of which the efforts of every nation should be directed.

No, we cannot forget the war; rather should we think back to it on this anniversary in grateful memory of those who made the supreme sacrifice, in admiration of those thousands of Peterborough City and district soldiers who unhesitatingly said, "Take me," when Canada called for volunteers, in a spirit of reverend thanksgiving that our cause was vindicated and our forces victorious, in a feeling of satisfaction that to a remarkable degree we have succeeded in re-establishing in civil life our huge army, and a determined resolve that justice must be done to those men who still feel the shock of war and need a helping hand from the country for which they fought.

This tenth anniversary of the signing of the Armistice should be made an especial occasion for gratitude and thanksgiving, for fitting tributes to the memory of the unreturning brave, deeper consideration for those who were spared to come back, and a greater zeal in making this Canada of ours worthy of the spirit of the men who fought for her when danger threatened.

Let us remember to-morrow the gallant lads who lie "over there" by wearing a poppy in their memory. It should be a solemn obligation to observe the two-minute period of silence urged by His Majesty King George as a simple and impressive tribute to the memory of the Empire's war dead.

The Canadian Legion is giving leadership to the community's observance of Armistice Day on Sunday afternoon, and in these ceremonies citizens should participate loyally.

Let us make the celebration of this anniversary worthy of its great importance and significance. —F. D. C.

POINCARE CONSENTS TO FORM NEW FRENCH GOVERNMENT

Socialists and Radicals Seek To Re-organize Their Old Coalition.

TASK MOST DIFFICULT.

Other Parties Attempt To Block Premier's Efforts To Form Cabinet.

PARIS, November 10 (Associated Press). — Efforts were being made last night to form two different Cabinets to succeed the Poincare Union Government with the Premier himself seeking to set up a new government.

Yielding to the persuasion of President Doumergue, Poincare consented to make an effort to put together another Cabinet while the Socialists and Radicals at the same time were maneuvering to re-organize their old coalition and form a Cobinet of their own.

Poincare, with cutomary diligence, was in conference with all of his colleagues of the outgoing Government excepting the four Radicals who resigned, thus forcing the break in the Poincare Cabinet. A few minutes later he told the President that he would see what he could do.

It is generally concluded from this that the Premier proposes to retain in his new combination all those disposed to remain with the likelihood of including even the Radicals in case they will revise their point of view.

Task Most Difficult.

The Premier's task is considered in political circles most difficult in view of the pressure being brought to bear by the militant Radicals on all their leaders to ostracize him. The Radicals have been soliciting ardently the help of the Socialists. At the beginning of the governmental upset the Socialists were careful to hold themselves aloof, but latest developments indicate that they are yielding to the idea of taking share in a new ministry with the Radicals.

The Socialists met yesterday and adopted a resolution pledging support to the Radicals on a program that fits into their party doctrine, and even held out hope of participation in the government subject to the approval of the executive committee of the party which meets on Sunday.

In moderate circles the maneuver is held to have been intended simply to block Poincare's efforts to form a new Cabinet, as even the combined Radical and Socialist forces in the Chamber of Deputies are insufficient to make a solid government majority.

Suicide Mania Causes Great Alarm in Germany Statistics Show Death Rate Appalling With Young

BERLIN, Nov. 10.—The suicide mania among Germany's youth is assuming alarming proportions.

Latest statistics show that in 1926, Prussia alone produced this record:

Suicides between the ages of 5 and 15: Fifty boys and nine girls.

In Berlin, every seventh suicide is committed by youths between 5 and 20 years of age, and every sixth death within that age range is a suicide.

Physchologists attribute this suicide mania to three causes: Father and son conflicts; awakening love; excessive school requirements.

Conservatives, of course, also blame the times, the revolution, the destruction of veneration for established order and authority, etc. Germany's youth, however, has always been prone to suicide ever since Goethe wrote his "Werther's Leiden" which made "Weltschmehs" popular and suicide fashionable—a state of emotional exaltation which finds expression in the song that "for bonny Annie Laurie I'd lay me down and dee."

It is held remarkable, however, that this age of sport and freedom has only intensified this mania.

TRAFFIC CUT ON RAILROAD

Mount Etna Eruption is Worst Since 1669 in Regards to Lava Flow.

TREES BURNING

CATANIA, Sicily, Nov. 10.—(Canadian Press.)—The railway bridge at Mascali to-day fell a prey to the molten torrent of lava from Mount Etna, which has destroyed the town of Mascali. The lava flowed across the railway and cut off communications between Catania and Messina. Steamship service between the two points was inaugurated.

Developments in the past twenty-four hours showed that this was the most important outbreak of Mount Etna since 1669 in point of lava flow. Watchers spent a sleepless night watching the uncanny effects of the molten mass on what was the richest fruit and grape bearing district in Sicily. The whole countryside was studded with trees burning like torches, while a sweep of torrent was punctuated by the explosion. It was thought that the explosions were caused by the intense heat of the subterranean gases developed by putrification of the vegetable matter in the sub-soil.

CHALLENGE IS UTTERED BY PENSIONS MINISTER IN ARMISTICE ADDRESS

Canada's Debt To Men Who Filled Breach in Dark Days Must Be Met and Paid In Full in These After-the-War Peace Days.

NO NATIONAL FORGETFULNESS OF WAR DEAD WHILE CANADA REMEMBERS WAR SACRIFICES

Impressive Observance of Tenth Armistice Anniversary Planned as National Celebration on Sunday—Ottawa To Be Centre of Dominion Wide Ceremony.

OTTAWA, Ont., November 10 (Canadian Press). — "There is still much to be done, but with the continued and increased co-operation of those who have maintained their interest in the welfare of the returned soldier, I feel that the debt which Canada owes the men who stood in the breach when civilization was threatened, will be paid in full." This was the challenge uttered by Hon. J. H. King, Minister of Pensions and National Health, in his Armistice Day message to the Canadian people.

"Ten years ago to-day," Mr. King added, "we hoped that a new era had been ushered in. The long desolating years of warfare were finished, the victory, for which so many had paid the supreme sacrifice and for which so many others are destined to carry their honorable scars until their call shall come, had been won. 'Never again,' was our heartfelt wish.

"Happily at that time Canada had organized and developed in many directions, treatment and care of its heroes; and the measures then in force for their rehabilitation and re-establishment in civil life have given the lead to all the Allied countries. As we now look back over the intervening period there is much for which to be thankful, for great things have been accomplished. We cannot however, rest on our laurels, as much remains to be done.

"The recent amalgamation of the Department of Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment and Health into one department, the amendments made at the last session of Parliament in pension legislation, and during the past few weeks in the regulations of my department, are all directed towards a betterment of the conditions governing the benefits administered in the interests of our veterans.

"On this day, therefore, we remember with gratitude the past and we anticipate with hope and confidence the future."

COUPLES' LOVE NETS PAIR IN TORTURE PLOT

Use of Pet Names Identifies Youths Accused By Miser of Theft.

STOLE $20,000

Funds Were Hidden By Family in Tool Box of Tractor—Money Runs Low.

LINCOLN, Neb., Nov. 10. — Two Richardson County officers are on their way to Marysville, Cal., to bring back two members of a band that are accused of taking $20,000 from a farmer miser after torturing him. They are Durban Trimble and Gwendola Rogers. For months officers have been on the trail of the young couple, and had broadcast hundreds of posters, mentioning particularly that they were much in love and setting forth their nicknames for each other. It was the use of these endearing terms that finally led to their downfall.

Joseph Kunhart was head of a family of five, every member of whom had been taught never to trust their money to strangers and particularly not to banks. All were hard-working and makers of money, and they made it a practice of changing into gold all the money they had accumulated as soon as it became a sizeable sum. They devised numerous places for hiding the money, but finally settled on the toolbox of the tractor as the safest place. This was kept locked and the secret supposedly known only to members of the family.

Learn of Gold Cache.

Fred Trimble, a drayman, got some inkling of the fact that there was money hidden about the place, and secured the aid of his son in getting it, as the State charges. It also says that the Rogers girl went along and sat in the automobile while the men went inside, terrorized Kunhart and the three women members of the family. The county attorney says that they made them walk planks literally, and by threatening to kill them induced them to tell where the money was hidden.

Kunhart is a sly old fellow, and he kept a sharp lookout for signs by which he could identify his torturers, and it happened that Trimble had a slight deformity that he recognized. Trimble's arrest and conviction followed, and also a sentence of fifteen years. The young couple fled when the old man was arrested, and as Mr. and Mrs. John Thompson were traced into Canada, and then into Mexico, where the trail was lost.

Misguided Men and Women Weaken Nation's Defence Declares United States' Assistant Secretary of War

NEW YORK, Nov. 10.—(Canadian Press).—Expressing fear that the wealth of the United States is bringing about a decay in the militant and patriotic spirit of the people, Col. Charles B. Robbins, Assistant Secretary of War, to-day told the New York City Rotary Club to "turn a deaf ear to the fallacies of internationalism and pacificism."

Speaking before the club in connection with the tenth anniversary of the signing of the Great War armistice to be observed Sunday, Colonel Robbins declared every war in which the United States has participated was brought on through inadequate national defence, and asserted that "there can be no national security without national defence."

"It is," he said, "through the persistent attempts of misguided men and women to substitute internationalism for nationalism, to weaken the defense of the nation by pacifistic preaching, that the nation can be most rapidly destroyed."

REV' W. T. GUNN CLOSES CHURCH WEEK IN CITY

Moderator of United Church Preaches in George Street Church.

BORN IN KEENE.

Speaker Urges Members To Put Forth Greater Efforts of Church Endeavor.

Rev. W. T. Gunn, M.A., B.D., Moderator of the United Church of Canada, in a quiet forceful manner gave to his hearers a broad outlook of the wide work of the United Church throughout the world. He sincerely urged church members to a new consecration of themselves and to even greater efforts of Christian endeavor. Dr. Gunn spoke in George Street Church in the last of the great series of services in the United Church Week held in the city.

Dr. Gunn in beginning his sermon recalled the fact that he was coming back among many old friends. He said: "The older one grows the greater joy at coming back among the friends of one's younger days. I am glad to come to help further the work of the Lord in speaking here to-night, but I am doubly glad to come because I am with some of my ain folk. I am a Peterborough boy, in as far as I was born in the nearby village of Keene." In continuing he said that he would never forget the memories of those boyhood days in Keene. He expressed the joy at coming back among people who knew his mother and his father, who operated one of the boats on the Otonabee river. He mentioned many reminiscences of his school days and his love for his school teacher, Miss Jessie McDougall, who was in the congregation.

Dr. Gunn took his text from Psalm 126, which was read in the scripture lesson by Rev. J. O. Totton, of Bridgenorh. He said that this piece of scripture glows red-hot and is as great in its pictures and conversation as the talking movies. He emphasized the joy of these people at the opportunity to go up to Jerusalem; the little groups dazed by surprise; their great joy as they advanced; their happiness and the contagion of their joy cheered those they met on the way. He compared these scenes as typical of what is going on in the great United Church, in their pleasure of accomplishment and advancement. Dr. Gunn gave a vivd picture of the vast work being carried on in Canada and many lands by the churches. "It is a doubly great mir-

SOUTH CHINA FEARS REVOLT

New Radical Outbreaks With Possible Overthrow of Canton Disturbs Nanking.

DAILY EXECUTIONS

SHANGHAI, Nov. 10—Growing fear of new radical outbreaks in South China, with a possible overthrow of the Canton government, is one of the major disturbing elements facing the Nanking government.

Reds, pinks and communists have increased their activities despite every effort of the Nationalist government to crush them. Their ranks continue to grow in the face of the combined opposition of Nanking and Canton.

Fears Radicalism.

Enemies of the Kuomintang are accusing the nationalists of attempting to exert an authority far more autocratic than ever before tried in China. Student movements or any sort of an agitation have been crushed ruthlesly, as far as possible, by the Nanking clique. Nanking is genuinely afraid of radicalism in any form, after its experience under Russian influence of more than a year ago. Russian influence still remains to a degree in Kwangtung and in Canton, where the nucleus of radical Chinese remained after the Russians were expelled from China the early part of the year.

The issue in Canton and Kwangtung and Kwangsi provinces is involved. Nanking theoretically rules but the actual administrators of Canton and its province of Kwangtung is a Kwangsi clique which has been in Canton for years. Cantonese want to run their own province. The radical element and the Cantonese and the radicals part company. The former then would adhere to Nanking while the radicals would have none of it but set up their own administration, establish a communist regime and turn China red throughout.

Daily Executions.

Nanking is resorting to strong methods to curb the Cantonese radicals. Kwangsi is willing as their real authority is preserved in the process. Nanking would crush its radical members and then remove the Kwanski group as the final step to establishment of their authority in Canton and South China. But its harsh methods are failing to obtain the desired results. Radicals are executed in Canton daily, but still their ranks continue to grow. Students throughout all China, repressed by the Nationalists in their zeal to be an active part of the Kuomintang and use the new found creed as a means for furthering all sorts of aims, are flocking to the radical banners. They allege Nanking has gone autocratic and is, along with "foreign imperialists" and others, proving an enemy to real China.

WILLIAM HASKINS GRANTED NEW TRIAL

New Evidnece Brought To Light Since Conviction For Manslaughter.

TORONTO, Nov. 10 (Canadian Press).—William Haskins, London, convicted and sentenced to five years' imprisonment for manslaughter in connection with the death of William Galloway was yesterday granted a new trial by the First Divisional Court. Galloway was killed by a hit-and-run driver and following Haskins conviction two girls made affidavits implicating another man.

Prisoner appealed on two grounds, that there was not sufficient evidence to convict, and that since the trial new evidence in his favor had been brought to light.

JESSIE ALEXANDER IS COMING TO CLUB

"A Ramble on My Rambles" is Subject of Address to be Delivered in City.

Jessie Alexander's name may be termed a household one, for she is known and loved, not only in her own Province of Ontario but all over Canada. There are few churches or societies desirous of adding to its funds that have not, at some time or other, secured the services of Jessie Alexander to give some of her delightful reading. The executive of the Women's Canadian Club is very pleased in being able to start the season's course of lectures with Mrs. Jessie Alexander Roberts giving the first of the series.

Mrs. Roberts will give the lecture she gave last week to the Toronto Heliconian Club. It is entitled "A Ramble on My Rambles", the telling of her experiences and of what she saw during a long tour of Europe, from which she has just returned. Everyone appreciates the charming manner in which Mrs. Roberts tells a story and her lecture on Wednesday afternoon at 4.15 will be eagerly looked forward to.

SALVATION ARMY HELPING WORLD

Many Notabes Commend Work of Army Throughout World.

H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, when in Japan, said of the Army he had seen much of the work done, and he would take this opportunity of wishing the Salvation Army soldiers in Japan all possible success in their activities.

The late President Harding of the U.S.A. said:

The Salvation Army has rendered such notably helpful service in the Great War that I can well believe that its influence will be mighty in promoting the peace of the world.

The Earl of Cavan, Chief of the Imperial General Staff: I am always proud of the great work that so many of my relatives have done, and are doing, for the Salvation Army.

Sir William Edge, M.P., England: The Salvation Army bears a well merited name. This work among the utterly destitute of the great cities is one of the bright spots of the religious world. The success of the Army owed something to its having blended Christianity and practical work; and running right through in its efforts is the purpose to create good citizens.

Archbishop of Melbourne, the widespread appreciation felt for the Salvation Army, said:

It is a great tribute not merely to the memory of that great man, who, under God, laid the foundations of this Army of Jesus Christ, but also to the inherent power and life which has been seen in its officers and in its soldiers all along through its career. That blessing of God has been given because the Army has been true to the two great fundamentals of the Christian faith, blood and fire.

Colonel Harry Cockshutt, ex-Lieut.-Governor of Ontario: The privileges I have of testifying to the good work of the Salvation Army are some of the joys of my life. The Army salvages wrecks of humanity so that they are able to serve their country and their God, and we ought to be thankful for it.

Hon. J. H. Thomas, M.P.P.C.: The great appeal to the moral uplifting of the people is something that the Salvation Army understands and they can be proud of their work.

Salvation Army Hymn.

The love of Christ doth me constrain
To seek the wandering souls of men.
With cries, entreaties, tears, to save--
To snatch them from the gaping grave.

For this let men revile my name;
No cross I shun; I fear no shame;
All hail reproach, and welcome pain;
Only Thy terrors, Lord, restrain.

To Thee I all my powers present,
That for Thy truth they may be spent;
Fulfill Thy sovereign council, Lord;
Thy will be done, Thy name adored.

Give me Thy strength, O God of power,
Then winds may blow, or thunders roar;
Thy faithful witness will I be;
'Tis fixed: I can do all through Thee.

MUSINGS AT A MANSE WINDOW

ARMISTICE DAY AND THANKSGIVING! How appropriate that these two days should come together! Too often do we make Thanksgiving Day an occasion for a round of pleasure without any apparent consciousness of what the day signifies. There is less excuse for thoughtlessness this year. Both days coming together on a Sunday should lead to a little more serious thought. And it does not seem easy to get such thought in this pleasure-pursuing age. Full well do I know that in writing this way I am running the risk of being classed as a "kill-joy." However, I refuse to submit to such classification! I am not one who is going about trying to take the joy out of life. I will take second place to none in the love of pleasure. I can laugh with the best; and never yet has it been necessary to perform a surgical operation to enable me to see a joke. Indeed I can see so many of them on the streets and in public places that my eyesight is in danger of being strained.

My business never has been that of robbing life of its joy. My chief business is to tell mankind how joys lost may be restored. I would much rather start a smile than a tear; although some folks I know would be all the cleaner and sweeter in their souls if they shed a few more tears.

CROWDED CHURCHES.

To-morrow, the churches of the land ought to be crowded with a serious - minded people. Gratitude ought to be swelling up within every Canadian heart. There is so much to be thankful for. The mere fact that we are alive when death has been subtracting others from society is surely good reason for thanksgiving! That we have the normal use of our mind, when so many others are mentally unfit, ought to make us pause and ask if we are making any really worthwhile use of our mental machinery. In death one is taken and another left. Are we doing anything to show our gratitude for being the one that is left? Surely the possession of a sound body and a sound mind is cause enough for thanksgiving if anything is. The fact that we are living in this great Dominion with all its privileges should make us shout our praises to the Giver of every good gift. It is only by the accident of birth that we are as we are. We might have been born in Africa, and been bowing down before idols of wood and stone, instead of in this gospel-favored part of the world.

Yet there are multitudes in Canada taking these things without any thought of the responsibility that comes with the possession of them. In an age that is talking very glibly about evolution, men has not got very far away, if any, from the level of the beast! I am convinced that many a dog has shown far more gratitude for a favor bestowed than is shown by many a supposedly intelligent human being.

Let our churches be thronged with grateful crowds on the coming Sabbath. Peans of praise should be the predominant characteristic of all our worship. Let gratitude and thanksgiving to Almighty God pulsate in every part of the services of the sanctuary when we meet to pay tribute to the dead in the silence of the two minutes.

A MONUMENT IN OUR MIDST.

Those who live in Peterborough have been watching with interest the erection of a monument on one of our most public places. That it is a wonderful work of art all will admit. It will compare most favorably with what has been done in other parts of Canada.

We usually get what we pay for. And the price paid for this monument being far from small, it was only to be expected that there would be no suggestion of cheapness about it. It is a credit to its creator, and Peterborough has become the proud possessor of a beautiful memorial.

As to the wisdom of spending so much money on such an object there is said to be some difference of opinion. But, tell me, if you know, was there ever any object upon which public money was expended regarding which there was not a difference of opinion? It is certain that if we wait for complete unanimity before embarking upon any enterprise we shall never embark at all. A difference of opinion is not necessarily a valid objection.

At the same time I have heard objections on the ground that so long as many are still suffering from the effects of the war it would be better to spend our money on such cases. Just how much cause they may have for such a contention I am unable to say. But if there are those who suffered loss in the war, or because of the war, who are still being neglected it is not to the credit of the country or the country's rulers.

WE SOON FORGET.

It is a great pity if the only way in which we can perpetuate the memory of those who did their bit in the Great War is in stone and metal. The stone and metal memorial is all right in its place, but if that is all it is very much to be regretted. In the heart of every living man and woman in Canada there should be a memorial to the brave souls who played so important a part in seeking to save our civilization from going back to the jungle. And if that memorial be in our hearts we will not rest till those who still suffer are helped to the limit of our ability.

Our success in forgetting some things is not to our credit. Think at this Thanksgiving time of the lonely hearts and the vacant chairs. Think of those who went out never to return. And think of the aching void their going has left in many a life. God forbid that we should need a monument erected to their memory to keep their sacrifical service ever fragrant in our hearts.

Without detracting for a moment from the spirit that has made this monument possible in Peterborough it will be to our shame if this is the only way in which we can cherish the memory of brave men.

ONLY A TRUCE.

It is not only Thanksgiving Day that we are celebrating, but it is also Armistice Day. And that fact ought to make our Thanksgiving all the more devout and hearty.

Armistice does not mean that we are done with war, however much we may long for such a state of society. At the best it is but a truce! And we have no assurance, despite all our pacts and peace treaties, that war will not come again, and on a greater scale than before!

No one should be blamed for working with might and main to end war. But it is a great pity that many of those who are so working do not read the Word of God and take into consideration the selfishness and greed which are just as prevalent as they have ever been. So long as these continue in the hearts of men so long have you the material out of which war arises. At this very moment when we are observing Armistice with our silence of two minutes!—practically every nation is preparing for war.

PRESERVING PEACE.

We are told—perhaps sincerely—that the only way to preserve peace is to be prepared for war. In the face of such a statement it is well to ponder the words of General Sir Frederick Maurice when he says:

"I went into the British army believing that if you want peace you must prepare for war. I believe now that if you prepare thoroughly for war you will get war."

When we think of the feeling of rest and comfort which came to the universal heart when the Armistice was declared, is it not the devout wish of us all that the day might soon come when it will not be merely a truce that is declared but the assurance given that there will never again be war in the earth? Any one who does not long for this is scarcely fit for decent society.

WARS SHALL CEASE.

Just as long as human nature is as it is we shall need our army and our navy. It is that condition of the human heart which makes it necessary to maintain both policemen and prisons.

How are wars to cease?

They shall cease when the Son of God comes as the Prince of Peace and reigns as King of Kings and Lord of Lords. The world, in the most religious part of it, banished Him from the earth when it said: "Away with Him; crucify Him."

But He is coming again! O, blessed thought, Jesus is coming again! The earth shall be purged from iniquity. On the new earth; over which the new heavens will be spread, there will be no need of policemen or prisons, of armies or navies.

Think of this prophetic picture: The wolf also shall dwell with the lamb, and the leopard shall lie down with the kid; and the calf and the young lion and the fatling together; and a little child—not some general—shall lead them. And the cow and the bear shall feed; their young ones shall lie down together; and the lion shall eat straw like the ox. And the sucking child shall play on the hole of the asp, and the weaned child shall put his head on the cockatrice den. They shall not hurt nor destroy in all my holy mountain: for the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea.

A groaning creation will sing of a complete redemption. The sound of shot and shell with the moaning of dying men will never again be heard in the earth. Sin and sorrow and death shall be banished forever from the experience of the children of men; and a redemmed race shall sing the most glorious song of Thanksgiving ever heard by human ears.

—Allan Fairbairn.

The Minister Remarks—

—It would almost seem as if sight had been wasted on people who can look at a matchless landscape and see nothing but the insects in the air.

—Your failure is entirely your own fault and is due to the fact that you preferred a bauble to a diamond.

—The reason why some people spend so much of their time groping in the dark is because they have discredited the sunshine for a tallow candle.

—What hope is there for those whose only ambition is to kill time while eternity is transpiring at their door?

—What's the use of having an eye to see if you lack the energy to act?

—A date to some shallow souls is nothing more than a mark on the calendar.

—A. F.

The Lure of the Supernatural

THE lure of the supernatural is persuasive and powerful. The fires of a boundless hope cannot be wet-blanketed by a naturalistic philosophy. Modern educational programs and processes tend to opiate the very faculties which are reaching out after God, but belief still persists. Intoxicated by unprecedented mastery of nature, mankind is applauding the superman, but there is still a sober remnant whose unyielding hold on the invisible and the eternal is powerfully influential. Ossified by selfishness, refrigerated by indifference, the heart of humanity still calls for a vision of after-death realities. Since God parted the curtains of his universe and visibly walked among men in the person of Christ, faith in the supernatural has energised the imagination and vitalized human will.—"The Seven Finalities of Faith." —By Dr. A. Z. Conrad.

MIGHT IS RIGHT

ARMISTICE DAY! What memories it recalls! It carries our thoughts back to a time that to many is still a veritable night-mare!

There were philosophers! And the most concrete statement of the philosophy of that period was, "Might is Right." It became the slogan of one of the most cultured nations on the face of the earth. The tragedy it led to has been told in tears and blood, wooden crosses on foreign soil and vacant chairs in an almost countless number of homes.

Again and again we were told that "Might is Right," and so it was. And so it is still!

Might is the right to bear the burdens of the weak, to cheer the faint, to uplift the fallen, to pour from one's own full stores to the need of the famishing. Therefore, whether it will make for sorrow or for joy depends upon the spirit in which it is uttered.

Self-conquest is the greatest of victories! Such conquest can only be through the Cross of Christ. All honor to the wooden crosses; but the conquest of all that is worst in our civilization is only to be accomplished through His Cross. The rank and file of humanity, as well as the rulers of the earth, are slow to believe this. Physical strength is what most of them glory in; spiritual strength seems to have no place in popular philosophy. Physical strength is measured by what one can carry; spiritual, by what one can bear. Physical strength is expended in an effort to get and keep and it usually leads to unhappiness. When will men be wise enough to see that true happiness is to be found in the hunger to give?

The greatest thing in the world is love. And love is the only possession of which the more we give the more we have for ourselves.

May this Armistice Day find us saying in the words of George Matheson's famous hymn:

"O Cross that liftest up my head,
I dare not ask to fly from thee;
I lay in dust life's glory dead,
And from the ground there blossoms read
Life that shall endless be."

—A. F.

IT is an evening in the springtime, and everything is looking bright and beautiful, but that man does not appear to be happy; on the contrary, his face shows signs of disappointment and deep sorrow. There are crowds in the street, but his heart is lonely. It is not poverty or want that cause his sorrow, as he is evidently a man of the upper class and probably wealthy. He is in doubt as well as in grief, uncertain whether it is safe to take the step upon which he meditates. See! he hesitates—walks slowly; it is evidently a venturesome thing. But now his resolve is made, his step is quicker, firmer, and at last he ascends the steps of an important-looking building. Perhaps he will be turned away? No! a man of that rank is received with respect. He is ushered into the presence of one who appears to be a kind of head magistrate or ruler, and to him with calm fearlessness he makes a request.

The petitioner's words are met with the greatest astonishment. "What! in half a day? Impossible!" An officer of the Court is called, but his testimony agrees with that of the first speaker, and he adds some particulars which interest and seem rather to alarm his chief. The request is granted—although it certainly is a strange one—and now having obtained the permission on which his heart is set he hurries away, not to his house, but some hours later we may see him depositing his treasure in the midst of those lovely flowers which tell us of an eternal spring.

The key to the previous Pen Picture of Bible History is to be found in Ruth 4:1-12. I wonder whether anyone discovered it as the result of their own reading?

The key to this week's Pen Picture is to be found in Mark's Gospel. See if you can locate it before I announce it.

—A. F.

IN TIME OF CONFLICT

HEAVENLY FATHER, Thou canst not share, or approve of, all our opinions and courses, but Thou dost love us all. May the tolerance of Thy love become the chief example and inspiration for our lives. When we oppose opinions and policies that we believe to be misguided and wrong, may we not fail in love and kindliness toward those who told them. And may we remember how prone we are ourselves to err.

Save us from the assumption that Thou art always on our side, and create in us the humble and patient quest of the truth as it is in love.

Give us a bold and uncompromising spirit in upholding and advocating all that we believe to be right for the individual conscience, and for the moral and social welfare of the nation and the world. But enable us to remember the complexity of life and the many angles of approach toward truth, so that, in our unwillingness to compromise, we may never compromise the finer and deeper humilities and courtesies that are inseparable from the loving of our fellowmen, and especially the loving of our enemies.

And above all things, Our Father, give us some view of the conflicts from above, that in moments of fear and depression we may see how Thou dost make the wrath of men to praise Thee, and behold how Thy Kingdom advances not only through the triumph of good over evil, but through the varied, and often conflicting, effort of honest men striving, each in his own way, for the right. Thus, out of all our conflicts and controversies, save us, O Lord, and save the nation; and make us a means of blessing to the world for the saving of which Thou didst give Thy Son. Amen.

THE ARMISTICE NUMBER.

This special Armistice edition of The Examiner includes many features that should be of great interest to our readers, and should serve to remind the district served by this paper of the great significance of the anniversary of the end of the war.

Among the features that will be most eagerly read, The Examiner believes, are the Armistice Day messages from many of the clergymen of the city and district.

In presenting these messages our endeavor was to have every clergyman in the district participate, and accordingly the clergy of all denominations in this section of Ontario were communicated with and asked for a short message suitable for the occasion.

We publish to-day all that have been received, believing that they will be appreciated by all our readers, and particularly by the men who fought and the relatives of those gallant soldiers who were not spared to come back, for their words of encouragement and hope and for their patriotic fervor.

These messages, with the many photographs of Peterborough and district soldiers, the pictures of the war memorials in this district and other Armistice pictures and articles appearing in this special number, will, it is hoped, serve the purpose of properly stressing the historic importance of this occasion.

CO-OPERATION.

The entente cordiale between the City Council and the local Chamber of Commerce is something upon which both bodies, as well as the community generally, are to be congratulated.

Co-operation between the two organization is essential in the interets of a better Peterborough and it is gratifying to note the spirit shown at the dinner tendered the city fathers by the Chamber of Commerce on Thursday evening.

Members of the Council have a heavy responsibility in directing the affairs of the city they serve; civic duties call frequently upon their tme and energy and their only reward is the feeling that they are doing their duty as citizens.

It is a source of satisfaction therefore to know that their work is appreciated by such a community organization as the Chamber of Commerce and that they are assured of the assitance and co-operation of the latter in any undertaking that makes for the progress of Peterborough.

TOURIST TRAFFIC.

The fact that according to official returns from the Ontario Government tourist traffic into this province during the present year shows an increase of over 20 per cent. over that of last year, is further proof of the oft made statement that this traffic has become one of Canada's greatest industries.

Queen's Park reports that 11,000,000 tourists entered Ontario this year and spent approximately $100,000,000 here.

Those are amazing figures and there is no reason to believe that the saturation point has been reached.

The Provincial Government is planning an eighteen million dollar road program next year.

The extension of good roads into other parts of Ontario at present not served, and improvements to the present highway system will bring more visitors in future years.

In fact, with the sale of automobiles showing no falling off and road systems being improved in accordance with the demand for better highways, a steady increase in tourist traffic may be anticipated.

Ontario has much to offer the visitor and can count upon a liberal share of this great industry, made possible by the advent of cheap and rapid transportation.

ON EASY STREET.

Figures just issued at Ottawa in regard to the Dominion's splendid financial position furnish Canadians with another good reason for thanksgiving.

In the seven months of the fiscal year ending with October, it is announced that the national debt has been reduced by $84,923,297, as compared with $75,416,605 last year, a showing upon which the Finance Minister is to be congratulated.

Despite income tax slashes, it is found that the collections from this levy amounted to $54,098,892 in the period mentioned, as against $49,618,277 in 1927.

Ordinary revenue in the seven months showed an increase of over twenty million dollars; a jump in customs collections from $91,950,748 last year to $109,823,819, being the principal factor in the greater revenue reported.

Imports of foreign goods indicate a tremendous increase, the total for the six months ending September amounting to $1,183,900,000, more than a hundred million dollars greater than in the same period last year, and two hundred million more than in 1926.

While the growth in the importation of foreign goods may be regretted by many people as indicating employment for foreign workers that might have been given to Canadians, it is conclusive evidence that the people of Canada are prosperous.

Altogether the Ottawa figures make pleasant reading for Canadians.

UNPRECEDENTED ACTIVITY.

Nearly all the sources of material wealth are operating to produce unprecedented activity in trade and transportation and to give to Canada, as a whole, a large measure of prosperity, says the Bank of Montreal's monthly business summary. Basic factors, reacting one upon another, such as bountiful crops, increasing sales of livestock and dairy products, active fabrication of iron and steel, sustained output of metals and of manufacture of newsprint, expanding foreign trade, stability of commodity prices, briskness in the various industries, unabated building construction, extension of old and establishment of new plants, and large employment of labor, are all very favorable portents. Speculation on stock exchanges has been rampant, reflecting the optimism pervading the people and revealing a symptom common to prevailing conditions without other difference from its predecessors than its more widely-spread extent. Neither in the United States nor in Canada have the restraining hand of cautious financiers and the impediment of high money rates served to check these operations. Meanwhile, whatever warrant may be found for borrowing from the future the lackings of the present, the fact remains that security prices are so high in many instances that interest return is entirely inadequate. Well is it, also, to remember that the profitable production of Canada's fields, forests, fisheries and mines is more regulated by foreign than by domestic markets.

The harvest, now safely gathered, has been abundant, especially in the four Western Provinces. Final figures of the wheat yield may even outrun the earlier estimates and give an aggregate in excess of 550,000,000 bushels, with an average of approximately 24 bushels per acre from the 23,100,000 acres seeded. The preceding ten-year average of spring wheat was 15.5 bushels per acre. Quality of the wheat, too, is better than last year, grading running somewhat higher taking the crop as a whole, and if current market prices are maintained the monetary value of the crop will be appreciably larger. These things work to the advantage of agricultural implement makers, whose output is steadily growing and whose sales promise to reach a new peak in the early future.

A BLOW OR A BLESSING?

Mr. Hoover's election may prove either an economic blow or an unintended blessing to Canada. The President-elect swept the disaffected Western farm belt by explicitly promising tariffs high enough to keep out Canadian farm produce. Mr. Hoover's sincerity cannot be questioned. He is a man of his word, as his whole career shows. When, therefore, he promises to eliminate competition by Canadian farm products Canadians can be prepared for a sharp curtailment of markets. It will be remembered that the depressing effect of the Fordney emergency tariff was felt in nearly every Canadian farm home. There should, consequently, be no illusions as to what is to come. Mr. Hoover promised drastic measures. Canada will feel them.

The United States cannot be blamed for endorsing any policy which she honestly believes to be in her own interest. But Canadian statesmen will be deserving of the severest censure if they fail to make good lost markets by turning to our own friends; to those who are loyal to the same King, love the same flag, and whose sons fought and died with our sons in the common fight for civilization. These Britons will not, of course, agree to economic rearrangements which are against their own interests. But they, even more than we, have faced, and are facing, the problem of vanishing foreign markets, the vacillations of foreign politicians, and the vagaries of foreign peoples. The time, indeed, is coming when such movements as that toward a United States of Europe will force the whole Empire to ask where she is to find her economic destiny.

The British Empire covers a quarter of the whole earth. One-third of the people of the world owe allegiance to the British Crown. Surely it is not beyond the genius of the statesmen of this Empire to get together on an economic policy for the times which will guarantee stabilized markets for Empire producers. If the United States is to place a virtual embargo on Canadian wheat and meat, is the United States forever to be allowed to compete in British markets with Canadian farm produce? If the Motherland is to change her policy to right this anomaly, has Canada anything to offer as a quid pro quo?

Lord Melchett is one of the outstanding commercial geniuses of the whole world. Whatever his failings, lack of business acumen is not one of them. He points to what is called the law of large units in every walk of commercial life. He believes that Europe is destined to form one great economic unit, and the United States, with her satellites, another. Britain, he believes, will be forced to choose between participation in the European unit or membership in some sort of an Empire customs union. It is obvious that Canada must face a similar decision. She could make terms with Washington—at a price. But that price is the frustration of a plan that offers much greater possibilities. Canada should seek her destiny with the Empire.

Are there on the Canadian political horizon any leaders big enough and willing enough to contribute leadership to a great cause? The Liberals deserve real credit for inaugurating the plan of British trade preferences and for negotiating useful intra-Empire trade treaties. What has been done is good: but it is not good enough. What has been done is but as a step in what requires a full day's march.

Conservative leaders have been handicapped owing to the party interpretation of the National Policy as a sort of economic Sinn Feinism which even required bitter opposition to British preferences—opposition by no means disguised by the frenzied flag-waving during elections.

Empire trade rearrangement is a big problem for big men—adventurous men as big today as the Fathers of Confederation were big sixty-odd years ago. It will not be solved by politicians whose vision is bounded by the borders of polling constituencies or who talk economic Sinn Feinism to a country with about the largest per capita exportable surplus in the whole world.—The Globe.

ARMISTICE

Dear Mr. Editor:

In commemoration for the tenth anniversary which we can never forget. 11th of November, 1918, will be a day to be remembered for ever, by young and old. No bronze figures are needed to be a reminder of the feeling of relief on that memorable day. Words cannot express the joy and sadness of that day.

All honor to our Boys.

GOD'S MINUTE.

It is a good thing to give thanks unto the Lord, and to sing praises unto Thy name, O Most High; to show forth Thy loving kindness in the morning and Thy faithfulness every night. For Thou, Lord, hast made me glad through Thy work; I will triumph in the work of Thy hands.—Ps. 92:1-2, 4.

* * *

Our loving Father in Heaven, we come to Thee as the good All-Father that cares for us here below, realizing our many wants, but "our God can supply all our needs according to His riches in glory by Jesus Christ." Teach us also, dear Lord, to realize fully our many infirmitites. "Teach me to know how frail I am," and notwithstanding all, may we go to Thee as children to an earthly parent—trustfully, believingly, and in full confidence that Thou wilt lead our steps aright. Bless our children, loving Saviour, and as they grow up to manhood's and womanhood's stature, may they grow into the measure of the stature of the fullness of Jesus Christ. Prepare us to-day for all that Thou art preparing for us. Make us patient, loving, thoughtful and helpful. Bless each one of us, and what is far better, make us a blessing. For Jesus' sake we ask it. Amen.

The Question Box

THE CANADIAN TARIFF.

L. S. C.—Q.: What are the chief features of the Canadian tariff?

A. The Canadian tariff is designed as a source of revenue and as an aid to Canadian industry. Raw materials are admitted at low rates or free; semi-manufactured at a higher rate; the highest rates are charged on articles which are also manufactured in Canada. The three main schedules are: British preferential, Intermediate and General. The first, the lowest, is charged on goods produced or manufactured in the United Kingdom and Dominions, Colonies and Protectorates. The preferential is in general about 33 1-3 p.c. lower than the general rate. The intermediate applies on certain classes of goods from countries with which Canada has commercial treaties or agreements. The General or highest tariff applies on goods from all other sources.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Que., Nov. 10 (Canadian Press).—A feature of the Montreal grain trade yesterday was the marked improvement in the demand from United Kingdom and the Continent and a good business was done in wheat, oats and barley.

The local market for cash grain was firm with a steady trade passing in most lines with domestic and country buyers.

Prices for all grades of Spring and Winter wheat flour were well maintained under a good demand.

The trade in all lines of millfeed continued active and the tone of the market was firm. The movement of standard grades of rolled oats was fair and prices were unchanged.

Potatoes were in good demand, but prices were again easy. Car lots of New Brunswick Green Mountains sold at 65c per bag of 90 pounds in bulk, and Prince Edward Island Green Mountains at 83c per bag of 90 pounds in bulk.

The undertone to the egg market continued firm under a good demand for all grades of fresh and storage. Receipts were 933 cases.

Small lots of imported choice white hand-picked beans sold at $5.25 per bushel, ex-store, while Canadian beans sold at $4.85 to $4.90 per bushel, ex-track.

The inquiry for butter showed a decided improvement and values were steady. Receipts were 69 packages.

The cheese trade was quiet but values were unchanged.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Nov. 10 (Canadian Press).—Anticipating the substance of the government crop report, grain traders yesterday hoisted corn and oats both to above topmost prices heretofore reached this season. The report shows 16,000,000 bushels less corn production than the average of latest unofficial estimates, with farm reserve stocks of corn about 6,000,000 bushels below trade expectation.

Closing quotations on corn were unsettled ¾ to 1¼c net higher, with wheat ¾ to ¾c up; oats at ¾ to ¾c advance, and provisions from 12c decline to a rise of 10c. From the outset yesterday, commission houses were active in purchasing corn future deliveriesliveries, being influenced by snow over the corn belt and by correct belief that the government crop report due after the close would show reduced figures on corn yield. Besides, receipts of corn in Chicago yesterday, 135 cars, were hardly half as much as a week ago, country offerings were again scanty and eastern shipping demand was good.

A forecast of further unsettled weather likely to interfere with husking and with the movement of new corn did much to stimulate corn buying yesterday, and some cash handlers were showing a good deal of concern over contracts calling for early shipment. Industries and feed-dealers were also displaying more interest than usual. On the advance, however, selling on the part of holders who wished to realize profits led to something of a set-back from the day's top level of prices.

To a large extent, wheat and oats followed the leadership of corn, but wheat was also influenced by improved export demand as well as by word of unwelcome showers in the sections of Argentina where the first of the southern hemisphere 1928 wheat crop is about ready to cut. Meanwhile, it was estimated that Europe yesterday bought 1,300,000 bushels of wheat from North America. First sales of July delivery of wheat in Chicago were made yesterday, and brought ½c over May.

Provisions averaged higher, helped by upturns both in hog values and in grain.

C.N.R. EARNINGS

BUTTER AND EGGS.

TORONTO, November 10. — Following the firmer feeling established in the local butter market last week, trading displayed additional strength on Monday under slightly better demand advanced the firm feeling of the mand and limited receipts. As the market was definitely established, and jobbing prices for highest quality creamery were advanced to a quotable range of from 40c to 40½c per pound, a full half-cent per pound higher than for the close last Saturday. Undergrades advanced in sympathy with the finest to a range of from 39c to 39½c for better kinds. The business movement from midweek on has been rather quiet at steady prices. Extra fancy butter has changed hands at fractionaly higher levels than nominal quotation in a spotty market, and on Thursday and again yesterday some jobbers reported transactions at 42¼ cents per pound, thus widening the spread for finest creamery solids at the week's close. The pre-holiday trading was mostly for immediate requirements, with no undue buying pressure being exerted in any direction for the short supplies available in storage.

PEASANT RULE COMMENCES IN RUMANIA

Constitutionalism Triumph Over Despotism Declares New Premier of Country.

TREMENDOUS OVATION.

Few Members of New Ministry Have Had Experience in Public Office.

BUCHAREST, Nov. 10 (Canadian Press).—After 50 years of almost uninterrupted rule by powerful capitalistic and landed interests, greater Rumania, with its agrarian population of 16,000,000, passed yesterday to the hands of a Peasant government led by Juliu Maniu.

"It is a triumph of constitutionalism over despotism," declared Maniu enthusiastically as he bounded down the palace steps after the regency had given him the mandate. "In the future our country will be governed by a Parliament elected honestly by the people and not by a professional political clique."

Huge crowds gathered outside the palace and the modest home of Maniu and gave the new Premier a tremendous ovation.

The designation by the Regency of Maniu to form a Cabinet after Nichclas Titulescu had failed caused profound gloom among the Liberals, who throughout the day had been in blissful expectation of being summoned by the Regency as the only party capable of solving the crisis which had endured for a week.

Little Experience.

Scarcely any member of the new "People's Ministry" has had experience in national public office, so that the rural government's accession to power presents a rare experiment in modern democracy and political science.

When the Regency entrusted Maniu with the mandate, the Transylvanian lawyer acted with characteristic promptness. Drawing a typewritten list from his pocket, he said, "Here is my Cabinet. I am ready to assume the government immediately."

His first act will undoubtedly be to ask dissolution of Parliament and new elections, for he has repeatedly charged that body with not being representative.

People Decide.

If the Rumanian people should then decide against the present monarchy, not only would members of the Regency lose their jobs but King Michael, his mother Princess Helen, his grandmother, the Dowager Queen Marie, his great-uncle Prince Nicholas and his aunt, Princess Ileana, would lose their present liberal civil lists and might have to follow the dispossessed and disinherited former Crown Prince Carol into exile.

This would spell the end of Rumania's 62 years of royal rule which began with King Carol and Queen Carmen Sylva.

While the commitment of Rumania's destinies to the untried peasant at a critical juncture of the nation's life undoubtedly involves risks and uncertainties, all progressive Rumanians see in the change a prospect at least of honest and uncontrolled elections and the abolition of the existing huge edifice of governmental and private graft and the dawn of a real liberal constitutional government unimpeded by censorships or official depression.

Given fair encouragement by the people and generous financial support from abroad, an honest Rumanian government could make of the nation one of the richest productive countries in the world because of its unexampled natural resources.

CHURCH SERVICE TO START AT 10.45

Special Thanksgiving Messages Will Be Delivered in St. Paul's Church.

The services in St. aPul's Presbyterian Church to-morrow will be in keeping with the Thanksgiving and Armistice Day character of the season. Rev. William Allan, the pastor, who for the past two weeks has been conducting special services in Perth, Ontario, will occupy the pulpit at both diets of worship.

The subject of the morning discourse (according to the advertisement on the Church Page of today's issue) will be "A Woman and a Memorial,' 'and the evening's meditation will be entitled "The Silence of Eternity," both of an appropriate trend and highly reverential.

The musical services promise to be of an inspiring nature. The choir will render Dyke's "Te Deum," and a quintette (Mrs. Grace Byers, Miss eJssie Pattison, Messrs. Grieves, Anderson, and East) will sing an arrangement of "When the Roll is Called on High" (McGranahan) at the morning devotions.

The evening diet will be especially of interest, when the choir of sixty voices will render (unaccompanied) the three test numbers of the recent Kiwanis Musical Festival — "O Love the Lord" (Sullivan), "Through the Day Thy Love Spared Us" (J. E. West), and "Judge Me, O God' '(Mendelssohn). Martin B. Chenhall, A.R.C.O., will be in charge of the music of the day, and this promises to be a very enjoyable part of the services.

As will be also noticed, the Armistice Day service in the morning in St. Paul's Church commences at 10.45, to allow of the observance of the two minutes' silence at eleven o'clock. It is expected the congregation will be in their seats at the time mentioned, that all may show the silent homage in memory of those who fell for the honor of King and country.

FRIDAY NIGHT CLUB MEETS IN Y.M.C.A.

F. H. Dobbin Describes Prince Rupert's Land To Those Present.

The Friday Night Supper club had another successful meeting last night when over fifty of the members gathered around for another hour and a half of fun. Graham Eastwood was in charge of the meeting, and Bruce Fraser led the singing.

After the supper was over the new members introduced themselves, and several songs were sung.

Next week the club is starting a membership campaign; this was outlined by Hector McLeod. Eight teams have been chosen, headed by T. Hall, C. Hall, W. Sangster, B. Allan, H. McLeod, F. Hewett, K. Copping and B. Fraser.

As the two P.C.I. teams are playing important games, three cheers and a tiger were given to them.

The speaker of the evening was F. H. Dobbin, the "Y's" grand old man. Mr. Dobbin gave an interesting speech on some experiences of his in Prince Rupert's Land. He said he went to a small town there to relieve a trader from his post in order that he might take a holiday to Peterborough. Mr. Dobbin gave a good idea of the community life there, describing the houses, their construction, size and shapes. It is an easy life for a banker there, as one told him that he had lots of time to hunt and fish and climb.

At the hotel if a single man buys a dinner it also includes a dinner for his dog but in the case of a married man the dog is not fed because it has a home to go. The prices there are extremely high for some goods. a haircut costs $1.00 and a shave 85 cents. Men come from all parts of the world, and many have Old Country or American college degrees. The working men there each pay $1.00 a month to the hospital, and if they are hurt they are fixed up with no extra charge other than that.

A vote of thanks to Mr. Dobbin was moved by Robert French and seconded by Arthur Profit. The meeting closed with the reading of the creed.

GIRL STUDENTS SHOW TALENT

Speaker Declares Canadian Art Pupils Equal To Those Studying in Other Countries.

That Canadian girl students at the Ontario College of Art showed talent which was fully equal to that of girls studying art in other countries, and that they were not surpassed by students of European lands, was the declaration made by Emanuel Hahn, noted sculptor of Toronto, speaking to members of the Women's Art Association at their meeting in the studio of the Conservatory of Music yesterday afternoon. Mr. Hahn included pupils of both sexes in this statement, but spoke especially in reference to the talent exhibited by Canadian girl students.

Mr. Hahn, who was introduced by the president, Mrs. W. Blackwell, proved to be a speaker of much interest and charm. His informal talk on "Sculpture and the Studio" was listened to with appreciative attention, and the ladies joined sincerely in the expression of thanks accorded the speaker by the president at its conclusion.

One especially interesting portion of Mr. Hahn's address was the delineation, by means of the lantern slides with which his address was illustrated, of the methods used in the studio in modelling the clay figures from which metal casts are made. To the uninitiated, chicken netting and lead piping would seem to have little place in the construction of one of the superb memorial figures which were flashed on the screen, but their initial stages include both of these humble materials. The rude skeleton which forms the groundwork of the clay figure is composed mainly of these two elements, the pipe to shape the contour and the netting to protect the wet material.

Sculptor's Work.

Views of the work of various sculptors, as shown by Mr. Hahn, included many of the statues which are the work of Walter Allward, the Canadian who was responsible for our own Peterborough War Memorial. The memorial statue of Governor Simcoe, in Queen's Park, Toronto, the Sandfield Macdonald monument, the South African memorial group in Toronto, with the Winged Victory surmounting the pedestal, the majestic conception of the unfinished King Edward Memorial in Ottawa, the War Memorial at Stratford, with its inscription, "They gave their lives to break the power of the sword," were shown. the picturization of this sculptor's work ending with a view of the superb Vimy Ridge Memorial, taken from a sketch model of the artist's mental picture of the still unfinished work. This simple, imposing memorial gives a wonderful impression of dignity, the two large pylons with the altar between rising behind the allegorical figures at the base.

A very effective contrast was afforded by the inclusion in Mr. Hahn's pictures of views of the Victor Emmanuel monument in Rome, with its widespread, florid treatment, and the Burns' monument in Edinburgh, where, as the speaker pointed out, an effort to transplant the allegorical beauty of the Temple of the Four Winds, an Athenian conception of many thousands of years ago, to a modern Scotch scene of rugged simplicity, has been made with unlikeable results. As an example of fitness in conception and design, the Lion of Lucerne, that monument to the soldiers of Switzerland was shown.

Habitant Life.

Other work by Canadian sculptors comprised views of groups and single figures done by several French-Canadians, Suzor Cote of Montreal, in a high relief of a habitant logger and his team; Hill of Montreal, designer of the South African Memorial; Honore Hebert of Montreal, typified in a simple, chaste figure of Evangeline of Acadia, and a second relief of the Great Precursor, John the Baptist; Alfred Howell of Toronto, sculptor of the magnificent Guelph War Memorial; Gordon Osborne, whose conception of a drinking fountain for animals was so effective and interesting, with its spirited horses' heads held by a straining figure; Miss Frances Loring, designer of charming nude figures of children; and Elizabeth Wood (who is in private life Mrs. Emanuel Hahn), in several bits which included a mourning head and "Passing Rain."

Views of the speaker's own work were exceptionally interesting. The "Indian Scout," property of the Ottawa National Gallery and exhibited at Wembley, was a fine bit of realism in stone, as was the grave face and figure of the soldier mourning for his dead comrades.

The work of Mr. Hahn holds an impression of restrained power and dignity. His showing of the two conceptions (his own and the committee's) of the Edward Hanlon statue in the Exhibition Grounds at Toronto, was interesting in its demonstration of what such conflict between the artistic and the more realistic mind, can do.

Mr. Hahn's sketch model of his conception of the Hanlon monument showed a figure resting in a scull at the moment of completion of a gruelling race, with a bank of stone behind it, suggesting the finish-line. The complete figure, as is well known to frequenters of the Canadian National Exhibition, is a strong, straight figure of the noted oarsman, with the oar in his right hand.

"The committee said my sketch didn't look like a monument," explained Mr. Hahn, whimsically, "and so they had what they wanted."

Just as an example of the artistic temperament and the way in which a sculptor sometimes 'satisfies his soul,' Mr. Hahn showed the huge, shell-like conception of "Memories," typifying the figure of one whose involuntary forward movement toward life is shadowed by memories of things left behind.

A portrait bust of his wife was very interesting, as was the artist's idea of "Flight," demonstrated in the white stone whose shape suggests a broad-hilted, short-bladed sword.

Views of several of the pieces done by Dr. Tate Mackenzie were interesting in their vigor and activity. These are the work of a former surgeon who has turned to sculpture and in it works out his knowledge of anatomy, in straining, pulsating figures of the sprinter and the javelin thrower.

"Can I make a living at this work?" a question so often asked by the earnest student, was brought up by the speaker as an instance of the uncertainty of such an avocation. "I do not know, but you can try," was his answer.

Concluding his address with a few sentences in reference to the new vogue for soap sculpture, Mr. Hahn commended it as an interesting and useful bit of artistic expression. He advocated the use of an orange-wood stick rather than a knife, the broad end of the stick to be utilized to scrape, rather than cut, the soft material.

Secretary's Annual Report.

The Onward and Upward Circle of the King's Daughters are closing a very successful year both as regards work and finances.

During the year eight meetings were held and had an average attendance fo 14 members.

The June meeting as usual was held in the form of a picnic at the home of Mrs. N. H. Sutton, being well attended and much enjoyed.

The weekly visits and distribution of books and magazines to the nospital have been carried on during the year, also weekly visits to the Old People's Home, all being much appreciated.

For several years the King's Daughters have served tea to the mothers at the monthly meeting of the Baby Clinic but this year the cusotm was changed to serving twice during the season.

The annual Christmas cheer boxes for the hospital were again prepared, while Mrs. Hall and Miss Rogers looked after gifts for the Home.

A donation was given Miss Davidson for the Sailors' Mission.

During the year 32 families were visited and substantially helped.

Our finances have been gained in many ways. First by many substantial donations all through the year given by people interested in the work the society is doing and also by the following:

In December a tea with sale of fancy articles and home-made cooking, principally Christmas cake and puddings, the balance left being sold on the market the Saturday before Christmas.

In February a tea and sale of cooking at Mrs. McGee's home.

In March a calendar bridge started at the home of the president and carried on by the members present.

In April a tea at the home of Miss M. English.

In October the society started the season with a tea and sale at the home of Mrs. E. H. Wood, from which was realized a nice sum to finish the year and start a new in which we all hope will be as successful as the years passed.

Two new members have been added to the list, Mrs. Spence and Mrs. Harry Thompson, while the resignation of Mrs. Smith has been regretfully accepted.

The thanks of the entire society is given to our president, Mrs. Hall, for her interest and work during the year.

CHILDHOOD AILMENTS.

Car. Be Quickly Banished With Baby's Own Tablets.

The ailments of childhood are many but nine-tenths of them are due to one cause and one cause only—a disordered condition of the stomach and bowels. To quickly banish any of the minor ailments of babyhood and childhood the bowels must be made to work regular and the stomach must be sweetened.

No other medicine for little ones has had such success as has Baby's Own Tablets. They banish constipation and indigestion; break up colds and simple fevers; correct diarrhoea and colic and promote healthful sleep by regulating the functions of the stomach and bowels. Concerning them Mrs. L. M. Brown, Walton, N.S., writes:—"I cannot speak too highly of Baby's Own Tablets as I have found them excellent for childhood ailments."

Baby's Own Tablets are sold by medicine dealers, or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Travel Three Days In Horse Drawn Vehicle

CHICAGO, Ill., Nov. 10—(Canadian Press).—A story of men and women who travel three days across country in horse-drawn wagons, in order to cast their ballot in an election, sounds like the tale of pioneer days, but it is the story of this year's campaign in New Mexico as told by Mrs. W. C. Reid of Albuquerque, Republican national committeewoman.

Mrs. Reid, on her way to Washington for a conference with party leaders, stopped for a short visit at western headquarters of the National Republican Committee.

"We have just completed our state wide registration," she said. "It is one of the heaviest in the history of the state. More women registered than ever before, many traveling across the desert as far as seventy miles to their nearest registration place.

Peaceful Peterborough's War Time Effort---By F. H. DOBBIN

ON this anniversary day, that commemorates the event for which the civilized world had anxiously waited during the long and arduous and decimating struggle, the "Dawn of Peace," it seems well to bring back memories of those who participated, something of what was accomplished by all at home, in aiding in carrying on the support of the brave troops, and the unremitting aid and unceasing care that of all that could be done by the civilian population nothing should be omitted.

Preceding the hectic days of August 3rd, 1924, and continuing afterwards, when the definite statement came that Germany had declared war on Britain, as a punishment for her coming to the assistance of Belgium, the information only confirmed anticipation of the clash of arms impending. The whole world had waited in anxiety for the outcome of negotiations assumed to be fruitless.

FRANK H. DOBBIN
prominent in the work of the local branch of the Canadian Patriotic Fund, of which he was executive officer and secretary. He was identified with other war work, including Belgian Relief, Sailors' Relief, 93rd Battalion Fund, the Home Guard, and the Red Cross

Canada promptly decided to cast in her lot with the Mother Country, and following the issuance of a formal Proclamation the call to arms asked for prompt enrollment of at least 25,000 men, volunteers men to go into training and whose destination would be the battlefields of Europe. In Peterborough, the famous militia regiment, the 57th Rangers, which had been a local unit since away back in the year 1858, had been enrolling men in anticipation of such a fearful juncture, and recalling many of older years who had served in the corps in the peaceful years of long ago. Notice of the enrollment had been issued to all divisions of the Canadian Militia to be in readiness to take part in such preliminary training, in anticipation of the worst to come.

The Cabinet, at Ottawa, met and voted a preliminary grant to the emergencies of the hour of $50,000.00, to be afterwards strengthened during the ensuing four years until the war debt reached colossal amounts. For money becomes the sinews of war.

The 57th militia regiment paraded, under orders, on the evening of August 7th, and a similar order was issued to the men of the artillery units (14th and 15th batteries). The qualifications were that the men volunteering must pass medical tests, and have some knowledge of shooting. One hundred and fifty volunteered from the 57th regiment, while the Field Batteries enrolled many more than could be accepted.

By August 12th, recruits began drilling, daily, at the armouries and contingent rifle practice. At first there was in force a regulation that married men could not be accepted, except on written consent being obtained from their wives and families. So the First Contingent was practically made up of single men. The government awarded a separation allowance of $1.00 per day to the wives of married men and the sons of widows who entered the services, or to men who were supporting dependents. It was understood that such amounts would be supplemented by monies raised by the citizens of each locality.

All this now seems very purile. But it is to be borne in mind that there was no local organization or concerted project to take on such responsibility. But the initiative was to come. On August 13th, the local Daughters of the Empire got intensely busy. A large and representative meeting of the women of the city was held in the recreation room at the armouries. The object was to organize and secure funds to assist the families of those leaving the city and county on army service. This was Peterborough's first war effort.

A committee of fifty-six ladies was formed to organize and set to work scores of canvassers. A treasurer was appointed, and on August 18th the collections campaign went forward with surprising activity.

On the evening of August 19th, a public meeting was held to discuss what Peterborough might and should do to arrange for a general money-raising campaign on a larger scale, the proceeds of which should be used for the relief of families of those on service and whose absence should render assistance necessary. The 24th Field Battery was the first of the local forces to leave the city. At the meeting in the Council Chamber many suggestions were offered. One thousand dollars was asked for as a donation towards a hospital ship and an emergency hospital, both, it was feared, pressing needs. An organization committee was formed, and at a further meeting held on the 19th August, at which it was expected plans would be submitted for a united civic effort.

The response to the appeal made by the Daughters of the Empire resulted in $1,675.00 being realized. On August 22nd there followed an immense public demonstration when thousands cheered the departing men of the First Contingent and 3rd Prince of Wales Dragoons and the second party of the 24th battery, leaving for the camp at Valcartier, Que.

Even by September 1st, the city had not yet awakened to what was before it, and hardly realized that some hundreds of its men had gone out to participate in the struggle just entered no call had been made to supply volunteers to any such extent. In the way of relief such civic effort as made had been wholly inadequate.

Examiner Points the Way

In its issue of September 1st The Examiner called attention to the situation as follows:

"Are the people of Peterborough aware of the situation in regard to the relief of the families of the volunteers who have gone to the front?

"The Examiner has endeavored to point out the need for immediate and supplemental action, and those in authority cannot fail to appreciate the seriousness of the situation. Here is a summary of the problem.

"The City Council at a meeting last night decided to inaugurate a City War Fund and so far the amount the city will vote for the fund has not been decided, or determined.

"Believing that the families of our volunteers should be taken care of by a City War Fund, the Charity Board decided last night that no relief from its resources should be paid to soldiers' families.

"The Women's Committee took up subscriptions for the hospital ship and War Fund, and has decided that $1,000 of what they secured should be donated to supplying clothing and kept for emergencies.

"Mayor Buller is out of the city today attending a gathering to endeavor to look after the unemployment situation, where he was placed on the executive of the Industrial Association. Several of the families whose bread-winners are at Valcartier Camp are actually without food. Relief Officer Miller has, in view of the action of the Charity Board and the resolve of the Ladies' Committee, no funds with which to relieve the situation. He has devoted his own purse to help some of the more needy cases, but others are suffering.

"And only ten days ago Mayor Buller told the volunteers that their families would be looked after."

Such was the situation to be met. Peterborough was slowly waking up to a sense of its responsibility. All over the province, cities, towns and villages, from which men had been drawn, were voting through the municipal authorities fairly large sums of money to relieve necessities as indicated.

On the evening of Friday, September 5, at a public meeting called for the purpose, a Patriotic Association was formed. The Mayor and City Clerk were appointed Chairman and Secretary respectively with the City Treasurer to take charge of such monies as might be raised or apportioned. A working committee of twenty prominent citizens was added. From these much was expected.

It was decided that three classes of people would require assistance, during at least the coming winter, viz., the families of volunteers, persons out of work as an indirect cause of the war, and the usual charity and indigent applicants. It was proposed that a Patriotic Fund should apply to the first two classes. Under this arrangement Peterborough could share in any patriotic fund which the government was providing to the extent of some millions of money.

On motion, directed to the City Council, it was urged that a sufficient sum of money be set aside from the municipal resources of 1914, and if necessary an extra assessment to the following year's tax rate, and if needful, borrow money on the strength of this extra assessment. Dan. O'Connell was elected as permanent chairman and steps taken to ascertain how many families and dependents of volunteers would be entitled to participate.

By the end of September the Patriotic Fund collections amounted to over $3,000.00. Presently the title or name of the fund being raised was changed to that of the Feterborough Relief Association.

Coming of the Real Patriotic Fund.

By the middle of November the country had made up its mind that the struggle would be indefinitely prolonged, and that all previous efforts to assist in the war activities counted for almost nothing, and that the worst was yet to come. A movement was organized, country-wide and searching, and backed by the Ottawa Government, to call for subscriptions to an extent as never before attempted. In sympathy with this effort, at a meeting held on November 30th, and addressed by Sir Herbert Ames, the objects to be realized were set before the city, in sounding terms. Afterwards Mr. Warburton, of Toronto, came and sounded the alarm and enthused the gathering held for the purpose, and it was at once decided to make such an effort as would be phenomenal in the history of the city.

Early in October of 1914 came the proposal to affiliate the local Relief Association and Special Relief Committee with the Canadian Patriotic Fund, as noted above. A Special Committee reported in November that this should be done, basing its recommendations on the view "that it would be unwise and unpatriotic to refrain from affiliation, and if not done calculated to prevent unity of effort and co-operation such as should characterize our Canadian people at the present time." This recommendation was unanimously adopted and carried out.

$10,000 Over Objective.

Without delay the campaign to strengthen the resources was prosecuted. Thoroughly organized and with an effective personnel the results were most successful. With an objective of $50,000.00, over $60,000.00 was raised, a part of which was set aside, as planned in taking the subscription, "for relief of persons in adverse circumstances on account of the war." This latter provision was most worthily made use of in lessening privation during the out-of-work season of the spring months of 1915.

By the end of December, 1914, affiliation had taken place and the details of organization perfected. As this organization was, and continued to be, the major effort of the city and county note is made of those participating in the incessant work of the following four years: President, the Mayor of the city, and Vice-President, the Warden of the county, each for the time being. William Buller was Mayor, and Mr. Middleton, Warden for the county. Daniel O'Connell, Chairman; S. R. Armstrong and F. D. Kerr, joint secretaries; F. Adams (city treasurer), with a finance committee of E. A. Peck, W. H. Dunsford, J. A. Aylmer, C. H. Pennifather, T. F. Matthews, F. H. Dobbin, J. Crane, B. F. Ackerman, F. D. Kerr and D. O'Connell. Relief Committee, H. Rush, G. A. Gillespie, Jas. Lynch, J. A. McElhenney, W. Stocker, the Rev. Jas. Rollins, Robt. Harstone, H. Stabler, Dr. Eastwood, J. J. Duffus, and D. O'Connell. Trustees, T. F. Matthews, J. A. Aylmer, and W. R. Morris as Auditor.

With few changes these remained in office and in active connection and work so long as the fund continued its mission. The committee was augmented, two years later (1916 onward), with two members of the Great War Veterans' Association, Sergt.-Major S. Whatley and Pte. T. Williams, these two organizations working helpfully together. F. H. Dobbin was appointed Executive Officer and Secretary of the Patriotic Fund Branch for the city and county and retained the duties until the fund ceased to operate. Mr. Aylmer under took the position of receiving treasurer and gave most faithful and efficient service during the operation of the fund.

The campaign of December, 1914, raised over $60,000.00, and this the county supplemented with substantial amounts to the extent of nearly $40,000.00. All these monies were needed, for the allowances list had risen to between seven and eight hundred dependents, besides children. The branch had found its place as the fifth largest in the Dominion, outside the larger cities. A campaign in 1916 realized about $60,000.00 and for the years 1917 and 1918 the funds were raised by municipal rates on the city's assessment. The county loyally contributed between $24,000 and $36,000 during the course of three years. With the return of married men from overseas the demand on the fund gradually lessened, until it was found in the spring of 1919 that no further calls for additional monies would be necessary. In the meantime the Government pension system had come into force. But until the end of the year 1923, the fund continued to contribute to many dependents, whose position in relation to the head of the family, or in the case of women, the mothers of sons who had taken service, did not call for army pensions, for several years. During the war years a list of families to the number of 1,624 were assisted.

It may be noted that early in 1915 several minor branches of the fund were established in the county, at Havelock, Norwood, etc. As the months progressed it was found advisable that these should be merged with the Peterborough City and County Branch of the General Fund, the whole city and county being served from Peterborough, thus enabling the local administration to function more readily and usefully.

Following will be found details of the amounts raised for the fund and other war activities, during the war years. The list covers all activities, and the totals fairly represent an adequate result as showing the extent to which the people contributed, once the giving and supporting spirit the population had fairly leavened the masses.

Administration Cost 2.21% Per Dollar.

From the Head Office, at Ottawa, the following is taken from the official records, at the time such were compiled, early in the year 1919: "Raised by subscription and municipal grants, in city and county and remitted, to the fund, at Ottawa, $304,998.41; expended in allowances, regular and compassionate, $297,998.41; administration expenses (five years) $6,546.86. The expense account includes payment for all services and over $900.00 for cheque stamps, over thirty-five thousand cheques being issued. The average cost per dollar distributed, is 2.21 per cent.

For three years, previous to the appointment of district pension officers and assistants by the military authorities, all investigations and reports for the Separation Allowances Branch, and the Assigned Pay Branch of the Militia Department constituted an onerous and responsible service. In the years as stated practically every investigation of pension claims, where such were necessary to be looked into, was undertaken and carried out by the Local Branch in this District. During the war years the Patriot Fund Branches, all over the Dominion were an unfailing source of information for all services and all activities.

The three days of the First Patriotic Fund campaign will long remain in the memories of those who participated in the effort. One hundred and twenty hand-picked men were organized into ten teams of canvassers. A lunch preceded each day's canvass, paid for individually. Headquarters was at the big store, at the time without a tenant, adjoining Mason's store, George St. After supper the room was a source of orderly disorder, and the final evening of the campaign saw an hilarity that passed all bounds. Success had exceeded the most sanguine expectations. The teams' captains are here named, that posterity shall read and see what manner of men participated, in tooling things, though captains and team-mates all deserve honorable mention: Capts. J. J. Turner, Walter Stocker, W. J. Oke, H. G. Walker, J. J. Duffus, W. H. Dunsford, E. A. Peck, L. J. Picard, Adjt. McElheaney (Salvation Army), G. A. Gillespie.

The City Council led off with a contribution of $10,000, Toronto Loan and Savings Co., $1,000; Quaker Oats Co., $1,000; R. M. Waddell, $2,500; W. Irwin G. W. Hatton, J. A. Aylmer, each $500. Twenty-four subscriptions of amounts from $300 to $150. And when the returns came in from the County Council and men in the district it was not a question would the objective be attained, but how much would the estimate be exceeded. The campaign for 1916 was a duplicate in all respects.

The Spiritual Significance of Armistice Day

Contributed by Clergymen in Peterborough District

(By Rev. J. T. E. Blanchard, Omemee)

To me, the most spiritual significance of Armistice Day is the two minutes' silence.

There is such a thing as populous silence, known to every lover of God's great open spaces. There is a silence vibrant with voices, full of harmonies and melodies, and speech-ful visions. The din and roar of the battle and the street must give place to the silence of meditation, prayer, communion and revelation. We need the atmosphere of silence, not of stir. The two minutes' silence is a symbol of stillness. The dawn steals on the world in silence, the dew falls in stillness, and peace comes dropping slowly. The new day for the world dawns thus and the leaders in the world's great affairs must learn God in stillness.

The great purposes of God have been revealed to men in quietness and stillness. Moses learned of God in the stillness of the Midean desert; Paul received direct revelation from God in the quietness of his Arabian retreat. We are too hurried to hear the still small voice, too restless to wait life's richest blessings.

"Drop Thy still dews of quietness,
Till all our strivings cease;
Take from our souls the strain and stress,
And let our ordered lives confess,
The beauty of thy peace."

If I had the power to cast a spell upon the world, it would be the spell of quietness. I would say, "Hush! Be still! and know that there is a God Who rules and reigns in the hearts of men and nations."

"Men of the world, 'mid the din and stir,
Roar of anvil, fret of loom;
Make for yourself a thoroughfare:
Make in your hearts a silent room."

(By Rev. Harold Wilding, B.A., Minister of the Aldervile Mission.)

Armistice Day comes this year with a new assurance that perhaps, after all, those who died in "a war to end war," may "not have died in vain." At present there is consternation in the camp of the militarists everywhere because of the ready response of the Powers of the world to the call to promise to settle differences otherwise than by war. Never were conditions so hopeful for international peace since November 11, 1918. The millenium has not yet come, but the sky is red with promise of the dawn of a new day when "they shall beat their swords into plowshares and their spears into pruning hooks."

Sir Ian Hamilton, a British General, said recently: "The hope of the future is with the enlightened men and women who believe that war should be abolished and can be abolished."

"Till the war drums throb no longer, and the battle flags are furled.
In the Parliament of Man, the Federation of the world."

—Tennyson.

(By Rev. H. Boomhour.)

The recurrence of Armistice Day recalls to us the sense of relief which the end of the war produced. The passage of time may, or may not, have lessened the vividness of our consciousness of the awful cost of war. It has certainly deepened our sense of the futility of war. This Armistice Day should therefore primarily be a day of dedication or re-dedication to the ideal of world peace.

Our devotion to this ideal should find expression in active support of every organized effort to eliminate war. We must ever realize, however, that the attitude of nations is necessarily the collective attitude of the individuals who comprise them, and that our best contribution to this cause is a life of active goodwill toward all men.

(By Rev. C. J. Beckley, United Church, Marmora.)

November 11 is essentially a day of remembrance. It recalls four years of anguish, and should remind us of the blessedness of peace. It should also commemorate the fact that in the day of testing, our people possessed those qualities which exalt a nation,—the power to sacrifice, high principles and a high type of manhood.

Sacrifice is the law of progress. To surrender life if need be, is the surest path to immortality. It is good to recall that the vast majority of those who went to France—as well as of those who gave them to their country in its need, weighed the issue and deliberately chose the path of sacrifice. You cannot make such sacrifice—you cannot possess the spirit which makes such sacrifice possible, without enriching life.

In the efforts to encourage recruiting, to strengthen the morale of the people, and to offer an apologia for Canada's part in the war, I do not recall innumerable appeals to justice, mercy and truth. It was in response to the highest appeal that our men went forth. It speaks well for our Nation.

War is a test of manhood. It is a proud fact that our men stood second to none in endurance and courage, loyalty and service. Their record is good: Let us keep it in mind.

Armistice Day reminds us that we have taken our place among the Nations. The influence we wield is neither martial nor economic, but moral. Our mission is to be exponents of peace and good will among the peoples. For the sake of those who "Sleep in Flanders' Fields," let us be true to our task.

(By Rev. Wm. T. Taylor, United Church, Apsley.)

When on November 11, 1918, the Armistice was signed and the bugles had sounded the finish to the World War, we thought we were to have peace; but alas!

It is strange, is it not that with everybody talking peace, and with all the arguments in favor of peace and with so many people trying in so many ways to bring about the blessings of peace we do not get it. When the world seeks peace in the spirit and teachings of Christ, when men the world over see in each other a brother, and the message of the angels, "Peace and Earth and good will toward men" is our message and motto, then will come universal peace, then God's will will be done here as in heaven and His Kingdom will come among men.

We all thought the Great War itself, reveling vividly its destruction and suffering, would make the world sick of war and lead to peace, but, alas, all has been unrest, and if the tendencies are not changed another and a greater and even more violent war will burst upon us.

Thinking upon this problem I must come to the conclusion that peace is not a thing which can be secured by itself alone.

We must get something bigger that includes it; something of which peace is a by-product.

The larger thing is the Christ spirit in the hearts of men. When we have learned the lesson taught by Christ, to love our enemies, then peace will reign on earth.

More than one spiritual significance of Armistice Day, accompanied as it is by a flood of memories of deeds of heroism, devotion to duty, loyalty and sacrifice in the cause of righteousness crowned with the triumph of the promise of universal peace, occurs to the devout and thinking mind. Its observance is primarily a "memorial" of the victory over evil, inspired by the sentiment voiced in the phrase, "Lest We Forget," and in this respect it bears a spiritual significance to another memorial instituted nearly two hundred times ten years ago in the words, "Do this in remembrance of Me," the memorial of the sacrifice of God Himself to secure for the world the peace which passeth all understanding. Universal peace will be accomplished only when humanity, understanding and appreciating the significance of the victory of the Cross, becomes impregnated with the spirit of the Christ—Love—the principle of the Fatherhood of God and the Brotherhood of Man.

(By Rev. C. V. McLean, M.A., B.D., St. Andrew's United Church, Peterborough)

Ten years ago the heavy artillery of the great powers ceased to thunder. It was an impressive lull after a tempest of five years' duration whose echoes had startled the entire human race. On the battle fronts blood had been shed like water; human hatred had been crowned king, and then came that memorable day when we heard that an armistice had been signed by the combatant Powers. What a sigh of relief passed round the world!

To the men and women of our generation the armistice will always be a reminder of those grim years of war, dread and destruction. The Great War will ever stand before our eyes as a glaring danger signal admonishing us of the grave danger of international hatred, especially the hatred which is permitted to become chronic. Long before the war, we were aware of jealousies among the nations, but persuaded ourselves they were only effervescent; they proved explosive. Moreover, the Great War will always be a stern condemnation of false theories of statecraft. We once spoke of the "armed peace of Europe" and the "balance of power," and while a warning voice was sometimes raised, it was fated, like Cassandra, not to be heard. Such theories are now shown to be inadequate and are discarded.

But a new generation is rapidly rising to assume power. To its members the Great War will be a story, quickly told. They will not have felt its grim realities. To them the armistice will mark the beginning of a sincere attempt at co-operation on the part of the formerly hostile Powers. Already we find a League of Nations functioning to improve public health, ameliorate industrial conditions, defend minorities against aggression as well as to substitute arbitration for arms. Only a prophet could foretell what the developments of this movement among the nations may ultimately attain to. The ancient Witangemet of men in homespuns sitting under a dispensing justice was powerless to visualize the modern Supreme Court which developed out of it. Nor can we forecast the blessings which may accrue to humanity as the result of this co-operative effort for which the war and the armistice prepared the minds of our contemporaries. May it be so!

(By Rev. G. E. Fierheller, Bethany)

The tenth anniversary of Armistice Day again brings before us the thought of sacrifice. On this day, our minds are centered upon those, who, when danger threatened, willingly offered their services in defence of country and home. They laid down their lives in a foreign land that we, as a people, might be free from the domination of a foreign power, and enjoy freedom, peace, and prosperity under the beneficient and God-fearing government of the great British Empire.

As our thoughts thus dwell upon the memory of those who fell in a righteous cause, we recall the words of our Blessed Lord. "Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends." We honor their memory, but while on this day we remember those who died on Flanders' Fields, may we ever keep fresh in our memory the greatest sacrifice of Him who suffered death on Calvary's Cross that sin might no more have dominion over us. As we look into the future, let the memory of our blessed dead be an incentive to sacrifice all in defense of the Kingdom of God and His Righteousness.

(By Rev. A. Poulter, Bethany)

Once more Armistice Day is upon us with its direct challenge to service in the interests of our fellowmen. During the darkest days of the Great War these words of David Lloyd George rang in the ears of the British people, "The test of our faith, the highest standard of our civilization, is our willingness to sacrifice for others." This great utterance constituted a direct challenge to every citizen to contribute of himself, either in body or substance, to defeat the militaristic purposes of Germany. Faced with a tremendous task the Empire responded magnificently to the challenge to "save the world." The Armistice of November 11th, 1918, was the result.

Armistice Day brings its challenge to us each year. A challenge to honor those who have paid the supreme sacrifice, and a challenge to sacrifice willingly for the safety and happiness of the human race to-day and in the future. The challenge to willing sacrifice has spiritual significance because it demands the very highest service we are capable of rendering our fellows. He who, "Came not to be ministered unto, but to minister," declared that "Whosoever will save his life shall lose it; but whosoever will lose his life shall find it." According to the Christian Standard a willingness to serve is the guarantee of true life.

"He liveth long who liveth well;
All else is being flung away;
He liveth longest who can tell
Of true things truly done each day."

"Beneath the rule of men, entirely great,
The pen is mightier than the sword."

War settles nothing. It is a trial of brute strength, in which great minds are put to base uses. Finally men must get together and exert brain-power to devise ways of peace.

An Appeal to all Returned Soldiers and all who are eligible to become members of the Canadian Legion of B. E. S. L.

We want every man on the inside!

There are comrades every day who make the supreme sacrifice after years of pain and suffering and in some cases—want.

Unity among returned men and comradeship will help us to fight and remedy some of these ills. No Government will refuse their co-operation. Comradeship finds its highest expression in helping a friend in the time of need. That is why I appeal to the comradeship within all men, and Unity means strength.

Help the other fellow! Join up now! Our dues are not large and we require your presence in the ranks of Branch 52 of the Canadian Legion. Do not hesitate; your co-operation will be of the utmost value.

J. ABRAHAM, President, Branch 52.

The Spiritual Significance of Armistice Day

In the Old Bible God is set forth in places as the Lord of Hosts, as if He delighted in war. But Jesus taught us that He is the God of Peace; Christ Himself is the Prince of Peace.

In the first chapter of Isaiah, we have a picture of the Great Assize. Man is arraigned before God. The Almighty submits His case. The people are guilty of gross ingratitude and rebellion. God reasons with men, "Come now, let us reason together." He proclaims an armistice. He invites men to lay down their arms and accept terms of peace.

In the fulness of time all of this was made known in the sweet reasonableness of Christ. He is the Head of a New World, whose goal is peace. Men are seeking teh moral equivalent of war, and they do well. Why not the great campaign for social justice and righteousness?

Peace has its heroes on the mission field and in social service, as truly as on the battlefield. Our glorious dead will not have died in vain of we heed the New Evangel which is ever the old, the call to give up self to promote the peace and well-being of others.

(By Rev. W. McCleary, Knox Presbyterian Church, Keene.)

When the word Armistice is mentioned, my mind goes back to my New Testament.

You will recall the incident of Paul and the Roman jailer. It was an Armistice, a respite for Paul, during one of those many escapades as he tours the country preaching the everlasting Gospel. They were standing talking together of Roman citizenship. Paul has just ceased telling the Centurion he was born free; the officer, astonished, replying "with a great sum obtained I this freedom."

If we are free to-day, I say "if," we must remember the price somebody paid for it. Some men fought and died for us in Flanders. We must not forget. We dare not forget. "We have received in gold, we must not repay in copper."

One hopeful sign on the horizon, has been the signing of the Kellogg treaty, a milestone on the way to peace. That pact can only become a reality through our zeal and devotion to the ideal that made the Armistice ten years ago possible.

Let us not be condemned as a nation for the sin of doing nothing. Each recurring Armistice Day ought to find us better men and women, more thankful to a God whose touch has still its ancient power.

(By Rev. A. C. Hie, United Church, Hastings).

We stand at the distance of a decade, and view the first Armistice Day, and recall with what joy we hailed its dawning. It was then that we said, "From the last destruction of battle we must now turn to the more difficult task of construction. And we shall not be content to build according to the old order, but according to a finer plan." We chose to call that finer plan, a World Democracy, as we discovered that once and forever Democracy had passed all national limitations. But with that discovery, we also made another, that if a genuine democracy was to take hold of the life of the world, the spirit and teachings of Christ must be made known and applied to all localities and departments of the world's life. Ten years of peace have clarified our discoveries and substantiated our conclusions, until we would repeat them with ten-fold emphasis, as we stand on the threshold of this Armistice Day.

A trade review published in Chicago said in its issue of January 5th, 1918: "If a World War does not result in the substitution of service for self as the basis of human relations, its supreme benefit will have been lost." And we shall hold it to be a waste, if that they gave the years they might have had for us who remember them to-day. We do not see them and we cannot talk with them, but we can and do still love them and they still love us. The love which bound us together in the far off days is not broken, but over reaches both time and space, and in our brief silence we feel they are not far off.

"Comes at times a stillness as of even,
Steeping the soul in memories of love,
As when the glow is sinking out of heaven,
As when the twilight deepens in the grave."

The voice of mothers, wives, sweethearts and children—and children that would have been. In how many Peterborough homes there is a valiant little woman still carrying on? For her the war is not over. With an ache and a longing in her heart she does alone the work he would have shared. There is many a boy and girl who has not the warm encouragement of daddy, still a memory helps and makes dreams of what might out of all the loss and suffering of which we are now reminded, there does not issue an order in which right will be set above might, duty above privilege, co-operation above rivalry, the things of the spirit above material good, service above selfishness, ministering above being ministered unto, an order in which individuals and nations will recognize the golden rule in their dealings with each other.

(By the Rev. J. Douglas Paterson, All Saints' Anglican Church, Peterboro).

"The four voices."

Once more the great anniversary comes around and this year on a Sunday. What a call it sends out to men and women to catch the spiritual significance of the day of remembrance.

The silence at 11 o'clock on the battle front ten years ago must have been impressive, and so is the brief two-minute long silence which we keep year by year. Nothing touches our souls like absolute silence, for then thoughts crowd in uninterrupted and we are in tune with the great realities.

What voices speak to us in silence?

The voice of those who died. Some in the battle lines, some in the military hospitals, some spared to come home to die. These all remind us have been.

The voice of duty still speaks. We have a heritage to be proud of and we have a duty to perform. We are not craven creatures but men and women of a glorious race. As one generation did their part in the time of war, we must do our part in days of peace. We can look behind and before, and with the awful memory of four years of war, the voice of duty tells us it will be our part to see to it that there is no more war.

Yet above all these voices there still speaks more loudly the Voice of God. He tells us that our dead are in His safe keeping. "The souls of the righteous are in the Hands of God; there shall no evil overtake them, they are in peace." The same voice points out to us the pathway of courage, of high endeavor and of sacrifice and bids us be diligent and faithful and eager on our way.

(By Rev. William Allan, St. Paul's Presbyterian Church, Peterborough).

In reply to your request for a brief message on "The Spiritual Significance of Armistice Day," I would present what I have to say in the following statements:

1. The fact that it is called "Armistice Day" reminds us that at the best it is but a truce and not a guarantee that the price paid in human life will be enough to prevent another war.

2. Until human nature, throughout the earth, is purged of all selfishness and greed, there will always be the possibility of an even greater conflict and far more costly in blood and tears.

3. There is only one thing that can bring about such a change in human nature, and that is the grace of God as manifested in the Cross of Christ. We shall never be able to end war by war. The nature of things is against such a possibility. Not until every knee shall bow and every tongue confess that Christ is Lord shall wars cease and universal peace be ushered in.

4. As we gaze upon this monument erected in our midst to the memory of the men who did their bit; and as we think of those who left us and can never return, let us look and long for the coming of the Prince of Peace and the new heavens and the new earth wherein dwelleth righteousness.

Raner, M.B.E., A.D.C., representing His Excellency the Governor-General, will deposit a wreath of poppies at the base of the cenotaph. GREAT MUSICIAN TO GIVE ADDRESS

Principal of Toronto Conservatory of Music is Coming to Peterborough.

The visit of Dr. Ernest MacMillan, F.R.C.O., to the Women's Music Club on Tuesday afternoon is an event of real importance to Peterborough, but especially is it so to the disciples and lovers of the great art of music.

Dr. MacMillan is recognized not only on this continent, but all over the world, as one of the big, outstanding musicians of the day. In addition to being the head of Toronto Conservatory of Music, which is one of the largest music institutions in the world, Dr. MacMillan is dean of the Faculty of Music in Toronto University, a fellow of the Royal College of Organists, London, England, and a doctor of music of Oxford University. Dr. MacMillan is now only thirty-four years of age.

Ernest MacMillan was a prisoner of war at Ruhleben, having already received his degree of bachelor of music from Oxford University and his F.R.C.O. degree from London. In Germany, amid the incessant din of camp, not to mention its privation, he composed the music for Swinburne's "England" for large chorus and orchestra, a massive and scholarly work, a performance of which was given by the Mendelssohn Choir, under the leadership of the late Dr. Vogt.

His gaolers allowed the manuscript to be sent to Oxford University, where its exquisite workmanship was added to the treasures of the Bodleian Library, and the degree of doctor of music conferred on the composer at the age of twenty-three.

Dr. MacMillan is one of the busiest men in Canada, as well as one of the most thorough and hard-working. Consequently, the executive of the Music Club feel it a great privilege to have him as their guest of honor, and they feel confident that no organist or teacher of music, who view their profession seriously, will fail to be present in the Conservatory Hall at three o'clock on Tuesday afternoon. Dr. MacMillan's subject is a most interesting one, "Amateur and Professional Points of View in Music." Dr. MacMillan is a most interesting and witty speaker, possessing also a gentle satire which he uses with great effect. This lecture is not for musicians alone, but for any interested in hearing this great musician.

Dear Friends:

We, your friends of the Efficiency League, at Trent River, are met here to-night to do you honor. We suggest that you let them form a link between you and us for we shall love to hear from you both, wherever you are. Signed on behalf of the Efficiency League.

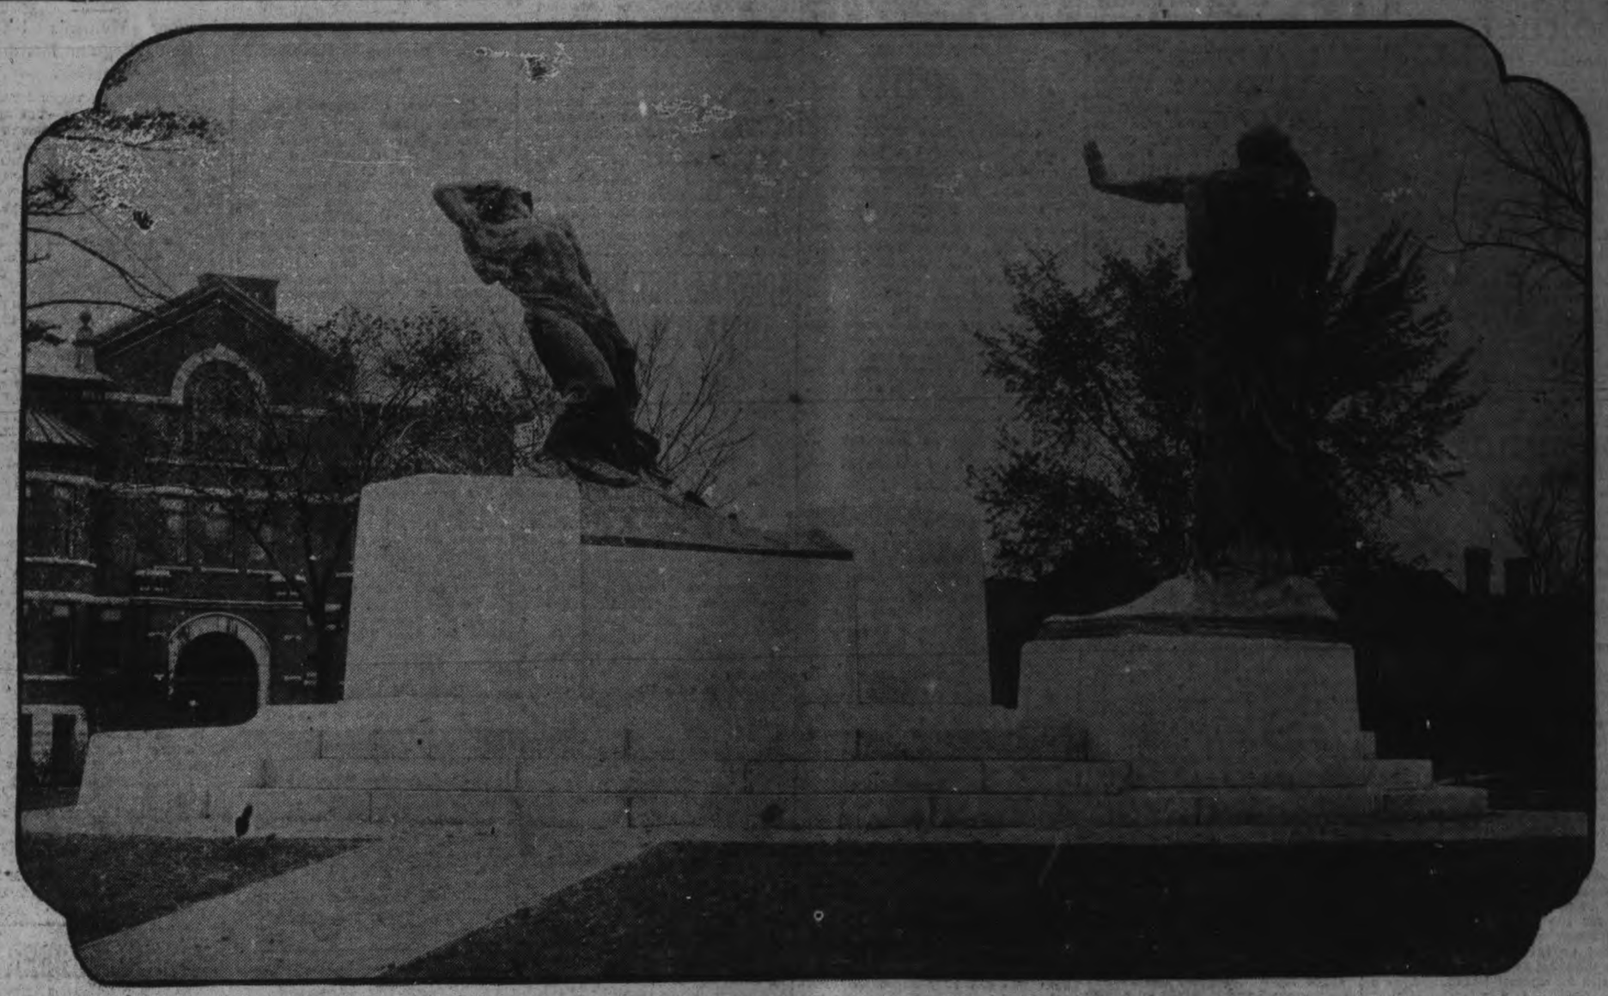
"At the Rising and at the Going Down of the Sun, We Will Remember Them"



THE WAR MEMORIAL IN HONOR AND MEMORY OF PETERBOROUGH'S ILLUSTRIOUS DEAD.

The pedestal is granite and carved on it are the inscription and the names of those of our own who gave their lives in the fray. Above are two artistic and beautiful bronze figures of heroic dimensions. The left figure represents the enemy, full of rage, hate and fury, destroying all in his onward path. In his left hand is a burning torch, but the sword has fallen from his right, for in his mad haste he suddenly sees before him the majestic figure of the knight, typical of Canadian chivalry and the valor of our own dear dead boys. There he stands calm, strong and dignified, sword in right hand, but the left raised in warning and command to come no further or take the consequences. The foe lets his sword clatter to the ground and covers his face in token of despair and the sure defeat he sees awaiting him.

O Valiant Hearts!

O Valiant Hearts who to your glory came
Through dust of conflict and through battle flame;
Tranquil you lie, your knightly virtue proved,
Your memory hallowed in the Land you loved.

Proudly you gathered, rank on rank to war,
As who had heard God's message from afar;
All you had hoped for, all you had, you gave
To save Mankind—yourselves you scorned to save.

Splendid you passed, the great surrender made
Into the light that nevermore shall fade;
Deep your contentment in that blest abode,
Who wait the last clear trumpet call of God.

Long years ago, as earth lay dark and still,
Rose a loud cry upon a lonely hill,
While in the frailty of our human clay
Christ; our Redeemer, passed the selfsame way.

Still stands His Cross from that dread hour to this,
Like some bright star above the dark abyss,
Still, through the veil, the Victor's pitying eyes
Look down to bless our lesser Calvaries.

These were His servants, in His steps they trod,
Following through death the martyred Son of God;
Victor He rose, victorious too shall rise
They who have drunk His cup of Sacrifice.

O risen Lord, O Shepherd of our Dead,
Whose Cross has brought them and whose Staff has led;
In glorious hope their proud and sorrowing Land
Commits her Children to Thy gracious hand.

Amen.

The words of the hymn above, "O Valiant Hearts," were composed by Mr. Henry Arkwright, an Englishman who had three sons killed in the Great War. The hymn holds in England a similar position in war poetry as Col. McCrae's "In Flanders' Fields" holds in Canada.

At the dedication of the Empire Memorial in Westminster Abbey a few years ago, this hymn was then sung by the large gathering of statesmen from the whole Empire as the central act of united worship in the dedication. Again, at the annual visit to the battlefield by the British Legion it has become the musical feature of the ceremonies at the Menin Gate.

They March Again With Us

Once more they come our way
And through the years how quickly we forget,
Until at last we come upon their day,
To yield again one moment of regret.

* * *

To know old memories of tent and field
As haunting ghosts of vanished autumn pass,
Where they have found their peace beneath the shield
Of God's eternal coverlet of grass.

* * *

One at a time they come,
Old mates forgotten from the sombre hunt,
Where one can hear far off the rolling drum
Of cannon thunder on the battle front;

* * *

Old mates with shining eyes and welcome hand,
Who've come again from distant fields and streams,
Where they have lingered in an alien land
As we came home and left them to their dreams.

A Scrap of Paper

A scrap of paper—"Killed in Action." So
Die all the dreams of happier days to be!
And yet, thank God! you were the first to go
When Empire called for Men to keep it free.

* * *

Thank God for that pure, manly heart and true
That kept your face forever toward the light,
And lit the only path you ever knew
And made you victor still in death's despite.

* * *

Not all our sighs, not all our loving tears
Can call you back; but you whose clear young eyes
Looked on the promise of the coming years,
You never grudged the final sacrifice.

* * *

A scrap of paper? Nay, a sacred scroll,
A great and glorious treaty, signed and sealed
In your heart's blood, wherein our Empire's soul
For those who shall come after stands revealed.

The Story of Peterborough's War Memorial

With the completion of Peterborough's War Memorial, a brief review of the various stages through which the planning and erection of this visible token of the community's grateful memory of the men of the City and County who gave their lives in the World War have been carried through to a successful termination, is both timely and necessary.

At the close of the war, it was recognized that Peterborough City and County owed it to themselves and to the men who so gallantly responded to the call of King and Country to see to it that the bravery and self-sacrifice of our citizen-soldiers should be fittingly commemorated.

The recruiting record of the city and surrounding country had been so splendid, the forces raised here had been so numerous in proportion to our population, the response of the community to every war-time appeal had been so complete and generous, that there was a general feeling that in honoring and keeping verdant the memory of the hundreds of Peterborough City and County citizens who lie in military cemeteries in France or Belgium, or who made the supreme sacrifice in some other sphere of the Empire's war effort, the memorial to be erected here should be in keeping with the Community's war record.

It was imperative that this permanent tangible tribute to the memory of our war dead should be impressive, beautiful, and distinctive, not hastily conceived or hurriedly executed, but a memorial that would be in every way worthy of the noble purpose for which it was designed.

To achieve such an ideal has naturally taken time; the path has not been easy, the desire to obtain the best has been responsible for delays, disappointing perhaps, but unavoidable—but at last the obstacles have been removed and the task of discharging this community duty is being completed.

The First Meeting.

It was as long ago as December 11th, 1920, that the first meeting of the Citizens' Memorial Committee was held, and Mayor McIntyre was unavoidably absent and Ald. G. N. Gordon presided over this meeting. His Honor, Judge Huycke, was unanimously elected Chairman, and Mrs. H. R. H. Kenner was appointed Secretary.

The next stage was the calling of a public meeting of citizens to discuss the memorial scheme, which was held in the G.W.V.A. Hall on December 17th, 1920.

Two important decisions were arrived at after the progress already made had been reported.

In the first place, a design, submitted by Canada's most eminent sculptor, Walter S. Allward, and agreed upon by the Memorial Committee, was approved, and, secondly, the meeting passed a resolution pledging the citizens to assist in the erection of the Memorial.

Organization was completed early in the following year, so a meeting of the Memorial Committee was held on January 15, 1921, resulting in the election of G. H. Thompson as Treasurer, and the appointment of W. G. Morrow, George A. Macdonald, and the late H. Rush, with power to add to their numbers as a Finance Committee.

At the same time, Miss L. Davidson, Mrs. R. Denne, and Mrs. R. Hartstone were named as a committee to procure the names to be placed on the Memorial.

On May 19th of that year the Finance Committee added to its numbers and chose Roland Denne as Chairman.

Another most important step was taken on July 2nd, 1921, when His Honor Judge Huycke, R. Denne, Geo. A. Macdonald, W. G. Morrow, and G. H. Thompson were appointed as a committee to interview Mr. Allward and enter into contract with the sculptor, which was done.

Unexpected Delays.

And then came a development that, while it confirmed the judgment of the committee, and proved that their choice of a sculptor guaranteed Peterborough such a Memorial as was desired, added materially to the difficulties before the organization.

Mr. Allward was signally honored by being chosen by the Canadian Government as the sculptor to execute the Vimy Ridge Memorial.

That contract materially affected the local situation.

The immense amount of personal work demanded of Mr. Allward in the execution of this great work in France naturally interfered with his carrying out of his Peterborough contract.

For a considerable time there was grave fears that the famous sculptor would be compelled to abandon the Peterborough Memorial and it was only because the local committee refused to admit defeat that such a setback did not eventuate.

There was extensive correspondence with Mr. Allward, and with members of the Commission in Ottawa in charge of the Vimy Ridge Memorial. Interviews were had with General Mewburn and with Mr. P. C. Larkin, Canadian High Commissioner, on the occasion of the latter's visit to Canada in 1925, and, finally, as the result of all these efforts, Mr. Allward was persuaded to secure the assistance of an eminent English sculptor, Mr. Bayes, to assist in carrying out the original design and completing the contract.

This arrangement was accepted as a satisfactory solution of a difficult problem at a meeting of the Memorial Committee held on April 20th, 1926, and with this major obstacle out of the way and the sculptor's share of the task taken care of the Peterborough Committee breathed more freely.

Last year, on October 10th, the tender of Creber Brothers for the granite work of the Memorial was accepted.

In the meanwhile, the named committee, with the assistance of F. H. Dobbin, the Peterborough 'Examiner,' and officers of the Canadian Legion had been busy with the onerous problem of securing a complete list of the war dead of the city and county. Not only was it found difficult to obtain an accurate list, but the question of the best arrangement of the names presented another problem, which, after consulting with Mr. Allward and the Director of Records at Ottawa, was settled by a decision to engrave the names alphabetically without distinction as to rank, but with war decorations added.

The Site Selected.

Mr. Walter S. Allward had, on his first visit to the city, visited various possible sites for the Memorial, but finally had approved of "Central Park," as it was then called, not only because of its central position, where it could be seen daily by citizens and visitors alike, but also by reason of the sentiment attached to the park at the point where many of our soldiers started on the great adventure and to which the returning brave came back.

Excavation began and the cement work was started the following week.

On May 21st, 1928, the Committee, together with Hugh S. Allward and a representative of Creber Bros., definitely located the intersection of the two main walks in Confederation Square as the site selected by Mr. Allward and the City Council at their next meeting officially approved of the choice.

On May 31, 1928, the Memorial Committee appointed a programme committee, with Judge Huycke as chairman, to arrange the programme in connection with the unveiling ceremonies, and at the same meeting His Worship Mayor Denne asked to be relieved of the Chairmanship of the Finance Committee, Geo. A. Macdonald being chosen as his successor.

These, then, have been the various outstanding features of the effort to provide a distinctive and suitable War Memorial for Peterborough.

ALDERVILLE WAR MEMORIAL TO BE SCENE OF SERVICE

Armistice Day Gives District an Opportunity to Pay Tribute

WORK COMPLETED

Artistice Fence Adds to Appearance of Impressive Monument

ROSENEATH, Nov. 9.—Construction work of the new fence around the Indian War Memorial Monument at Alderville is now completed. It shows a vast improvement to the corner of the Indian village.

The magnificent War Memorial was unveiled on September 25th, 1927, and owing to lack of funds the committee was unable to proceed with any further work until this summer, when a meeting of the committee was called, and it was decided to erect the fence and have it done for Armistice Day. All hands co-operated and gratuitously worked hard to finish their task. The fence consists of nine large cement pillars; each pillar is 3 feet square, with 4 feet underground, and is 4 feet high, with a projecting cap on top of each pillar. Between them is hanging a heavy fancy iron chain that looks very artistic.

The gate is situated a little to the south-west of the monument. It is something most uncommon. It is in two sections, and closes with a heavy iron bar.

On the right gate post is a plate, a composition of material that looks like lead. It is neatly inscribed with the names of those who gave their time and labor and the responsibilities for the erection of the monument. It is inscribed as follows:

Colonel Nell F. M. McNaughtan, C.V.O.

First sod turned August 21, 1927, by Mrs. N. Marsden.

Address by Colonel F. D. Boggs, K.C.

Unveiled September 25, 1927, by Clarence E. McKeel.

Address by Judge E. C. S. Huycke and others.

Committee: W. R. Coyle, chairman and Indian agent; Chief N. Marsden, Rev. H. Wilding, Sec.-Treas.; Mrs. N. Marsden, F. Simpson, Mrs. F. Simpson, ex-Chief T. Marsden.

Designed and erected voluntarily by A. H. McKeel and Son, Campbellford.

The site is on a small hill, situated at the intersection of five corners, where the monument can be seen for a long distance. It is 50 feet high, with additional 7 feet underground, and is 11 feet square at the base. The imposing top projects high into the air, and is fastened to the body of the monument with a heavy steel rod.

Alderville Indian Reserve is the first War Memorial erected by a band of Indians in Canada, therefore much credit and honor is due to those who took part in erecting this magnificent structure, to those whose love is still sincere to the heroes who sacrificed their lives, to give us freedom and save our country in the Great War.

It is hoped that the whole community show their appreciation and gratitude by attending the service on Sunday afternoon at 2.30.

This service is intended to bring civil, religious and educational life into harmony with the sentiment of sacrifice, which Armistice Day insures, and to facilitate the holding of memorial ceremonies and exercises to perpetuate the memory of Canada's sacrifice in the cause of world peace.

Rev. Mr. Battersby of Hastings and Rev. F. W. Howard of Warkworth will be among the speakers at the service on Sunday afternoon.

CANADIAN PRODUCTS USED BY EXPLORERS

Scientific Parties Are Equipped With Canadian National Carbon Company Products.

An example of the use of Canadian products by the Canadian Government in important scientific and exploration work comes with a report of the departure from Ottawa of the Canadian Arctic Expedition, organized by the Northwest and Yukon Branch of the Canadian Department of the Interior.

The expedition was under the direction of Major L. T. Burwash, well-known Canadian Governmental explorer, who has spent much time in the far North. Press reports this summer indicated that Major Burwash was off on one of his solitary jaunts, but the general Canadian Arctic Expedition, according to information from Toronto, left that city in three parties.

All three parties were equipped with Eveready radio "B" batteries on the sets supplied for the expedition by the Department of Marine and Fisheries. Word has reached headquarters of the Canadian National Carbon Company that all branches of this Department are using Canadian National Carbon Company products.

Reports this summer on Major Burwash's activities indicated he was engaged in exploration of unusual scientific interest which promises to yield also an abundance of romance. He planned a jaunt of 5,000 miles by railroad, boat and dog team, landing him at the magnetic pole, the trip being planned partly as a hunt for relics of the Arctic expedition of Sir John Franklin which ended in disaster in 1845.

Rumor sifting back occasionally from the frozen North has told that one of Franklin's two ships, the Erepus and the Terror, may be sighted in the Arctic Ocean near King William Land or Boothia Peninsula. If the ship can be found the Canadian Government will be enriched by the recovery of old relics and records believed to be aboard her.

Major Burwash also planned to investigate conditions among the Eskimos north of Mackenzie and Keewatin and the proposed tractor-train route from Wagner Bay on the West Coast of Hudson Bay to Cockburn Bay south of King William Land.

One of the primary purposes for the expedition assigned by press reports is to determine the westward shift of the magnetic pole so that mariners' charts may be corrected.

In the fighting of the last hundred days of the war the Canadian Corps suffered 46,000 casualties, including 6,800 killed and died of wounds.

The whole world knows Aspirin as an effective antidote for pain. But it's just as important to know that there is only one genuine Aspirin. The name Bayer is on every tablet, and on the box. If the name Bayer appears, it's genuine; and if it doesn't, it is not! Headaches are dispelled by Aspirin. So are colds, and the pain that goes with them; even neuralgia, neuritis, and rheumatism promptly relieved. Get Aspirin—at any drugstore—with proven directions.

Physicians prescribe Aspirin; it does NOT affect the heart

Aspirin is the trade mark (registered in Canada) indicating Bayer Manufacture. While it is well known that Aspirin means Bayer manufacture, to assure the public against imitations, the Tablets will be stamped with their "Bayer Cross" trademark.

taken away had sickened him to the very soul.

Doris Gardener's disgust and Sadie's mirth had been bad enough to bear, but Mrs. Ardron's timid appeal to him had been worse than anything.

"It may be the smart thing to do, Giles—but, really, after tonight I can't ask her here again, can I? She's broken two of my best champagne glasses—the ones your dear father gave me, or was it Rodney's father? I forget, but anyway they're broken?"

Giles had lain awake during the few remaining hours of the night, blaming himself only, seeking in vain for some way by which things could be put right.

It was terrible to see the change which a few months had made in Julie—horrible to think of her as she had been when they first met, so bright and happy, and so easily pleased with the small things of life, and now to realize that she was the same girl who last night had laughed and behaved like a mad woman.

He had meant to appeal to her to forgive him, if not for his sake then for her own, and to see if they could not find some meeting ground for a possible friendship, or at any rate for peace, but the first sight of her had aroused him to passionate anger and an almost brutal desire to hurt her afresh, because by this wilful injuring of herself she was also tormenting him beyond endurance.

The defiance of her eyes and the rouge on her face and lips had seemed a deliberate insult. His great love for her was almost hatred; he hardly knew whether he wanted to fall at her feet and beg of her not to hurt them both so cruelly or to answer her every sneer with words more cruel and bitter.

Chittenham was not a conceited man, but by his own love for Julie he measured her love for him, an unhappy love that would give neither of them rest or peace, and could not bring happiness; and realizing this he suddenly broke out passionately:

"Oh, my dear, it's not worthy of you, or of our love! Must you make it harder for us both than it already is? Do you think it's nothing to me to see you as you were last night—to—"

"You!"

There was a world of scorn and contempt in Julie's voice, and her eyes blazed.

"You must be mad. Do you think I consider you at all? Do you imagine I ever give you a thought except to hate you more and more because you once cheated me out of a few kisses and made me behave like a fool? Do you think I ever seriously cared? I did not, I tell you. Are you so conceited that you haven't realized yet that it was all just pretence?" She laughed hysterically. "Keep your romantic rubbish for women who appreciate it, my dear man. I don't know why you came here at all; it was impertinence. I don't even like you as an ordinary acquaintance. After today I shall tell my maid that I am not at home if you call."

"Do you think that will make any difference? Do you think it would make any difference if we didn't meet for twenty years? You know it would not. I have only got to hear your voice, see your eyes—"

The tender sincerity of his voice almost broke her down. She swayed a little and caught at a chair-back, but when Chittenham would have gone to her she waved him furiously away.

"Don't touch me. Don't come near me."

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, But Do Not Compel

SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 11, 1928.

(Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate.)

This is a day of planetary vagaries, according to astrology, which finds the morning more fortunate than the later hours.

The clergy should benefit from this rule of the stars which is supposed to incline persons toward the churches.

Preachers should find their hearers responsive and for this reason it is an auspicious time to make appeals for charities.

There is a sign of promise for the building of cathedrals. According to the seers cities of both coasts will rear edifices of supreme beauty.

Religious prejudice and intolerance should subside rapidly under this planetary government which presages national well-being and great prosperity.

There is a forbidding sign today for those who journey by water.

Many distinguished foreign visitors are expected in the coming weeks, astrologers announce, and there will be much entertaining in New York as well as Washington.

Accidents are presaged on land and in the air, before the holiday time, that will be so sensational new laws for safeguarding life will be passed.

Again a London sage predicts that thousands of soldiers will be in the field in the Near East and China.

Unusually heavy rains may be expected in certain parts of the United States and France may be too damp for the fullest enjoyment of American tourists.

Again the seers prophesy that robberies will be numerous from this time on, for greed will affect many persons who avoid work.

Russia now continues under a direction of the stars which is read as most favorable.

Persons whose birthdate it is have the augury of a busy year in which bankers play an important part.

Children born on this day probably will be exceedingly self reliant and subject to fixed purposes that cannot be changed. These subjects of Scorpio often are proud and reserved, but able to make friends and to hold them.

MONDAY, NOVEMBER 12, 1928.

Although adverse aspects are active today, according to astrology, a benefic rule dominates.

This is a day for pushing all one's important affairs, a time to consult brokers and bankers.

Merchants and manufacturers again are subject to a direction of the stars which promises great profits. New millionaires are assured.

A partial eclipse of the Sun today falls with the planet Saturn angular and in power. This occultation is read as unfortunate for women.

Divorce and breach of promise cases are likely to increase in number and scandals may multiply.

The eclipse is supposed to affect the Russian government, bringing changes beneficial to the people and the country.

The eclipse of the Moon later in the month is believed to foreshadow wars in Europe and Asia, much bloodshed being indicated.

The evening of this day is fairly favorable to women, especially to social affairs.

Again earthquakes are prognosticated for certain parts of the country and regions outside the usual area of seismic shocks will be affected.

Women are warned that they will be subject to many forms of nervous troubles. They should avoid too severe diet and too little sleep.

Persons whose birthdate it is may reach a crisis in their lives within the year. They should be exceedingly careful in making important decisions.

Children born on this day are much under the influence of Mars and boys may be interested in military affairs. Many women reformers belong to this sign. They are extremists, able to accomplish big things.

TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 13, 1928.

Although this is not an important day in planetary government, benefic aspects dominate, according to astrology.

The early morning is favorable to transactions involving lands and leases. Real estate speculation is well directed.

The seers announce that the radio, already responsible for new fields of business activity and the inspiration for new inventions is to bring about changes not even glimpsed at this time.

Occultists believe that the veil between the material and the spiritual world will be parted and that amazing knowledge soon will be gained.

This is held as a lucky rule for aviation and should benefit the whole rather than a part of aerial navigation.

As the year draws to a close the passing of many old persons will be noticeable for they will be making way for the new type of super men and women, the seers declare.

Diplomacy will now be tested in all human relations, whether in the home or in national affairs, it is foretold.

It is well to preserve always the judicial attitude of mind, for the stars continue to encourage emotional points of view on religion and politics.

For a year astrologers have foretold for Great Britain great anxieties in December, international difficulties and danger from the position of Mars, ruler of war.

From this date on unusual storms may be expected and a blizzard is forecast for the holiday season, or just before it.

Added causes for Thanksgiving in the United States will be discerned as the new year dawns, it is prophesied, for this nation is especially to be blessed.

Again warning is given regarding the prevalence of selfishness and egotism which are supposed to be common faults among persons of the younger generation.

With the passing of the last of the great men and women of pre-war times, recognition will come to many young geniuses.

Persons whose birthdate it is may seem to meet limitations in the coming year, but they should be able to make them prove in the end advantageous.

Children born on this day probably will be restless and difficult to manage, because they are different from the usual types. These subjects of Scorpio are likely to be original in their points of view and able to develop strong individuality.

LYRICS OF LIFE

THE DEBT

This is their debt to us,
Not gifts, not gold,
That nations need discuss
In accents cold:
This is the debt—a cross
On yonder plain,
A lonely mother's loss,
A father's pain.
This is their debt—a life,
Yes, even one,
Given them in the strife
By someone's son.
Though all their gold is given,
Their payments met,
In the accounts of heaven
This is their debt.

This is our debt to them—
The grave he shares.
And who would dare condemn
Such gifts as theirs?
Their son was just as brave,
Their son as dear.
Remember in this grave
Two slumber here.
Two crosses on the hill,
Not only one,
Two mothers weeping still,
Each for a son,
Brother who died for brother,
Our debt today,
The debt we owe each other
We cannot pay.

UNCLE WIGGILY

By HOWARD R. GARIS

To-day's Bedtime Story

UNCLE WIGGILY AND THE WOLF'S EYES

"You are up early this morning," said Nurse Jane Fuzzy Wuzzy to Uncle Wiggily as the rabbit gentleman came sliding down the stair railing of his hollow stump bungalow.

"Yes," agreed Mr. Longears. "I am up extra early, as I have much to do. Is breakfast ready?"

"It will be ready in just a minute," squeaked the muskrat lady housekeeper. "But why the rush?"

"I must hurry over to the Bungleump and get Dazie Wogglejig to take her to the Hollow Stump School, where she is going to dance," said Mr. Longears. "Dazie is a cute little dancer and yesterday, when she was with her sister Mazie, I saw her dance. So did the Lady Mouse Teacher, and at once she invited Dazie to dance in school to amuse the pupils. So I'm going, now, to get Dazie."

"Oh, how wonderful!" said Miss Fuzzy Wuzzy. "I wish I were going to school again. Children nowadays seem to have many more good times in school than I ever had when I was a little rat. But there! Your breakfast is ready. Eat it and then go get Dazie."

So Uncle Wiggily began to nibble the hot carrot pancakes which Nurse Jane set before him and soon he was hopping across the fields to the Bungleump where Dazie lived with the other Wogglejigs and Boppy and Um, the cute little man and woman who looked after the queer wooden children who were always getting mixed up as to their legs, heads and bodies.

"Oh, hello, Unkie Wig!" called Dazie as soon as she saw the rabbit gentleman in front of the Bungleump, which was partly a bungalow and partly a stump. "I'm so glad you came!" said Dazie.

"Are you ready?" asked the rabbit gentleman.

"Almost," answered Dazie. "I've got one of Mazie's legs by mistake, but as soon as I change it for one of my own I'll be with you."

Pretty soon Dazie came skipping out of the Bungleump. She found her brother Wumple had her tail, so she had to get it from him. For you must know that the Wogglejigs were made of wooden pieces, with a wooden ball for a head and wooden pegs for legs, tails and necks. They came apart and went together again and in this way legs, heads, necks, tails and bodies were always getting mixed.

"Oh, I'm so glad you came early, before any of the children," said Miss Mouse when Uncle Wiggily and Dazie reached the school. "Do you want to practise a bit, my dear, before dancing before the pupils? They will soon be here and you shall dance in the morning exercises."

"Yes, I might practice a bit," said Dazie, so she danced around the teacher's platform after Uncle Wiggily had moved back the desk and chair. Dazie made sure that she had her own head, neck, legs and tail and then sat down to wait for the animal children to come.

Soon the Hollow Stump School was filled and Miss Mouse, after holding up her paw for silence, squeaked out:

"You are to have some amusement, my dears, this morning, before we say our lessons. Little Dazie Wogglejig is to do a funny dance for us. I will play the piano and Uncle Wiggily will whistle."

"Hurray!" barked Jackie Bow Wow, he was so excited.

"You must not bark without raising your paw," said Miss Mouse, but she forgave Jackie most politely and then began to play some music. Uncle Wiggily puckered up his piuk nose and began to whistle and Dazie, stepping to the middle of the platform, began to dance.

Up and down danced the little Wogglejig girl, her wooden pins of legs making a tattoo, like drumming, on the floor of the platform. To and fro, this way and that, danced Dazie.

First the Lady Mouse played slow music and Uncle Wiggily whistled the same way. And then the music went faster. Dazie danced faster, too, skipping about and jiggling her legs, head and tail in such funny ways that the animal children laughed and so did Miss Mouse.

But all of a sudden, while Uncle Wiggily was whistling, he looked toward a window and, peering in, he saw some big eyes. They were the eyes of that Bad Chap, Mr. Wolf.

"Oh, dear me!" thought the bunny rabbit gentleman. "The Wolf has come to see, with his own eyes, how Dazie dances. Maybe that Wolf will come in here and try to nibble me. What shall I do? I don't want to spoil Dazie's dancing, but I don't want to be nibbled by a Wolf."

Well, don't worry, my dears. The Wolf didn't get Uncle Wiggily. But as this story is ended, I shall have to tell you soon what happened.

BROKEN

CHAPTER XXIX.

Outside the door Julie paused for a moment and made a desperate effort to pull her shaken nerves together.

Although she had once casually invited Chittenham to call at the flat she had never imagined he would do so, and she knew that she was totally unprepared to meet him on such intimate ground.

Why had he come? What did he want?

Julie tried to laugh at her own panic. "You've only got to take half-a-dozen steps and you'll find out, my girl," she admonished herself, but she still stood for a moment like a frightened child, staring across at the closed sitting-room door, before she could force her limbs to move.

"I may be dancing with somebody else,
but I love you—

When I see you dancing with somebody else, I feel so blue.

When I hear a song that we danced to before—"

Julie felt as if she were a dual personality as she sauntered across the narrow passage humming the air of a popular tune with an elaborate effort at complete indifference.

"It's me making that horrible noise, trying to sing," she told herself, and felt an insane desire to laugh. "And, anyway, it's quite true. I may be dancing all the rest of my life with somebody else, but I love him and always shall."

She opened the sitting-room door and walked in, the cigarette stuck jauntily between her lips.

Chittenham was standing by the mantelshelf looking at an impressionist portrait of Bim Lennox, but he turned at once when the door opened.

"Hallo!" Julie greeted him with a casual nod. "What in the world brings you here at such an early hour? I've only just crawled out of bed myself. How do you like that picture of Bim? Ripping, don't you think?"

She spoke rather loudly and defiantly, and she deliberately left the door open behind her.

Chittenham stepped past her and closed it; then he came back to where she stood.

"This has got to stop, Julie," he said, without preamble.

Julie opened her eyes wide.

"Stop?" she echoed blankly. "What has got to stop? My getting up so late, do you mean? My dear man—"

He interrupted ruthlessly.

"The whole of this miserable, damnable play-acting has got to stop. You're ruining yourself and me, body and soul. Do you think I don't understand? Do you think I'm such a fool that you can take me in for one minute by all this—this childishness?"

Before she could prevent him or move a step from him he caught her by the shoulders, roughly turning her round to the morning sunlight which streamed through the window. "Look at the stuff on your face! You'd have scorned to use the muck two months ago. Look at the life you're leading! When you left my mother's house last night—or rather early this morning—you were horribly drunk."

Julie laughed in his face.

"Delightfully drunk!" she mocked him coolly. "But go on, go on! Don't let me spoil this soul-saving lecture. You've mistaken your vocation. You ought to have been a Low Church parson instead of what you are—a coward and a cheat. I can just picture you in a clerical collar, with your hair nicely oiled and parted—having tea with all the old tabbies in the congregation."

"Julie!"

She wrenched herself free of him.

"I object to being called by my Christian name by you. I hate the name, anyway. You can keep it for my estimable cousin—she'll appreciate your cave-man attentions, and I don't; she—"

"She's a braver woman than you are," Giles said savagely.

Julie shrugged her shoulders.

"Has she made a conquest of you already? Well, good luck to her, she's welcome. And if you've only come here to behave like a bully you'd better go—I've a lunch appointment—"

"With Schofield?"

"That's my affair."

"If he was a decent fellow he'd stop your nonsense. He'd never have allowed you to do what you did last night!"

"You flatter your sex. All the men in the world could not stop me from doing exactly as I please."

They faced one another like deadly enemies, white and shaken.

It was astonishing how suddenly the storm had arisen. Chittenham had come to the flat with some forlorn idea of trying to make amends. The scene at his mother's house last night when Julie had been almost forcible

THE INITIATION IN THE CAVE

"Well, Hawkins, what are we going to do?" asked our captain, Dick Ferris as we boys sat around our long pine table in our little clubhouse and held our meeting. We had been talking about taking two new boys into our club. They had belonged to the Pelham gang, across the river, because they had just moved there, but they had had a fight with the Pelhams on Halloween, out of which we helped them.

"I don't know what to do," I said, "and I don't think you ought to ask me. Let all the boys vote on it, as we always do. Then, if they want to take in these two new members, it's all right with me."

"But they are bound to bring trouble around here," spoke up Johnny McLarren, "and we've had enough trouble already. Every time we take in any new members, we've always got to take their fights too. I don't see why we can't find some new members who haven't any fights."

"What's one more fight mean to us?" spoke up Jerry Moore—good old rough-and-tumble Jerry—he likes to fight as well as eat. "We like to mix it up once in a while, don't we? Anyway, if the fight is with the Pelham fellows, I'll say come on and welcome. I'd like to punch that Brigden's nose once more anyhow—just once more." And he smacked his fist into his open hand.

"This fight," spoke up Shadow Loomis, who had about the coolest head of us all, "will not be with the Pelhams alone. There is a red-headed fellow—"

"Oh!" I broke in. "Don't remind me of him, Shadow! He's the guy who knocked me out with a stone on the head on Halloween night. I don't want to get hit like that again—ever!"

"But you want a chance to pay him back, don't you?" asked Jerry Moore, with a growl.

"I don't know," I said, slowly; "seems to me that the Pelham boys won't do anything much to us. If we treat them right, Jerry, we will have them for our friends, in the end. But if we mix into this business, it's likely we will lose them as friends, and make an enemy out of that red head. And I read in a book once—wait, I copied that in the back of my writing book, and I'll read it to you."

I turned the pages of the book of our minutes that lay before me on the table. And inside the back cover was this, which I read out loud:

"He who has a thousand friends,
Has not a friend to spare;
And he who has one enemy
Will meet him everywhere."

Nobody said a word for a few minutes after I finished reading that and I looked around at the silent faces that were looking at me. It was sinking in and it wasn't doing any harm, either. But what I think sunk in deeper was about meeting that enemy everywhere. They remembered the red head—his size and strength and his very frightful appearance—and that was enough to make them stop to think for a few minutes, anyway. Johnny McLarren broke the silence, finally.

"I think that is sensible talk," he said to me, nodding. "We ought to remember that, always."

"Boloney!" said Jerry Moore, with some disgust which was plainly evident on his face, and he brushed it all aside with a wave of his hand. "Poetry stuff! Doggone Hawkins, if you can't dig up more poetry than I ever see any fellow do in my life. Poetry stuff is all right for those who like to read it, but it never helped anybody win a fight yet. When I read that kind o' stuff, it sounds like a lot of baby stuff to me—"

"You don't understand it," spoke up Johnny McLarren; "you never will understand poetry, Jerry, there's no use wasting your time—"

"No use wasting time arguing about it, either," broke in our captain, as he slammed the table with his wooden hammer. "We didn't hold this meeting to find out if Jerry likes poetry or not—we got business to talk over, so you guys quit talking, now, and let Hawkins say something."

"Well" I said, after they were all quiet, and waiting to hear what I had to say, "I think Arthur and Walter are two fine boys. They would be fair and square in everything they do, and I, for one, would be proud to say they belonged to our club. They're in trouble with the Pelhams, and this new red-headed boy is with them. But we have never come out worst yet with the Pelhams, so I'm not afraid—no, not even of that red head. All I want to say is this, anyone who is afraid of the Pelhams or the red head, hold up your hand."

Quickly every boy's eyes wandered around the group to see which would raise his hand. But no hands came up. Dick called to Perry Stokes to pass around the slips of paper for each boy to vote. Silently, each one wrote on his slip of paper, folded it up and dropped it into the hat that Perry passed around. Dick counted the votes. All voted "Yes" to take the two brothers into our club—except one. And while this was supposed to be a blind ballot—that is, no boy had to sign his name to his vote, so that no one would know whose vote it was, I recognized the handwriting of this two-letter word. That "no" had been written by Johnny McLarren.

Dick announced the result. Perry Stokes was told to go to the two brothers and tell them that they had been admitted to our club. As the meeting broke up I went back to my writing room and put my book and pen away. All the other boys had already gone out when I came to the door, but Johnny McLarren waited on the porch for me.

"Well," he said, as I locked up the clubhouse, "what do you think will happen now?"

I laughed. "I don't know, Johnny," I told him; "I don't like to worry about things till they really happen. I think this club of ours can be glad about it now, anyway. We have two new boys—fine fellows at that, Johnny—and they make us two new friends."

"And one enemy," said Johnny, nodding. "The red head."

"Yeah," I said as we slowly walked down the river path; "but what can you expect? You don't get a rose without a thorn. With the two new friends, we ought to be able to beat one enemy—"

"Remember that poetry you read us," said Johnny, doggedly; "seems like you don't go by the poetry you read. Remember what it said—one enemy—you'll meet him everywhere."

I laughed again. "That's the catch in it, I guess, Johnny," I told him; "meet the enemy rhymes with beat the enemy—and I expect to do that."

Johnny shook his head. "You can't do that," he said, "he's too tough. What rhymes with red?"

"Dead," I said, with a grin; "make a friend out of him, Johnny—that's the thing to do—and the minute he's a friend, the enemy in him is dead. Can't you see that?"

Johnny said he saw it, all right, but he still believed the red head would be too much for us.

And it wasn't long until I believed so myself. If I had known at the start that this red-headed boy was the leader of a gang quite as tough as himself, I might have thrown all poetry to the winds myself, and changed my tune. But I will tell you about that in its proper place—just now I want to write down about our initiation of the two new members. This was all planned by our captain and Shadow Loomis and Jerry Moore. They said as how we had been a club for a long time now, and it was time to initiate any new member in the right way. I had nothing to say about it, so they went ahead and made the plans. Then, on Thursday afternoon, I was on my way over to St. Johns, which was across the river, on an errand for Doc Waters, to take medicine to a farm house where an old man was sick. I had gone alone in my canoe, and had left it hidden a good distance down from Pelham, where I figured none of the Pelham fellows would be likely to run into me. But just as I came within a hundred feet of the river, I saw a shadow fall across my path, and looking up I saw that I was face to face with—my enemy—the red head. Quick as a flash came the thought into my mind—"You will meet him everywhere."

Then he spoke, and for a moment I thought he was fooling. It was the first time I had ever heard him speak, and it sounded funny—he lisped.

"Juth a minute," he says, holding up his hand, "ith your name Hawkinth?"

"Yes," I said, "what you goin' do about it?"

"You thee thith?" he asked, and held his fist under my nose.

"Yes, it needs washing," I said.

"Even if it doth," he says, "ith enough to thlap you thilly. An' I'm tellin' you for your own good, now, don't you meddle in my bithneth."

"What is your business?" I asked.

"You know what I mean," he growled; "you buthted up the fight on Halloween when you had no bithneth in it, and if you ever do anything like that again, yo'll geth thith."

He shook his fist again under my nose, and I was getting mad. I sized him up, now, and I think maybe I might have tried it out with him again, but as I doubled my fist, I saw the bushes move, and at least a dozen more boys came and stood in a circle around us. A grin spread over the red-headed leader's ugly face as he lisped at me:

"Be thenthible. You can't lick uth. We ith too many for your whole club. What we want you to promith uth ith that you won't let the Willom fellath—"

"Who do you mean?" I broke in. I had not heard the last name of the two brothers, so I was not aware that he meant them, but he informed me quickly.

"Their nameth Arthur and Walter. An' they belonged to uth firth, now they want to thneak away and join you fellath. Well, they ain't goin' to git away wid it. You fellath better not thep into my path—"

"If you will step out of my path, I'll be on my way," I broke in, as I gazed around at his confederates, who stared at me without a friendly smile on any of their hard faces. But my words angered the red head, and he snapped out a word to his friends and they closed in on me. I crouched and lowered my head, for I feared they were going to do me up good. But the next minute the red head had changed his mind. He called off his pals, and stepped up close to me.

"We will leave you off thith time," he lisped, "if you will give uth your word."

"My word," I said. "Listen, big boy, I'm not afraid of your threats. Our club will do as it pleases. If you must fight, all right, we'll fight it out, fair and square, but I will promise you nothing."

"Oh," he said, "I don't mean that—what I mean ith thith, that if you ever catch one of my fellath like we caught you now, you will let him go without a lickin', juth ath we will let you go free, now."

"You have my word on that," I said, shortly.

And he stepped out of my way, and waved the other boys aside. And I walked down to the river and got into my canoe. And as I paddled back to our side, I didn't know whether to laugh at him or to be afraid of him. By the time I reached shore, I felt sure that we were going to see some more exciting times on this old river bank—and somehow or other I felt that there was a mystery hidden in it somewhere.

I did not tell the boys about my meeting with the red-headed fellow and his gang. But one thing I told them to do, and that was to keep quiet about the plans for initiating Arthur and Walter.

Friday afternoon we held our meeting early, and our captain announced that we were all to be present at the initiation of the two new members the next day, it being Saturday we would have no school. The initiation was to be held in Cliff Cave, and our captain and Jerry and Shadow went down to the cave to finish the plans for it. They all promised to be down at the clubhouse that night after supper, as Lew Hunter wanted to have a singing practice. I was left alone as usual, and went back to my writing room where I wrote down all that happened up to that time.

I was the first one down that night, and as I opened up and put the key back into my pocket, my eye caught a sheet of paper on the table, with my ink bottle on top of it. I knew I had left my ink bottle on my desk a couple of hours ago, and so I knew somebody had moved it. I went over and picked up the sheet of paper, and my eyes narrowed as I read the two lines:

"And he who has one enemy
Will meet him everywhere."

"By Jinks!" I said to myself, "The red head must have been here!" I stood holding the paper and looked around. I saw my writing book lying open on my desk. I walked over to it. Yes, whoever had been there, had read what I had written—and knew that our initiation was to be in Cliff Cave. He meant to let me know that he would be there.

I crumpled up the paper and threw it in the waste basket under my desk, and the other boys came within a little while, and the singing practice started. But all through the singing my thoughts seemed to hear another voice chiming in—a voice that lisped, and carried with it a tantalizing reminder that I could never escape him, wherever I might go.

And then came Saturday. It was a gloomy day, at the outset, and I just felt as though that was a bad omen. It made me nervous and jumpy. The other boys, however, were feeling fine and they made many jokes together as we took a round-about way to Cliff Cave, entering at the big hole beside the tree, in the rear of the cliffs. We entered one by one, and each boy had a flashlight, lighting up the path that sloped down the cavern. At a given spot we halted, and Arthur and Walter were blindfolded.

"Now," sang out our captain in a loud, sing-song voice, "before you can become member of our club, you must prove how brave you are, and follow the sound of my voice. Come on, and watch your step."

Funny thing to tell a fellow whose eyes are blindfolded. But Arthur and Walter thought it was great fun—they laughed as they followed the sound of the voice that echoed back and forth in the cave. I expected something to happen to Arthur and Walter—and it did. They kept on walking, while all of the others stepped aside—and I heard a cry as Arthur fell first, and then from Walter—they had made one step too many, and there was no floor, and they thought they were gone, I guess but it was only a little more than a three-foot step-off, and our captain had a lot of pillows for them to fall on. There was a lot of laughing, then, from every one, as Johnny and Dick and Jerry hurried to help them up, and again Dick's sing-song voice began to lead them on to new surprises—and we passed out of the sloping portion into a big, wide flat surface of stone, against which our flashlights made a criss-cross of sparkling gems.

And suddenly I knew we were not alone in that cave. I saw two or three dark shapes gliding past the farther reach of our lights. And I shouted to Dick to turn back. But it was too late. Before any of them could understand why I shouted, the dark shapes silently slipped out of their dark hiding places and surrounded us. Flaring torches seemed to spring up out of nothingness, and there was a general panic as we all felt ourselves grabbed from behind—I turned quickly to see the ugly face of the red head leering at me in the flickering light of the torch—

"I told you," he whispered in my ear as he bent me back with his great weight. But my blood was boiling, now, and I knew that there was one of two things going to happen—either I was going to get another punch or I was going to save myself from it. I thought fast—he had my right arm tight against my body, but before he could close with his other arm I backed and let him have it with my left—all the strength I had was in that blow, and it hurt him, too—he gave one loud yell that was heard above the general din, and let go of me. That was my chance I was looking for, and I was under and away from him before he could swing back. Down the stony floor I clattered as fast as I could go—making for the front entrance, and there, in the daylight, I found that some one else had taken a hand in it—the Sheriff and his men were coming in. They passed me without a second look—and as I turned around to fly out of the place I bumped into Doc Waters, who was just turning into the Cave entrance.

"Well, well!" he exclaimed, as I nearly knocked the wind out of him. "What's this all about? Hawkins, I hope you fellows haven't got into any more trouble on this river bank?"

"No," I said, with a laugh, "it's no trouble, Doc. I'm laughing, ain't I?"

"I'm glad to see you doing so," he said: "I thought I'd have the Sheriff here on time, but I just missed by a few minutes, it seems. I hope we can catch that red-headed boy—"

"Why?" I broke in. "What do you know about that red head—"

"I know he's breaking up the peace and quiet of our river bank," said Doc; "but the Sheriff will take care of him, I guess. If he doesn't, you'll meet him everywhere, Hawkins."

He looked down and smiled at me, and then I knew. "You read my book of the minutes of our meetings," I said, pointing my finger at him. "You put that note on our table in the clubhouse—"

"Yes, I just wanted to keep you out of trouble," said Doc, with a grin; "you know what old Judge Granbery will say, if he finds out about this new fight you've got on your hands—"

At that moment there came an interruption. Arthur and Walter and another boy, a stranger, were in the hands of the Sheriff and his men.

"Caught three of 'em, Doc," said the Sheriff. But I walked up and took Arthur and Walter.

"No," I said, "you only caught one, Sheriff. These two boys belong to our club. We were just initiating them when this red gang butted in on us—"

"Well, I'll be hornswoggled!" exclaimed the Sheriff. "Well, this other one, here, is a stranger around here. I'll take him up to Judge Granbery and see what we ought to do with him. And you other young fellas—you get up to that clubhouse of yours and stay there, and stop this ihitiatin' business right away."

Which we did.

A Letter From The 'Seckatary'

Dear Club Members:

You certainly are the finest bunch of club members in the world, and I don't mean maybe. It was great to see how many letters came in during the past week, and how hard you are all working to win. That's the finest thing anybody can have coming to him—the acknowledgment that you are trying. If you never would try you never would win, and it's the same way all through life. It's the fellow who does not get discouraged when he fails but gets up again, and starts over. That fellow's bound to win in the long run. Just keep that little motto in your mind—"TRY AGAIN," and you will find it one of the most faithful helpers you have ever known.

Now, for this week's contest we are going to have lots of laughter and fun. The title of it must be "MY FUNNIEST EXPERIENCE," and you may tell of any funny happening or saying, or you may compose a little verse about it. See which one can make all of us laugh the longest. I know you are away ahead of me, and already are thinking of that funny experience you had once upon a time. All right—let's go. Send in yours today.

I'm afraid I'm a little behind with my correspondence, but here's where I catch up.

"Dear Seck:
I am sending in some names and addresses, I hope to draw a picture of "Armistice Day," for which I hope to get a book.
Yours fair and square,
Douglas Brooks."

Port Hope, Ont.
Thanks for the new members, Douglas. Write soon again.

"Dear Seck:
I received my card and pin. Mother thinks I must always help the motto. Is it all right to write a story and jokes? I will close and go to school now.
Yours fair and square,
Florence Farrance."

210 Lake street,
Peterborough, Ontario.
I'm glad your mother likes the club and wishes you to observe the motto, Florence. Yes, I am glad to receive stories and jokes, so send them in.

"Dear Seck:
I am typing this letter because I am in a terrible hurry. I would like to know if any members have to write in a letter to get their badge and certificate. If not do you send them to me to distribute? I will be sending in some new members soon.
Yours fair and square,
Marlow Banks."

314 Maitland Ave.,
Peterborough, Ontario.
No, Marlow, you do not have to write. The new memberships have been held up because of the great number, but we'll soon catch up.

"Dear Seck:
I have read your stories three times over and feel I can hardly wait for Saturday night to come. I have found this week's password to be "Made in Canada." I have been working on the contest, getting names and found it to be very interesting.
Yours fair and square,
Edith Burnham."

269 McDonnel street,
Peterborough, Ontario.
I'm glad you like the stories so well, Edith, and I hope you send me one of your own soon.

"Dear Seck:
I have got my pin and certificate. I have got a few members. I have a team of colts and have a nice bunch of tame rabbits. I have got a set of bobs, but I have got to fix them for winter. I have a colt I call it Happy.
Yours fair and square,
Ralph Wellman."

Bonarlaw.
What a happy boy you must be, Ralph, with all your pets. Write a longer story about them for the other members.

"Dear Seck:
I am sending two more cents for a badge as I lost mine. I did draw a picture for October but I did not get it posted. Will try and get some members. I like the stories and wish I could get the book.
Yours fair and square,
Claude Shewen."

R.R. No. 9,
Peterborough, Ont.
The only way to win is by keeping on trying, Claude. Your pin has been sent to you.

"Dear Seck:
Please find on a page enclosed six new members for our club. Hoping they will maintain the motto "fair and square," as all boys and girls should do so. If it be possible might I have the picture of the gang, and obliged.
Yours fair and square,

PAVING IS COMPLETED

Extension of Work Necessary On Account of Wet Roadbed.

STOP SIGNS ERECTED.

MILLBROOK, Nov. 10 (Examiner Correspondence).—The two miles of paving in the village, which includes the whole length of King street, Tupper street north to the railway crossing, and Regent street to its southern limit, have been completed, after about four months of work, and certainly add very considerably to the appearance of the municipality.

The extension of the time for the work became necessary because of the "springy" condition of the roadbed in many places, necessitating putting in a cement base at these points, which added considerably to the original estimate as to cost, but which mean permanency so far as the paving is concerned. The laying of the main storm drain, and the amount of ditch draining that had to be done, also delayed the completion of the paving program by some weeks.

Signs Erected

The "stop" signs on all the side streets are now in place, as are also the danger signs warning of "soft shoulders." Another season grass seeds will be sown along both sides of the paved roadbed, and will add greatly to the appearance of the streets as a result.

The decision to pave all the way up Allen's Hill has given general satisfaction, the Counties' Council completing the section to the top of the hill beyond the municipal limits; for this no broken stone was used, but an Amesite base only, with the usual three coats of surfacing, and if this proves satisfactory there is a possibility that, within the next year or two, the road out to the Peterborough-Port Hope highway will be "paved" in the same manner.

No plans have yet been announced as to what may be done this fall regarding a formal opening of the new pavement.

Masquerade Social

The masquerade social evening held in the Parish Hall of St. Thomas' Church, under the auspices of the A.Y.P.A., proved a most enjoyable event, well attended, and with an atmosphere of "fun and frolic" prevailing throughout.

Quite a number responded to the invitation to come in costume, the latter being in keeping with the Hallowe'en season, and the grand parade, while the judging was done, was one of the outstanding features of the gathering.

Following this, games and contests gave everyone a chance to participate in the most enjoyable manner, and the service of a substantial lunch brought a very delightful evening to a close.

The prize winners included: Best fancy costume, Miss Lyla Whyte; best gentlemen's fancy costume, Cameron Vance; highest number of points in the contests, Misses Margaret Russell and Kathrine Donnelly.

Among those from here who have gone north for the deer hunting are: Messrs. V. C. Lambert, Lloyd Byam, and W. Whyte, who are in Muskoka district; R. Stone, J. W. Hutchison, W. Smithson and J. Clayton, who are "trying their luck" in the region north of Bobcaygeon.

Mr. and Mrs. Courtney Graham of Nestleton, who are on their honeymoon, were week-end guests of his uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Byam. Mr. Graham's mother is Mr. Byam's sister.

Miss Audrey Winslow, who has been visiting friends in the vicinity of Toronto, has returned home.

Among those from Millbrook who motored to Peterborough and attended several of the meetings in connection with United Church Week there are: Rev. W. W. and Mrs. Jones; Mr. W. G. and Miss Estelle Hetherington, the latter remaining with her cousin, Miss Might, for the week; Mrs. A. J. Henderson; Mr. and Mrs. J. H. George, Miss Jean Burnham, Mr. and Mrs. Weston Fallis.

Rev. Canon and Mrs. Allen were visitors to Toronto this week.

Members of the local Rebekah Lodge who motored to Peterborough and attended the special gathering of Golden Link Rebekah Lodge on Tuesday evening, were Mr. and Mrs. P. I. Bentley, Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Armstrong, Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Garside, Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Fallis.

Mr. and Mrs. T. H Bradley were guests of Mr and Mrs. Butcher, Peterborough, last week.

Messrs. George and William Needler motored from Toronto and spent a few days with their uncle and aunt, Mr. A. A. and Miss Etta Needler, this week.

Campbellford

(Examiner Staff Correspondent.)

CAMPBELLFORD, November 10.—Mr. Wilbert Kingston, Victoria College, Toronto, is spending the holiday week-end with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Kingston.

Mr. Ward Baker, Toronto Medical College, is at home with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. T. S. Baker, Front Street.

William Blue, Booth Street, has stepped into the limelight by winning the second prize for the best letter on the "Steel Guitar" in a contest sponsored by the New York Academy of Music. The contest was open to hundreds of students and ex-students of the institution. The cash value of the prize was not great, as nearly as could be learned from Mr. Blue but the advertisement which will result from it will be of decided value to him..

Christ Church choir entertained in the Parish Hall, Rear Street, last night a number of their friends, and an enjoyable social evening was spent. The male quartette, Messrs. Richardson, Bygott, Henson, and Hasell, sang two numbers, both of which were received with much applause. John Storie also proved a popular entertainer. Dancing was the main attraction of the evening for the younger people, the music by Leonard and Frederick.

More reading matter in a week than any other Canadian farm paper in a month—the Family Herald and Weekly Star, Montreal. Only a dollar a year, or three years for $2, now making wonderful improvements.

Shows Style

Now that so many girls are allowing their hair to grow again, this style of "bob" is to be seen, in increasing numbers, on Fifth Avenue daily! The lovely New York girl, illustrating the new style, is Myrtle Miller, of 325 West 20th Street.

She says: "I am certainly delighted that my hair has gotten so much fluffier and more vigorous. And I am not troubled with dandruff any more. At the time I started letting my hair grow, I began caring for it, the way which is all the rage among News York girls, now; and I attribute its improvement to this method. All I do is put a little Danderine on my brush each time I dress my hair. It makes my hair easy to arrange and holds it in place. It soothes my scalp and keeps it and my hair so clean, I don't need to shampoo more than twice a month, now. All my friends admire the way Danderine makes my hair look so bright and sparkling."

Danderine does more to bring out the natural color, the gleam and lustre of your hair, than shampoos or brilliantine. It removes all dust, grime and oily film from the hair—tones and refreshes the scalp, gets rid of dandruff. All drug stores have the big 35c bottle. A delicately fragranced necessity for the well-groomed girl!

In Friendship's circle bright,
Where nothing stains the pleasure sweet,

MILLBROOK

An original demonstration, and one that is suggested as a good idea for other Institutes to copy, was put on some months ago by the junior members of an organization in western Ontario, and was under the heading: "Correct Table Setting and Serving."

The table was set for six people, "Mrs. Hostess" taking her place at the head; on her right was placed "Mrs. Well Dressed," and "Mrs. Ill-at-Ease"; to her left were "Mrs. Good Manners" and "Mrs. Hopelessly Ignorant," while at the foot of the table was "Mrs. Bad Manners"; two of the girls were maids, and did the serving.

After the hostess had greeted her guests, and all had been seated at the table, the meal proceeded, each one acting out the character which her name implied. Needless to say the meal was a very merry one; two demonstrators, thoroughly versed in table etiquette, corrected each mistake as it was made, and so the afternoon was profitable as well as entertaining.

Guessing contests, when each member pays five cents for a guess, have been carried out successfully by some Institutes, with fair additions to their funds; beans in a jar, seeds in a pumpkin, buttons in a glass container, were some of the means used for this purpose. Demonstrations of waxing paper flowers, or coloring the seed pods of weeds and wild flowers, have also been used, with "scissor painting," that is, pasting gay bits of paper, cut from the colored pages in magazines, on empty olive bottles, or other containers which are attractive in shape in which come so many household commodities these days; these ideas fill out the time happily and interestingly after the business session at some of the regular meetings during the year, and are profitable as well.

"What I appreciate most as a member of the Women's Institute" is suggested as an appropriate and helpful topic for response by each member when the roll is called; and "What I would like to see done by our Institute," has also been used, with helpful activities following as a practical result.

WARSAW

Warsaw Institute has received a letter from Apsley stating that several women there wish to form an Institute. They wished to know if they could organize themselves, or if it would be necessary to have some Institute worker come and organize.

For the benefit of any others who may be in the same position, and there are several places where there should be branches, we report that it is quite possible to organize.

If any gathering of women wish to they may be called together, or meet any way they choose. Someone, at least, should have gotten, and studied the hand-book, which gives full directions. They may attain one by writing to Mr. George Putnam, Supt. Women's Institutes, Agricultural Department, Parliament Buildings, Toronto. It is as well also, to write to some Institute worker they know, or to the District President of Peterborough County, Mrs. J. A. Sexsmith, Havelock, or District Secretary, Mrs. Rothwell, Public Library, Norwood. Of course it is better, it gives a better start, if some one accustomed to Institute work can be present.

At your meeting whoever is doing most to forward the movement may state why the ladies are called together, and ask to have a chairman and secretary appointed.

Then decide, by vote, that you will organize and by what name your branch will be known. Having this definite aim, proceed to elect president, vice-president, secretary-treasurer, or, if you wish, secretary and treasurer, directors, two at least and auditors. Instructions as to voting are clearly given in the hand-book. When the duly elected officers are in their places, plans for work may be discussed, when and where regular meetings shall be held; an organist may be appointed, and perhaps a program committee. In any case arrange for some subject at the next meeting. A large number to begin is not necessary. Members are good, but spirit is better. Report that meeting, if in Peterborough County, to Mrs. Rothwell, if outside Peterborough, to the District secretary, or if in doubt, to Mr. Putnam.

The fixed annual fees are 25c. The regular meetings are free to all women and girls over fifteen years. There are conventions in the fall which may be attended by any member, but only the appointed delegate may vote.

Some time during the early summer the Department sends delegates, experienced Institute workers, to each branch, or where convenient, group of branches.

By studying the hand-book, regulations for grants will be found.

Mrs. Thos. Cooper, member of the Confederation board has received a proof copy of the convention to be held in Toronto, Nov. 27-28 and 29. She says it is exceptionally good. Those attending the convention will have an opportunity to attend the Royal Winter Fair.

CAVAN.

At the Women's Institute convention held in Emo, Mrs. D. E. Moriarity, secretary-treasurer of the Rainey River district, gave a report of the activities of the institutes of that western corner of Ontario.

We must remember that this is one of the districts in which local branches often have as members all the women of the community, and that many of them live in scattered settlements under pioneer conditions. It is inspiring to find them doing such valiant work for the good of home and country, and having such a good neighborly sort of time in the doing. First, the report tells us that 130 women are members of the Women's Institute branches in Rainy River district, and that they raised $1,393.45 during the year, of which they paid out $1,159.44. There are five branches. Eighty-four miles from its nearest institute neighbor is Atikokan, a branch of ten members. But what good times those ten women manage to create for their district, what with card parties, dances, and a sports day on July 1. But they do not stop with the neighborly good times. They send flowers to the sick and help the school in many ways; they keep Christmas as a time of loving kindness and good cheer; they make their cemetery a place of beauty and they find many kindly things to do for the people of the district.

Big Fork is a lively branch on the extreme western edge of the district. There they have 16 members, and during the year had entertained fourteen guests, which seems somehow typical of the spirit of a new country, where those latch-strings are always out and hospitality is the very breath of life to the people. They had a program for the year, which brought timely topics for discussion each month. Neighborliness was one of the subjects and to it each woman brought her idea of true neighboring.

There was also a Baby Day and a Grandmother's Day and Educational Day, with special celebrations of Canada's Confederation Jubilee, of Thanksgiving and Christmas. They had dances and parties and showers for their brides as part of the social life of the community. They also secured the travelling library for the district and this has been a real boon to the people.

Crozier, with seventeen members, reported a year of splendid meetings, some of the subjects discussed being New Year resolutions, the child and the chores, Canada's Jubilee, and grandmothers. One of their neighborly good deeds was to send a doctor to care for a family where sickness had disorganized ordinary family life. School fairs and Christmas trees for the three schools in their district were partially financed from the Women's Institute purse, which was in turn replenished by the profits of a home cooking sale held in Fort Frances.

Fort Frances has 68 members and is very active and thriving. One of the good ideas reported from Fort Frances is that of welcoming the teachers from public and separate schools at the beginning of each term. The opportunity for teachers and mothers to become better acquainted under such happy auspices means much to the community.

Christmas is the busy time of their year. In relief work they co-operate with the town council, and other organizations and thus avoid overlapping. Each year they present a gold medal to the pupil taking highest marks on the entrance examinations held in Fort Frances, and they also donate $25 annually to the Navy League of Canada.

McIrvine is just about a mile and a half from Frot Frances. Here they have 19 members, and the big event of the year was the ten-day course in nursing put on by Miss Graydon. They assist the Boy Scouts and Girl Guides and are specially interested in the Children's Aid.

The round of Women's Institute conventions is still going on.

This district is looking forward to their convention to be held in Toronto in November.

At every convention the same line of activities is reported in different phases to suit the different communities, all striving to work for home and country, aiming to make Canada a better country, because the Women's Institute is in all parts of it; pioneer districts and older settle communities.

In the newer districts the Women's Institute seems to be a veritable God-send to the women who must necessarily lead lonely lives.

Aside from the good for schools, &c., accomplished by them, it fills a void in their own lives. Those monthly meetings where they meet, discuss their problems, and enjoy a social time over a cup of tea and lunch served, must mean a very great deal to every woman. No wonder the circle is ever widening, and it will continue to do so until practically every woman in this fair Canada, particularly in rural parts, will be a member of the Women's Institute.

MADOC BRANCH

Activities for the Year.

The year 1927-8 has been a red letter one for Madoc Women's Institute. Reviewing the work accomplished it ready like a fairy tale, but a fairy tale come true, for we have been permitted to see the long delayed plans of years brought to a successful completion.

For years at our District Annuals a quiet laugh has gone round when Madoc Branch reported "such-and-such" a balance in our Memorial Fund but we were up against many difficulties. Our first money came from the Christmas Bazaar held in 1918. We had been using this means for raising money for comforts for "our boys," but when Armistice Day was declared this was not needed for that purpose, so five hundred dollars clear remained. Slowly another two hundred was placed with it, and by the business-like foresight of our president (then, as now, Mrs. R. M. Tunelty) was placed in Canadian bonds, for the times were hard and it was useless to canvas just then for funds for a memorial.

Committees were formed two years later only to meet another seemingly insuperable difficulty—no suitable place for a monument, for monument it was voted to be.

Finally, a good park, the Thompson Memorial Park, was donated to the village, and permission was obtained that the War Memorial might be erected there.

Then, early this summer the activity began. Funds must be canvassed for. The Institute donated twelve hundred dollars, and with workman-like zeal, voluntary canvassers have covered the territory—Madoc and vicinity. A chosen committee of business men have assisted with their counsel and business zeal and the plans were discussed and advice given, until finally, the monument was ordered.

Several of these men have given freely of their time and money, as well as timely advice to make this undertaking a success, and now plans are almost completed for a military ceremony and official unveiling of a Three Thousand Dollar Monument to be placed on the Thompson Memorial Park during November.

This alone gives us great cause for thankfulness, but the other work of the Institute has been carried on without a break. Our Institute women are the best ever, and when appointed on committees, work conscientiously and well.

A Program Committee drafted the year's programmes, which are faithfully carried out. These name the hostess for each month, the Entertainment Committee and speaker for the day. The Music Committee plan for special music and good community singing. The programmes are planned to provide social intercourse and to give each Standing Committee a fair share of the time for their work.

The Health Committee secured a doctor to give an address on "Home Nursing of the Sick" and he gave us also many practical suggestions for simple home remedies. A School Nurse gave a helpful talk on "Child Welfare." Blue Books were distributed and the "Canadian Mother's Book sent to all mothers in the district.

Our Relief Committee kept before us the needs of the Outpost Hospitals. We placed at her disposal Five Dollars for immediate needs, and more to be added when necessary. Donations from members were secured for flannellette and having obtained for us good Red Cross patterns for a baby's layette, we held a sewing party to make layettes for the Outpost hospitals of Bancroft and Coe Hill. Just now twelve or more sets of clothes are being made after a "cutting-out bee" under the direction of the Chairman of Relief and the Nurse.

We have a Flower Committee—we don't call it a "sick" committee, whose duties are to provide flowers or fruit for sick members or shut-ins, and the little new-comer and its mother are greeted with a pretty blooming house plant to brighten the sick room.

The Legislation Committee provided for a specially instructive address on "Laws Regarding Women and Children" and also on "Why we should Make a Will." We had also at another meeting an excellent paper on "Parliamentary Proceedure."

The duties of our Immigration Committee have not been heavy, but strangers have been welcomed, and helped to become associated with church, Sunday school and Institute.

In Home Economics, recipes have been exchanged and a Round Table Conference held on "House Cleaning and Home Decoration.

Our Historical Research Committee hope to have more to report for another year. At a Committee meeting a discussion was held as to "first beginnings" in Madoc and a questionaire was prepared, hoping to use it at a social gathering, but time did not permit. We expect to use it, and gain much important early history during this year.

We have done almost nothing along the line of Canadian Industries, but hope to place something for the coming winter probably regarding the tale industry.

In Agriculture many of our women are interested in poultry and flowers, some few in small-fruit growing, and a few in bee-keeping, and bulletins are obtained.

We assist our Agricultural Fair by giving special prizes, by furnishing committees who receive, place and take charge of all women's exhibits. These committees also oversee the removal of these exhibits, and also give valuable suggestions regarding any necessary or advisable changes in this part of the prize list.

We also contributed at the request of our Agricultural Representative toward the expenses at the C.N.E. of the leading girls in the Domestic Science Judging Contest.

The Education Committee secured a Travel Talk on Florida and Washington from two members who had just returned from Southern trips.

A Roll Call on "Canadian Authors" reminded us of how few of them we know.

One of the teachers on our High School staff was asked to give us a paper on "Canadian Men of Note" which was full of interest and most instructive.

A member gave a paper on "Canadian Women of Note and their Works," which all enjoyed.

As for community activities, whatever is going on you will find an Institute woman there, often many of them. We assist the Agricultural Society with their social evening by supplying hostesses, lunch, chaperons and committees, this free for the funds go to the Agricultural Society.

We also put on social evenings occasionally. Our Valentine Social Reunion is an annual affair and husbands, children and friends are all invited. A good Institute programme is provided with extra good music, readings, etc., then games, contests, refreshments, etc., are provided, and usually a short time spent in dancing.

This is not a money-making affair, but a get-together evening, and is held at one of the more commodious homes and everyone votes it "the" most enjoyable evening of the winter.

We follow the Hand Book as closely as possible, sing the Institute Ode at every meeting and close with the National Anthem. Our social half hour once a month is always enjoyed and is a task for no one, as the hostess furnishes tea, cream and sugar and four or six members are named on the program to assist and provide cake and sandwiches.

We try to respond, as far as funds permit, to every worthy call that comes, and ever keep in mind that our motto is "For Home and Country."

Departmental Correspondence is promptly brought before the Institute meetings and all reports are sent in promptly.

We make a point of trying to have an extra large attendance with music and a well-planned program for the Department speaker in June. We have had a most successful Millinery class of 26 last spring, and gathered a class of young girls for the coaching for the Domestic Science Judging class. This was emergency work as we only knew about 36 hours ahead that we were to have a class, but 22 attended and benefitted by the work given. We hope to send some to the Judging Class next year.

Our younger girls assist us gladly with vocal and instrumental music and an occasional reading. Nothing has been said about our Cemetery committees, of which we have two. One of rural members for a rural Cemetery and one for the village cemetery. These committees keep their funds separate, using donations received for their respective cemeteries. The leaves are raked up, trees trimmed, leaves burned, fences kept in order and an effort made to keep these last resting places clean, neat and beautiful.

Our membership last year was 70. At times it has been larger when cooking classes, or dressmaking classes were on, but we hope to report that number at least this year. The Federation fees are paid each year, delegates are sent to the District Annual and one or more to the Provincial or Area Convention.

And so the work goes on. As soon as the War Memorial is complete, we plan to beautify the Park, plant shrubs and flowers, and go on with the work of the various committees, carrying on our work "for Home and Country."

SPRIGHTLY FROCK

A cheery little frock is made of bright red taffeta, with a sprig of gold flowers in it. It has somewhat tailored lines, with a pert circular flare on the left side of its skirt, and a kerchief knotted on the opposite shoulder.

Can you use the enclosed for your Armistice number?

I trust you get enough material sent in to fill four pages instead of the two you promised.

And yours was a perfectly splendid letter on Armistice, mysterious '?' I thoroughly enjoyed your poems, too, and have used two or three. What did you think of our Armistice Number?

"Dear Marion:

I like your page and your appeal for letters was real nice. I've tried to write you altho' I'm not very good at it, but put it just as I felt or as near as I could. I've been 5 years in Canada and like it well enough to want to stay.

Trusting you are getting all the help you really need and that you won't feel like a bit of chewed string after reading them all. I remain

Yours, etc.,

E. B."

Thanks a lot, E. B. Indeed, I enjoyed too much reading the letters to be tired, and I'm sure others, too, liked them.

"Dear Marion:

I wrote before asking you to repeat the formula you gave in your column sometime ago (Sept. 22, I believe), for a lotion to be used on finger nails which were growing out brittle and ridged. Perhaps you may have complied with my request and I failed to notice it. Hope you will kindly give it again."

This was printed in answer to your last letter on October 27 in my Mail column. I'll look it up and repeat it for the third time—but PLEASE watch for it!

"Dear Marion:

In these times of high meat prices the following recipe for preserving meat may be welcomed by both city and country women.

Slice pork and fry as for the table (in the oven on bake pans is best and quicker), then pack in a crock and pour the dripping or lard while warm over them so as to cover thoroughly. Put in a cool place and it will keep fresh for months. Heat in a moderate oven when needed. It is said that cooked hams, roast beef, cooked steak, etc., may be kept in the same way.

Otonabee."

Thanks for the idea, 'Otonabee.' I know many neighbors will be interested in it. Send some more hints soon.

"Dear Marion:

After reading a very interesting letter in your page Saturday evening, I felt so sorry for the poor dear lady who was misjudged as I thought, because she hung her weekly washing in the cellar that I felt I had to write something to uphold her.

So here you are! You, dear Marion, agreed with Adastia in her summing up of that neighbor that she was class-conscious and all that rot, and that this was the reason for hanging the clothes in the cellar, and the reason for a few other peculiarities as well.

Now don't you think we are all too prone at times to judge the other fellow or in other words the person who lives next door? Unfortunately we are not all like St. Paul, able to be all things to all men. We have not all been brought up in the same way, or have laid the same stress on the same things. I for one have waited two years for a clothes line in my garden in God's good out of doors; it has not materialized yet. Foolish, you say, to wait so long. Perhaps. The good man of the house has a certain plan in his head for that clothes line. But by his good nature in doing other things for his household, he had not yet had time to construct it. No other type he thinks would fill the bill as well. I agree. So why spoil his interest by not hopefully waiting, and drying the clothes in the cellar, which is a fine cellar for that very thing anyway! The family has not suffered in the meantime, as the home itself is a sunshiny place; and think of the clothes lines I will have in the end!

But I did not realize that this patient waiting of mine might be worrying my neighbors. I am sorry. They have such lovely washings out on their lines, regularly as clock work, every Monday morning, that for these two years they have had nothing but my constant admiration.

Then, about the friendliness of neighbors. My early training in this line was amiss I am afraid. I was brought up in a big city, one of a big family and our whole training was 'keep to your own yard and don't bother the neighbors.' "Live and let live" was the motto. I imagine those poor dears with a family of a baker's dozen living next door, if my mother had had time to be friendly or had allowed those thirteen to follow the same spirit, how would you yourself have liked to have lived next door? Might you not have wished you had a cellar yourself to dry your nice white clothes in? After living beside each other for fifteen years one of those neighbors was heard to say, "That family is one of the best neighbors we ever had. In all these years those children have never bothered us at all." Wasn't that mother showing an interest in her neighbors in the kindest way possible? Yet if she met them on the street she would hardly have known them, and might easily have passed them without a friendly smile or word.

Training like this in your youth may lead to misjudgment in matters of recognition of neighbors and friendly greetings, but not to think from indifference or snobbishness or a desire to hurt, but an unconscious air of going about your own business.

It is sad we do not always remember to do and say the kindest thing in the kindest way. But to return to our Lady of the Clothes Line, who hangs her washing in the cellar, perhaps she once lived in the Old Land in a district where, when renting a Villa or Lodge, one of the conditions was that no clothes should be hung in the garden, and this has become a habit with her. With our Canadian open back yards can you honestly say that a line of clothes, however white and radiant those clothes may be, adds to the beauty of the surroundings? Here is where we could use the ingenuity of my good man in planning a line and screening it as far as possible to give the clothes their needed amount of sun and air, and yet not flaunt them as flags of freedom before the artistic eye of the whole neighborhood.

A Lady of the Clothes Line."

No, no, 'Lady' I do not admire a string of fluttering clothes; I think, with the gentleman who lectured here at Chautauqua a couple of years ago, that the clothes line should be camouflaged by a tasteful display of ramblers. You will recall that this argument arose over women who do not hang out the washing BECAUSE THEY ARE ASHAMED TO BE SEEN DOING IT. You, apparently, do not belong in this class, so why worry?

I agreed with Adastia insofar as she condemned such women. I agree with you in other matters—for instance, I have the cutest little "roll-up" clothes line on an upstairs landing. When not needed it is not seen in its little metal box, but when a few flimsies must be dried on a damp day, one pulls the string, hooks it over a nail—and lo! a clothesline.

Let the neighbors kick about THAT if they wish!

It was not the fact of clothes being not hung out that I objected to, but the mental attitude some women have toward hanging them out.

NEIGHBORLY HELPS

This column is used by Examiner neighbors to help out others who have requested recipes or advice. You may use it freely by addressing Marion.

"Dear Marion:

Your column is quite interesting and compares very favorably with others I have read on that line. One of your correspondents asks for a pastry recipe—this is the one I have had the best success with. Take ¾ cup lard, ¾ cup boiling water. Put in bowl and cut with knife till lard is soft. Add gradually about 2 cups of pastry flour sifted with 1 teaspoons of salt and 1-8 teaspoon of baking powder. Mix with knife till just stiff enough to roll. Put on floured board and roll away from you with the rolling pin. Dot with a few pieces of butter, roll up and then roll from the end. Repeat once more. This pastry can be used at once or put away in a cool place till needed. Handle as little as possible.

Hoping this will be as successful with your enquirer as I have found it. I remain,

Yours sincerely,

Yea."

A Few Household Hints.

For improving the flavor of beef or mutton take one teaspoon of salt to two of dry mustard, mix well and rub into the meat. If possible a few days before cooking, but at least a few hours before.

When steaming an apple pudding, if a piece of lemon or peel is put into the water under the steamer, it will give the pudding a very nice flavor.

Use push tacks for keeping a mat in place on a hardwood floor, or corners that roll up.

A piece of bread put in the water when boiling cabbage or turnips keeps down the odor.

XIV—FRUIT

This important part of our diet is sometimes divided into two classes: (1) food fruits (2) flavour fruits. The first class contains at least twenty per cent solids, and in it are found bananas (with almost the same composition as potatoes), all dried fruits, grapes, figs, plums, and prunes. All other fruits belong to class two. In them the water content varies from eighty to ninety per cent.

Olives are the only fruit rich in fat. Carbohydrate provides most of the calories resulting from the digestion of fruit. Of this, dried fruits have from sixty to seventy per cent. It is chiefly sugar except, as before indicated, in the starchy banana. The other form of carbohydrate (cellulose) occurs in fruit in varying degrees, depending on ripeness, kind of fruit, and extent of cultivation. This provides roughage and aids in elimination—we must, however, exclude blackberries from any share in this credit.

Chiefly because of their mineral matter and vitamines do fruits lay claim to such an important place in our diet. Fluorine and iodine are the only mineral requirements of the body not found in fruit. The iron content of citrus fruits, grapes, apples, strawberries, and dates should recommend them to the palates of the anemic. As they stimulate the salivary glands, citrus fruits make a suitable ending to a meal. They also stimulate the action of the kidneys, thus tending to prevent rheumatism and gout. Lemon juice reduces fever.

Fruit is an excellent source of vitamines. As vitamine C is greatly reduced by heat, cooked fruits should not be entirely substituted for raw ones.

The pleasing appearance and texture of fruit appeals to the aesthetic sense and acts as a stimulant to appetite.

Among all fruits I am disposed to accord first place to the good Canadian apple.

"Let other hands exultant glean
The cluster from the vine,
The orange from its glossy green,
The apple from the pine."

We will continue to honour this 'hardier gift' bestowed by our 'rugged vales' with its iron, potassium, malic acid, cellulose, and two hundred and eighty-five calories per pound.

I have been reading your mail through the paper and find the recipes very helpful. If you please would advise me what to use for moths. I have been keeping house for a number of years and never had any bother before. I have used moth balls but find them to be of no use. If you would please advise me what to do.

Peterboro Women Tell What Armistice Meant to Them

Poignant Memories Are Stirred Again

Some Recall Bitterness of Loss; Some Remember the Ache of Happiness After Suffering; And There Are Those Who Still Wait and Hope.

"Dear Marion,

One day just before he left Peterborough to go overseas, my friend and I had our photographs taken in Roy's, and we were so proud—he in his new uniform, and I in my navy dress. We were eighteen, and we had made so great and bright plans for life—how splendid it was to be for us, together!

Then came the letters from the front, always full of the fun of life there; telling how jolly it was to have boots full of water, to live on bully beef and hard tack; telling a joke about running into barbed wire in the dark—but never whimpering about the awfulness of it all; never telling about the battles and the deaths of comrades, and the narrow escapes. How pathetic it all seems now.

And one day his mother received a telegram, reporting her son missing. That night we sat up together, praying, hoping, weeping. After all we said, it is not as bad as if he had been killed! And so, for weeks we honed, until the second message came, 'Missing, presumed dead.' Even that did not seem final and sometimes still we have that forlorn hope that he may lie in some hospital, unknown, and that he may yet come back to us.

The photograph is on the table in front of me as I write—a thirteen-year-old photograph, all that remains to me; and whatever others may say of sadness being solaced by passing time, I know that I miss him to-day as much as I did when he marched away.

And I'm so glad, Dearest Marion, that your kindly thought gives me this opportunity to put in writing my thoughts of him. That is my only idea in writing: I would not take a prize if I won it, and so I sign myself, only,

Waiting."

Dear Marion:

You ask for Armistice Day thoughts. The one printed in Saturday's Examiner which reached me yesterday was more beautifully put than anything I can ever say.

As did many another, I said good-bye forever to some before they left Canada and to others who returned. I did not see the terrible carnage in France, but I can still see with closed eyes, long lines of men in khaki and with packs on their backs, march, march past and into the smoke camouflaged boats, until one wondered where there was space for all. They went gaily, to be human target. That was the wonder of it all, no matter what the heart felt, there was the brave front. Again, I watched train loads of wounded men pass by, saw great piles of stretchers and bearers waiting the arrival of hospital trains helped care for them till one wondered at so many forms of wounds and varieties of ills. We have watched some of those men as health was regained or lost, some to find themselves disabled for life, and that same brave spirit pervaded all, perhaps not shown in just the orthodox way, but shown none the less if not more truly. Nothing there was orthodox, bare nature showed. Those men were brave, and the more there seemed to bear the more they helped the others to happiness.

Often it was our lot to tell a patient that someone dear to him was gone.

English women, oh so brave, prayed for the end they cared not who helped. We heard, "When wilt Thou save the people, Lord"? sung as a prayer from a multitude of torn hearts.

At home we found the great majority unable to imagine what it was but anxiously waiting the end. We hardly dared believe it was coming. When word came to the village, the Armistice was signed, a friend telephoned me. The village was excited, there was much rejoicing. Many went to Peterborough. I was home alone, and could only thank God, and hope that wars would cease, peace and good will reign, and those I loved return and rejoice over the home coming, and know that many would have their hearts torn again for their own, even while they rejoiced with others.

Oh there were many, many things chased incoherently through my mind that day. I wondered at the past, present and for the future.

Quid Est.

Dear Marion:

In reply to your request that we give you some idea of what Armistice Day represents to us, may I send this for your approval though quite confident that you will be deluged by many wonderful letters and shall not mind if you do not find room for this one.

Well do I remember the fateful Sunday of August, 1914, when we knew war was was declared. Some felt it would soon be all over, others realized the seriousness of it all and then followed four years of tense hours of waiting, hoping, trusting, suffering and endurance borne by so many till the wonderful Armistice Day of November 11, 1918, dawned and which we shall commemorate next Sunday. Our thoughts will be mingled with sadness and thanksgiving. Sadness for memories of those who gave up all for their country and thanksgiving that we are Now at Peace and enjoying the manifold blessings of our bountiful Heavenly Father. I would like to add that whilst our hearts are touched with grief for those who have gone, can we not think with love and sympathy of those who are still with us, but are bearing the pains and suffering consequent on their part in the great conflict? How many we see and know are maimed sick and often weary trying to still do their part now. We also remember that Armistice Day seemed to be the outcome of that wonderful Day of Prayer and peace came. Would it not also be seemly to resort to the same method for the mitigation of the awful and appalling distresses we read of every day else may it not be said, 'We are saying, Peace, when there is no peace.'

Sincerely yours,

E. A. M.

Dear Marion:

How did I hear Armistice? Can one define one's feelings, it's hard, don't you think, when it affects one so much as such a day did nearly every white race?

Well, I went to my work at 8 o'clock, I had been doing it for three years (my pay as soldier wife at 12-6 was not enough to live on). I was out on business for the firm when I heard the first gun go off at 11 o'clock and I shall never forget the feeling that came over me, I could not realize it, I sat down where I was to pull myself together and found many others like myself. Then came the thought of the boys coming home and the boys that would never come, the wives and mothers who had no one to come back to them. As long as the war was on one seemed to take things more for granted in the absence of loved ones but after the Armistice and the absent one did not return you only had a medal and a memory it made sorrow and joy very much mixed that day. It did for me. I had my husband to come home a great joy, I can tell you, and my retirement from business for I had three growing children to leave and a three mile journey to walk. But I had one left in France who was killed at Loos a well loved brother and I was better off than many for they lost all, so my joy outweighed my sorrows and the two minutes silence always brings that feeling sharply back to mind if it needed anything.

E. B.

Dear Marion:

I was in England when the war was declared, working in a small watering town with a number of women war workers. I travelled thirty-six miles by train each day to make munitions for our boys who were then at the fighting lines and in training camps and military quarters. Not forgetting a country walk of nearly two miles to the station many times before daylight and very late in the evening. After spending nearly thirteen months there working at shells and filling bags of powder, straightening brass cases, there was a large explosion around Christmas time, the 5th of December, injuring and killing many of our brave girls. This happened in one of the shell stores not far from the part where I was. Only thirty minutes after the day staff had changed to the night staff of workers. Cars were quickly brought to get the wounded girls out and they were taken to the hospital in Leeds where a great many soldiers lie. A few days afterwards a beautiful telegram was sent to us from one of our great leaders in France, asking us to carry on as the output was needed so much and with sympathy for the sick.

After that, father went to war, I decided I would have a change of work so I enlisted in the women air service, after passing a test. I was along with 17 others put into the Royal Air Force and send to headquarter's officers' mess as a waitress. We were on a beautiful estate surrounded by gardens and lakes and had quarters in the hall which was given for the soldiers during the war at the camp quarters where hundreds of men were training and one part was taken for war prisoners. Having done three years of that work we had an outbreak of flu a few days before the war was ended—that is before Armistice was signed—several of us were taken down from the hall on stretchers to the Camp Sick Bay. There was great rejoicing all around us, we could hear bands playing and a long march was arranged for all the camp and war women workers. Peace dinners were arranged and I waited on one of the head tables consisting of many high military men along with seven waitresses and waiters. The tables were beautiful with silver, flowers, and flags. Two bands playing and everyone was making great time all over the country for the Armistice of which had up to that day lost the lives of many of our brave men in fighting and protecting their loved ones at home. Sincerely,

F. B.

Dear Marion:

I wonder if Armistice Day memories will ever become vague to those of us who had lived through those four years of strain and waiting, dread and grief, during which the Great War was being fought? Yet, on looking back those years were well worth living, never has life seemed so gloriously full of varied emotions. It was not all sorrow and tragedy.

There were times when our hearts thrilled to the tune of glorious deeds, of unselfish sacrifice and we were proud to think our kith and kin had it in them to rise to each deed as we had not imagined them capable of, when the occasion arose. Truly 'there were giants in those days.' We would not have missed living in those stirring times for all the world.

Yet, on the day for which we had all longed and prayed for, I myself could not realize that it had come at last. One lived in anticipation so long that the reality seemed to stun one. It was just too big to be grasped all at once. No more bloodshed, no more long casualty lists, no more dreading the telegram or letter from those 'on active service.'

Soon we would see the faces so long missing from our midst 'whom we had lost awhile.' Soon, the voice silent so long would be heard in our homes! The time for mopping up had come. We had often imagined what our sensations would be on that day for which the whole world waited. We thought ourselves big enough to contain the joy that would be ours. Now here it was.

When one has been keyed up to a certain pitch of endurance so long and the time comes when that is no longer necessary it leaves one feeling rather flat. Somehow or other we just could not summon up that joyfulness we had looked forward to as the crowning moment of our lives. Thankful—yes. Beyond that we could not seem to get.

For as we pictured the return of the absent we could not get away from the thought of those who were not coming back. They were with us that day more than the living, the ones that had died to make this day possible. Some of them, lying many months ago in Flanders Fields, were speaking and were truly with us on that great day. "They sleep as well who died to save His weak ones, not in vain."

Among the rejoicing we saw those who though rejoicing with us that the struggle was over, were thinking that never before had their loved ones seemed so lost to them. Too late for our joy, we read in lone faces.

Then we thought how hard it was going to be to wait for the homecoming of our dear ones. Time was going to seem long from now on. We knew their thought were with us too on this day.

We listened to the stirring strains of martial music, we cheered and laughed and cried a little and made merry with the crowd; and then after—when the tumult died away, and we were alone with our thoughts and we remembered those with whom we had talked, who had no glad re-union to look forward to, something like this rose in our mind with those quieter moments, "Surely the world will be a better place now that men have proved themselves ready to fight and to die for what they believe to be right. We will all have to try to be more loyal to our ideals to appreciate in a better way this wonderful country our men paid so dear a price to keep inviolate." Yet, though every return of Armistice Day strengthens the resolution to appreciate more the goodly heritage which is ours, I wonder just how far we have advanced since that day? We believe the world is growing a better place to live in, that people are more understanding of the world's need, more considerate, more human. Yet there is so much wants doing, so many wrongs crying to be righted and we seem to make such slow progress. Yes we are making progress. We have seen the light. It is steadily growing stronger. We believe we are on the way to realizing what men have been giving up their lives to bring about. "The brotherhood of man" is not just a catch phrase for a socialist ranter but an actual fact, not made perfect yet but more likely to be as the years go on. Armistice Day should serve to strengthen us in our resolutions to each do our part, as well as bring to mind those who played their part in bringing about the possibility of our doing it. It is a solemn day to me, Marion. The souls of those who fell in that war 'go marching on.' Let us honor them above all others. Yours sincerely,

ADASTIA

Dear Marion:

Tempted to write about something of Armistice Day, I am taking the pleasure to do so.

As this is on Armistice Anniversary we take this occasion to express our hearty approval of our brave Canadian boys who fought in this recent war.

Is there more genuine patriotism than supporting and rendering such valuable service to our country as they did? We commend our boys not alone for instructing many in knowledge and virtue but chiefly for setting an example of the devotion and self-sacrifice on which the nations must depend for all time. The entry of our country in the war gave Americans a new occasion to prove, as they had so often done before their patriotic devotions. The value of our associations for the public welfare surely was recognized. And why shouldn't we in every possible way appreciate and respect the men who were offering their lives for our country.

How well deserved and how productive of good were these efforts, is plainly seen from the record of every branch of the national service. We are proud of their loyalty, we honor their heroism and let us pay them the highest tribute by imitating their fidelity to duty, their sacrifice of self and their devotion to the cause of freedom. They went into the war and ended it, they fought to make the world a better place for all mankind.

In proclaiming our purpose, we held up our country and its institutions as the hope of humanity. Dishonest adversaries raise the cry of disloyalty to our country. But what answer can they give to the splendid response of our Canadian men to the nation's call of arms, to the heroism and sacrifices on the field of battle and in every branch of the national service?

Morality is essential to the good order and proper growth of every community. The recent war has proved that without training, and spirit of life it is impossible to sustain respect for morality, for correct views concerning wrong, and also right, good and evil, virtue and vice, personal responsibility, the sanction of law and order.

You know yourself, that Armistice Day should ever be remembered for it brings to mind all the sufferings, hardships and trials of our fellowmen. It cost many of them their own dear life. Yes—some of those were near relatives, and surely they were all our friends.

Ten years ago they gave up fighting, but we have not forgotten all they have done for us, and our country. Just sum things up, and you, too, will agree—for "Greater love than this no man hath that he should lay down his life for his friends."

Yours to honor our brave Canadian soldiers,

Jenny Wren II.

"Dear Marion,

The Armistice on November 11, 1918, meant to me that my husband would return safely. It meant that our three children would know his love and help.

This may appear selfish, because millions of wives and mothers with the same love that I hold, would never see their loved ones again. But to me, when the news came that day, this thought overshadowed everything else. I don't know how I could have carried on if things had turned out otherwise.

Now, when the danger is over, I am SO proud that my husband took his part in our great victory!

Yours truly,

Mrs. M. B."

"Dear Marion,

When the bells pealed out their message of the first Armistice Day, I tried to feel happy for all those whose beloved had been spared to the end, but indeed I couldn't. I cried all day, and many days since. It doesn't seem so hard, now, somehow. I'm getting on in years, and I guess the thought that I am drawing near to my son makes the way seem easier.

Some day I hope to see his grave. It is near Albert, and I have a photograph of it. He was wounded at Courcelette, and died in the clearing station at Albert, just under the leaning Virgin, they tell me.

That is why I found it so hard, ten years ago to be gay. But I AM glad for all those who came back, and I think I have learned, Dear Marion, to say: 'The Lord gave, the Lord hath taken away; blessed be the Name of the Lord.'

"Dearest Marion,

Armistice to me meant the end of two years of weary, heart-breaking, waiting. I had two sons overseas, both in the infantry; one served two years and the other was in France more than one year. How I used to watch from my window every morning for the postman, and what a thrill it was when he handed me a letter addressed in the handwriting of one of my sons.

One day a telegraph messenger brought a message that one of the boys was wounded, and then began weeks of worry until he was able to write saying he was getting better.

Probably no one knows like a mother what those years were like, or how welcome was the news that the terrible time was over.

I am not writing this in the hope of winning a prize. I am still so glad that I just like to think of it, and am glad to write it to help you out.

Sincerely yours,

Mrs. S. L."

"Dear Marion:

You ask what Armistice means to me; just this—Taking a retrospective view of the Armistice of 1918, when myself and thousands of others awoke with thankfulness to find the World's War was ended. No one can imagine, neither can it portrayed on paper, the relief to those whose loved ones had been spared to them by God's goodness and mercy, from the arena. We had for years lived with nerves at highest tension, these were then released, anxiety to a certain extent was finished as far as we were concerned and we could enter into the festivities of Armistice with joy and thankfulness to God, at the same time sympathizing with the bereaved, yet rejoicing in the fact that although their loss was severe, we could, if we choose, benefit by it, by trying to measure up to their standard as each Armistice draws near, for:—

Lives of great men all remind us,
We can make our lives sublime
And in dying, leave behind us,
Footprints on the sands of time.

Thanking you for helps through your column,

I remain,

Yours sincerely,

Mrs. H."

"Dear Marion:

While I am not a letter writer, I feel I must say a word about Armistice Day.

I was out in my garden when the bells started to ring and whistles started to blow, and I said to myself, 'Can it be that Peace is declared?' So I went to the phone and asked one who should know, and was told it was true.

I just went down on my knees and thanked God for His goodness in bringing that dreadful war to an end. I wept for joy, and why not? Did I not have my dear boy and four dear brothers over there—one giving his life for us.

I think it will be very fine to have a page or two on Armistice Day. This Women's Page is a great help to the home, and a great improvement to the paper. I am enclosing a coupon for instructions for making the hat. Thanks for the instructions for the ribbon flowers.

Yours sincerely,

M.E.M."

"Dear Marion:

I, a mere male, was scanning your column and noticed that you were asking for hints and assistance on writing an article or Armistice Day. This brought to mind an incident which, to me, was very striking and impressive.

On the morning of the Armistice 'our' battalion was in occupation of a small village near Mons which we had entered the night before. The Colonel had announced the Armistice, and the regimental band—which had been sent for specially—played all kinds of music. The population were out in force, singing and dancing with the boys, and then the band struck up the Belgian National Anthem—then there came silence interrupted by weeping and crying. It was then that the village realized that the war was over and they were again free in their own land. I gathered from what little French I had picked up that this was the first time since the retreat from Mons that they had heard their National Anthem; Belgian national music being 'verboten' and their home being billets of the invader all that time.

The National Anthem to them meant freedom.

ONE OF THE C.E.F."

"Dear Marion:

This is a brief story of the war. Though not immediately connected with the Armistice it is, nevertheless, incident to it.

One day after a ruthless engagement a Jewish Rabbi was searching amongst the wounded for the luckless of his own people, when he came across a wounded young French soldier manifestly very near death from terrible wounds. The Rabbi observing that the poor fellow was striving for something he could not reach, bent over the Poilu to ask if he could do anything to help; when he saw that an effort was being made to convey the Crucifix which he held in his weakening hand to his lips. Then, the Rabbi, kneeling beside his fellowman tendered this service and as the sacred emblem touched his lips, a smile lit up his face, and murmuring 'Jesu Mary' he passed out. Thus the Jew, who is still looking for the Messiah, conveyed this benediction to a dying soldier whose faith in a Risen Lord is unquestioning.

At this Armistice season it seems to me we should eliminate from our minds and hearts the racial and religious bitterness and rancor that poisons our very souls and works incalculable harm to our great and glorious country.

Do not let the lesson taught us by the Rabbi be lost; but let us be constrained by it to open our hearts to love and tolerance towards one another, and thus may peace and good will prevail.

Lakefield. S. E. G."

"Dear Marion,

Armistice to me means a time when we should think not only of the dead, but of the living, those who came back to us. I think you put it very nicely when you remarked on the impossibility of our ever fully understanding them. How could we?

It was a great relief to us when the Armistice was announced (I was in London then, and joined in the hilarious day) but what must it have been in the trenches? How can we tell?

It must have been a joyous time for those who looked forward to having their loved ones come back home, safely, but who can imagine the thoughts of those men who by this armistice knew they would return to their families?

And to-day, as we celebrate Armistice, let us remember them. The dead are in God's keeping, but these men who suffered greatly, and returned to us, are in our keeping. Yours faithfully,

Nona."

"Dear Marion:

I was reading your SOS for letters relating to Armistice Day, and I may live to be many years older, but the memory of that day will never be forgotten. Like many others, I know, who had dear ones over there, it was most a welcome tiding to them as well as myself, so we joined in and rejoiced that the cruel war was over at last, leaving many with heartaches that time will never efface.

It was my good fortune to be in Belleville city when the word was received. The war was ended. I was awakened by tram whistles blowing continually, bells ringing, and everything they had in town with a whistle on was going at the same time. I had an idea what caused all the racket but my daughter in whose home I was visiting rushed to my room to ask me if I knew the meaning of it. She said, 'The war is over, mother,' and we were among the thousands of glad ones because she had a brother and I a son, over there.

Well, I think that folks in Belleville nearly went wild with joy that day, everything they could haul out that would make noise was on the go. I watched from an upstairs window on four corners of Bridge street and how the day passed without casualties was a miracle, but nobody got hurt. I saw old tin washtubs tied behind automobiles to make noise, and other noisy articles too. Was it just a screech of whistles, bells and trains? No, it was a day to be remembered. I saw nobody sad, yet afterwards while in conversation with a lady who had lost her son just in the last battle (he was a signaller), she said when she heard the signs of rejoicing she spent the night weeping for her lost one, and perhaps there were many others we did not know about. But he is not forgotten by those left, we still honor our dead each November 11 at 11 a.m. by keeping the day sacred in our memories, never forgetting those who sleep where the poppies grow in Flanders Fields, and who gave their lives to save our beloved Empire.

Our Empire.

'O Tiny Isle, set in Atlanta's waste
With emerald fringed and purple heather crowned,
Rose perfumed and by nature so emplaced
That, mistress of the Sea, thou hast been found.
Thou dost fulfil thy destiny and now,
Behold thy children scattered far and wide
From Arctic to Antarctic, east and west
All faithful to tradition, filled with pride.
At this Empire which from thy loins has sprung
Which in the cause of liberty did stand;
Did break the mad Hun's lust, saved old and young
From untold horrors which theHun had planned.'

All honor to those who fought and died and are sleeping under the poppies over there.

Poppies.

'They have builded up the cities
That were torn by fierce assault,
They have lain away their grief and sing again.
And the babes of men who fought
For our freedom dearly bought,
Have passed the gates of childhood and are men.
And the fields are green again
With the tall and dewy grasses
Where the cannon belched their fire
Where men writhed in blood and mire
And the sinking sun has gilded all the West.
Then shall those who follow after
Never hear the story told,
Save by lips that wax indifferent
As the years are growing old.
Shall the flaming torch be hurled
As they neared that other world
Flicker feebly in our grasp, slip from hold.

'In the far off fields of Flanders,
Where the conflict fierce was waged,
The blood stained acres form a richer sod
For the scarlet horse, who keep
Ceaseless watch o'er those that sleep
Whose souls have found their Paradise and God;
And the poppies nod their heads
In a staunch and proud remembrance
Of the warriors whose torch they've kept aflame;
And to show that blood was shed
To the glory of the dead
The crimson flowers have risen in their name.'

Now forgive me Marion for writing so much poetry but they just seemed to fit in my letter and I could not resist sending it along. Hoping you receive galores of letters regarding Armistice Day.

Yours truly,

Another Friend."

"Dear Marion:—

Who can ever forget the first mad joy of Armistice? What it meant to a war-crazed people! The name of one of our own "unreturning brave" in nearly every casualty list—wounded, killed in action, or missing.

I think we hadn't fully realized what an awful hell we had been living through, until Armistice morning, when hysteria reigned. People walked the streets weeping, unashamed, and laughing almost in the same breath. Every man, woman, and child were "kin" on that great November morning. People met on the street speaking, or perhaps shaking hands wordlessly, with a sob, with friend and enemy alike. On that day the bond of brotherhood was real and sincere. It was not the wild applause which appealed to me most; it was the feeling of wanting to pray. Pray as I had never prayed before. A veritable paean of thanksgiving. And what a Thanksgiving Day the Armistice did bring to the whole world, and to each of us individually! The sound of the music, and the laughter, and the tears, was the most joyous that had ever been heard. Armistice promised "Peace"! Factory whistles blew loudly and long. Bells pealed forth their song from every church and school in the country. Everything that had a voice lifted it up in thanksgiving. The great, awful war was ended! The world was at peace. We were at peace with each other. The spirit of comradeship which Armistice Day brought to us has not been lost, nor will it be. Underneath all the littleness of business jealousies, the selfishness and sordidness of life, (for life must go on) there will always remain the uplift that was felt with the coming of the Armistice. There is not so much of grasping coveteousin the world to-day because of it. Not so much scorn nor hate. We are a more tolerant, a more sympathetic people. More closely united in brotherly love than ever before.

In this promise of Peace and its fulfilment, there is just one discordant note. The forgetting so soon the many brave returned men who made Armistice possible, who gave to us our beautiful Canada—free, bought with their sacrifice. Why not make the commemoration of the Armistice an opportunity to pay tribute to our returned soldiers?

I am afraid, dear Marion, you have brought upon yourself a deluge of Armistice letters. We forget ourselves, time, everything, when we recall our feelings on that great day. You have done better perhaps than you thought, in awakening the people of Peterborough anew to the great debt of gratitude we still owe to the men who fought our battles on 'Flanders' Fields.'

Yours patriotically,

PATRICIA."

Dear Marion:—

The following is a sketch of an address that I heard given by Harry N. Holmes, D.D., on the subject, "Youth and World Peace" at the World's Sunday School Convention held at Los Angeles, in July, 1928.

"There is a great movement surging through the nation among the young people's organizations. It is called the "Crusade with Christ in evangelism, organization, citizenship and world peace." World Peace! For centuries the prophets and seers have been haunted by the dream of the day when the world would be a brotherhood, instead of a battle ground."

"The development of any high kind of civilization depends upon the young people being conscious of the fact that they are citizens of the world. We hear that explorers have no place to go. We have come to the end of the geographic conquest of the world. There are no more new people, no more new lands. We have a complete stage with all the actors upon it. The challenge of the day is to learn how to live together, and I doubt if there is anything more important than this challenge of living together in a friendly way. The crusade to develop world friendship and peace is one that touches our hearts and imagination."

"At the Christian Endeavor Convention held in the Crystal Palace London, two years ago, Lloyd George said, 'For five years, I called upon young men of my country to war. For five years my heart was filled with anxiety and suffering. That is why I am in favor of peace now'."

"What can we do to promote world peace? There is no doubt of the need as I think of the past, and as I view the future. One of the great statesmen has said that another war may be the cemetery of our civilization. So this is our task. How shall we promote it? By hating hatred, by fostering good will. If we do, peace becomes a probability. You and I have to increase the number of men and women of good will. God's will never comes through misguided action, only through justice and fair play. We shall acquire knowledge of the world in which we live, and as we do, we create international understanding. I believe to understand all, may be to forgive all. Do you try to understand Japan and Mexico? Our chief business is not to hate, it is to understand. Each nation has a contribution to make."

"Let us look at the matter from the standpoint of geography. As a nation we want to know how another nation manages its own affairs. We want an explanation of how they live together. We want to know why they want a piece of seaboard, and to understand geographic limitations, helps us find acception and adjustments."

"To every one of us there comes the challenge to get behind machinery of peace and work! I am for the League of Nations. I wonder what would have happened without it. I believe the time of peace is near. I believe I can catch the whisperings. The time is coming when we are going to judge war as we judge the man who goes through the village streets with a gun or an axe."

"Young people, upon you the future waits. To this great task of making the world a better place for every boy and girl, man and woman, we dedicate ourselves in the years that lie in front. It seems to me that our generation has the greatest opportunity of all to bring in the fulfillment of world-wide peace. International peace, understanding friendship, is the biggest idea on the globe. On a troubled planet, Jesus came to demonstrate that men should live together in peace, and love and good will toward men."

THE WORLD'S PRAYER

War's hateful cry, and lust for gain,
Have caused us endless grief and bitter pain;
Progress has taught the evil of our way.
And peace is dawning with a newer day.

We pray for peace on earth, goodwill toward all;
May Love, instead of hate, our hearts enthrall.
We pray that ev'ry nation sees the right;
That truth and justice rule, in place of night;

That men-at-arms forever cease their reign,
And wasting war may ne'er return again,
From chaos and confusion, there shall rise
Enduring peace, and everlasting ties!

Forces of might, not right, have often ruled,
And all the world in bloodshed has been schooled;
Please God, no more vast graveyards where we kneel,
But join our hearts and hands, for common weal.

Dear Marion:

Armistice Day was a day when every person felt like singing, "Praise God from Whom all Blessings Flow." Every Christian man and woman rejoiced that the horrible devastations of war were to cease, and that the mandate of the angels, "Peace on Earth, good will to men," would again have a chance to be put into practice.

But the persons who really appreciated the Armistice were those who have loved ones with the Army. On mother, who had two fine boys overseas, one of whom won a military cross for bravery in action, remarked, "I just couldn't describe my feelings. I was thankful, oh, so thankful! But yet the boys were still there, and so many things might happen that might cause war to again break out or prevent their safe return. Truly it was a day to be thankful and trust God."

It was awe-inspiring just to think of the legions of soldiers encamped on opposite sides, hostilities having ceased, just waiting, waiting for further news. But over and above all was Thanksgiving and rejoicing.

"O last regret, regret can die!
No—mist with all this mystic frame,
Her deep relations are the same,
But with long use her tears are dry.

In Memoriam.

My thoughts on Armistice day were mostly of relief that no more lives would be lost, or fine men condemned to a living death, with shattered frame or mind.

I was with an old lady who was suffering greatly, three of whose sons had been killed in the Boer War and three in the Great War and whose seventh son had had his left arm shattered.

It seemed to me looking back that there were many who spent the day in great rejoicing and rightly so, but in the presence of such a tragedy one could only think of the many graves in foreign lands 'which were forever England.' And I for one sincerely hope that the memory of the Great War will be kept alive in every possible way if only to prevent the rising generations from ever participating in such another conflict.

"Dear Marion,

I was sound asleep when the news of the Armistice reached Peterborough. I was awakened by the C. G. E. horn, and when I heard the length of the blast I knew it wasn't the usual getting up signal—it must be; it must be PEACE.

No one can tell, by word or in a letter, how I felt that morning when the usually maligned horn awoke me to a

NURSING SISTER TELLS OF "BOYS"

"Quid Est," So Well Known to the Women's Page, in a New Role.

"Dear Marion:

Things grave and gay happened in the army during the war. It was all grave, but the men could take gaiety out of the most adverse circumstances and it was well they could. Some of them were merry, no matter what happened.

Funny things did happen in the hospitals. As nursing sister in a typhoid convalescent hospital at Wear Bay House, Folkestone, I met my first experience of men having to ask me about their getting married. One afternoon, a sergeant, a fine man, came to the office, very anxious to know if I was alone; when assured I was, he began to hem and haw. I was surprised, for he appeared a commanding sort of man; so, more for fun than anything else, I said 'What's the matter, F——' 'Want to get married.' 'Yes, sister, I could not get it off my chest' (the first time I had heard that expression). Then the whole story came out. They were engaged before he came to Canada at all. After he enlisted and went overseas they planned to be married during his first leave. He wished to be married before returning to the lines, and the request for permission had to go through me.

When typhoid was about over, orders came to send fifty men to Monks Horton. That evening there was a terrible commotion in the corridor, caused by a youngster of nineteen howling because he had to leave his girl. The other men were enjoying the fun. He had previously very proudly showed me his beautiful Julia.

At Walmer, a man was paraded. He came in giggling; as he was on crutches, was freckle-faced, red-headed, and had had his teeth extracted, it was a funny picture, but he was in distress. He had a girl, who was to have a fortune of ten pounds if she was married by a certain time. We were in quarantine. He could not get to see her, but wanted to be paraded before the Colonel, when he came, or for me to write if he did not come soon enough. To relieve his mind I wrote for him, and when Colonel came he was paraded and told his story. Col. Clingan asked if he did not wish permission from his own O.C. to get his separation allowance. 'Oh, no, that does not matter, my wife will have her fortune.'

I did wish these marriages could have been forbidden. Letters came from the girl's mother to hurry up the wedding or her birthday would be passed, and she would lose her fortune. I had to see to the banns being read. Finally, he got his leave of absence, but he overstayed it, and I had reason to believe more than the fortune had been spent. I had a piece of cake. Some wealthy man had willed that any girl born, baptized, confirmed and married by a certain age, all within the parish, should receive ten pounds on her wedding day.

Another boy very proudly showed us the picture of his dear Sue; the secretary and I heard a good deal about Sue, and wondered. One evening the sergeant-in-charge, with a big grin asked if D. might be paraded. We heard peculiar sounds in the corridor. In came Pte. D—— weeping and tearing his hair; his dear Sue had gone back on him, gotten another fellow, and he showed me the terrible (in more ways than one) letter. The secertary escaped, and D—— dropped into her chair. It was ridiculous, and in three weeks he had another girl. Many of the weddings were all right; but so many were mistakes.

The little secretary and I generally felt we had a friendly hold on the men when they showed us the pictures in their pay-books or their letter. The secretary escaped, and of boys.

THE WHATNOT

A Place for Little Bits of Everything of Local Interest

By MARION

IN PREPARING for this Armistice Day number I have learned a lot, and I am sure, too, that you who helped me by sending in letters learned a great deal.

• • •

I found, for instance, how utterly impossible it is for those of us who were not overseas to understand the heart or mentality of a soldier.

• • •

Robert Service has told the soldier's viewpoint in "The Revelation":

"Don't you guess that the things we're seeing now will haunt us through all the years;
Heaven and hell rolled into one, glory and blood and tears;
Life's pattern picked with a scarlet thread, where once we wove with a grey,
To remind us all how we played our part in the shock of an epic day."

Pictures like "Mademoiselle From Armentieres" only intensify the feeling that we cannot understand. Was war like that? Did they fall in love, and drink, and fight, and die, as the pictures show? Did they crowd around to get the mail from home? Did they really sing "Old Soldiers Never Die" just before going "over the top"?

• • •

If the war was like that, how can any man come back to the triviaiities of life; to hum-drum, everyday us?

• • •

Do their thoughts go back to the chums they left there? It is of the men who were killed in action, and died of wounds, that we are thinking particularly on Armistice Day. What memories of them are stored in the minds of the men we know; men with whom we work; men we pass in the street as they go about the routine of living!

• • •

It all seems past comprehension; we can only seek to understand, and if we can, help.

• • •

I have read a great deal of poetry about the war; some of it seems barbarous, but much has a sublime touch. After all, only the poet can catch and convey the spirit of war.

• • •

There are two lines from "The Mourners" that are worthy of repeating, since they call attention to the fact that women suffered so greatly:

"God pity them, the women-folk who mourn!
How happy are the dead."

• • •

Indeed, if only mourning remained, how happy would be the dead in comparison; but loss like that is glorious gain, for peace must be bought with blood and tears. And then . . .

"We'll seek for the Wonderful One;
And maiden will look for her lover,
And mother will look for her son;
And there will be end to our grieving,
And gladness will gleam over loss,
As—glory beyond all believing!—
We point . . . to a name on a cross."

• • •

Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen, unveiling the Cross of Sacrifice at Thelus cemetery, Vimy Ridge, said, "Across the leagues of the Atlantic the heart-strings of our Canadian nation will reach through all time to these graves in France; we shall never let pass away the spirit bequeathed to us by those who fell; 'their name liveth for evermore'."

• • •

To-day, the world is turning more to thoughts of peace, and we must realize that the final peace, founded on sure ground, was given its great birth in the sacrifice of those thousands who lie in allied cemeteries in Flanders and France, among them are more than six hundred Peterborough district boys.

But we have a long way to travel before realizing the fullness of that for which they died. We must not point with pride to our victory, and let the world drift toward another war.

• • •

"Victory! there can be but one, hallowed in every land,
When, by the graves of our common dead, we who were foemen stand,
And in the hush of our common grief hand is tendered to hand."

• • •

The Peterborough war memorial is only a symbol of our feelings toward the men who fell; the real memorial we erect throughout the civilized world should be the lasting peace they so much desired, and for which they gave so much.

• • •

Let us [illegible] this while we recall our soldier dead this Armistice Day, and the[illegible]d to carry the torch they have handed to us, let us bid them

"Sleep, friends, and rest,
Sistered by France and wedded to her breast.
Above your bivouac there the sentinel flowers
Will challenge only vagrant butterflies
Through the long, dreamless, summer-silken hours
That weave a winding sheet of Peace for you.
But on mysterious eves of hushed surmise,
While ancient captains muster in review,
Among your crosses glimmering in the grass
The Christ Himself, the Crucified, shall pass."

WHAT ARMISTICE MEANT

sense of what was happening. It had, that morning, all the sweetness of Gabriel's trumpet to those who lie in the grave; its noise had all the loveliness that must have been in the silence that fell over the battlefield at 11 o'clock that day.

To me, personally, it meant that my husband and my son would return; alas, they left behind in Flanders' Fields my eldest son, but before they came they placed a wreath on his grave for me. Small tribute to sacrifice so great! And yet, the tribute was only symbolical of all the thoughts we have sent fleeting over there since that day; such memories can never die.

I think, with you, that it is we women who know the cost of war. To have borne and brought up a boy, through the days when his hair was golden end curly; through his school days and the later days when he told us of his first love; through those first days of business—and then to allow him to don the uniform and march away to his death—that is sorrow beyond understanding.

And it is all crowded into that two minutes' silence on Armistice Day. I observe it every year, because I know then that millions of mothers' hearts are joined with mine in thinking of the boy who died before Armistice.

Never again should we mothers allow a tragedy like that to sweep the earth!

I think, Dear Marion, it will do us all good to be able to write these things down, and it is a splendid idea of yours. I hope you did not suffer through the war, perhaps you were too young. But if you did, I trust you have found the only sure and lasting comfort, as I have.

True, on this one day a year we think with pride and sorrow of the lost ones; but we know that

. . . in eternal youth they lie
Beneath a foreign soil.
And not in vain they watch and wait,
Strong champions of the right,
They are the warders at our gate
And guard us through the night.

May there be no more night of war!
Yours sincerely,
Mrs. G. S."

TO THE VALIANT SENTINELS

"Here's to the Sentinels tried and true
Who smiled when roses on our pathway strew
Who bowed in prayer
When, sorrows like a pall—
Enshrouded our souls,
Then, smiled through all the midnight gloom
With faith that was
More than human.
Ann Sutherland Dass."
Port Hope.

"Dear Marion,

If only we could understand!

I know, as probably you do, many men who served in the Great War; perhaps we know them intimately. But what have we learned from them about it?

My husband was overseas, and when the Armistice was signed he came home to me Occasionally he meets others who served with him—I do wish I could hear their talk! I envy him and them, because it must have been a great experience

Armistice would mean a lot more to the stay-at-homes if they could comprehend one tithe of what it meant to the men who were serving.

Yours sincerely,
Laura."

• • •

"Dearest Marion,

I cannot let your request go unanswered, although I have a very few words to write.

No one can adequately tell what Armistice meant—it meant renewed life to all of us, peace, happiness, solace from pain, averted fears—what did it NOT mean?

I'm getting on in years now, and I have had many experiences in a varied life, but that moment when news of the Armistice reached me is life's greatest.

If we ever draw the sword again, may it be in as just a cause—but may the cause never rise!

Sincerely yours,
Mrs. L. E."

"Dear Marion:

I know you will be over-crowded with letters at this time so I will tell you I am just gratifying my own desire by writing and it matters little whether you even read it.

I do wish to at least write what Armistice Day has always brought to my thoughts. Mothers whose sons did not return, whose graves they could not visit or even know where their dear boys' forms do lie. What a bitter, bitter sorrow. I did once grieve over the loss of my only babe and someone did chide me by reminding me of the mothers who lost good brave sons in the awful war. Well they might chide me for my grief was only like a shadow when likened to the unutterable sorrow of mothers who lost sons then or had sons made cripples for life.

'What shall we do to comfort them
Not talk it all over to them again,
Just point to the glorious Son of God
Their souls are up yonder, not under the sod.

'Not many had died who did utter no prayer
They had nearly all thought of that Home over there
They had nearly all lifted their eyes up to Heaven
They had prayed to their Father nine times and eleven.'

Just a bereaved mother who knows"

STILL MISSING.

November 11th, 1918. What memories it stirs, taking us back to the lapping, swishing of the fair Pacific,—Vancouver with its glorious western sunsets, its peaceful English Bay, its grim and watchful mountain peaks shrouded in their purple mists.

Armistice,—what hopes, what joy it awoke in our hearts, for had He not been reported "Missing" in the spring of the year? Visions of hospitals, of prison camps all vanished; surely now we would learn the fate of one who had left the sunny skies of a far southern clime to voyage home to the 'tight little island' to do his bit; not very robust at the best, but his heart was ever true to his native land.

Had He not revelled in the history of Britain's battles since He had been able to read? Had He not prided himself in the fact that He had never failed to give the exact date of any British battle when asked to do so? Had He not even corrected his teacher regarding one of his country's decisive victories, much to that worthy gentleman's chagrin?

At last he donned His Majesty's uniform, and marched and marched, and drilled and drilled, and trained until ultimately he found himself marching down Victory Slope from The Leas at Folkestone to the wharf en route for France.

How many of our Boys remember the march down that slope? I question if any forget it—their last march on British soil, leaving the beauty and the joys of dear old England behind. Left, right, left, right, the flower of Britain's manhood and Her Dominions beyond the seas, marching to Victory, to Victory or Death. Many went but, alas, not all returned. What of those who lie beneath the 'crosses row on row'? Are we holding high the torch flung from their failing hands?

What of those who lie, not 'neath crosses but somewhere in that vast God's Acre with the Missing—still Missing?

No outward sign to mark His resting place,
No cross stands upright at His lowly head,
No well-kept greensward, trim and clip-clipped just so,
No mark to show that He had lived and died and bled.

'Theyears roll on; I know not where He lies,
Mayhap beneath that poppy, deep blood red,
Mayhap that peasant turning cool brown earth,
Is tending well the covering of His bed.

Reduce the Acid

In sick stomachs—instantly

Sick stomachs, sour stomachs and indigestion usually mean excess acid. The stomach nerves are over-stimulated. Too much acid makes the stomach and intestines sour.

Alkali kills acid instantly. The best form is Phillips' Milk of Magnesia, because one harmless, tasteless dose neutralizes many times its volume in acid. Since its invention, 50 years ago, it has remained the standard with physicians everywhere.

Take a spoonful in water and your unhappy condition will probably end in five minutes. Then you will always know what to do. Crude and harmful methods will never appeal to you. Go prove this for your own sake. It may save a great many disagreeable hours.

Be sure to get the genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia prescribed by physicians for 50 years in correcting excess acids. Each bottle contains full directions—any drugstore.

When your Children Cry for It

Baby has little upsets at times. All your care cannot prevent them. But you can be prepared. Then you can do what any experienced nurse would do—what most physicians would tell you to do—give a few drops of plain Castoria. No sooner done than Baby is soothed; relief is just a matter of moments. Yet you have eased your child without use of a single doubtful drug; Castoria is vegetable. So it's safe to use as often as an infant has any little pain you cannot pat away. And it's always ready for the crueler pangs of colic, or constipation, or diarrhoea; effective, too, for older children. Twenty-five million bottles were bought last year.

KEARNS SUGGESTS CHANGES IN CONTROL

PILOT FAVORS CZAR TO RULE OVER FISTIANA

Would Fire Boxing Commissions As Cure For Game's Ills.

FAVORS RUNYON.

Also Remove Restrictions On Champions Regarding Title Bouts.

NEW YORK, Nov. 10.—Would a Judge Landis or a Will Hayes lead boxing out of the wilderness? Is there anyone or anything that would restore to prosperity the grand old game of block and sock? J. Leo McKernon, the man known as Kearns, the man above all others who did most to make modern pugilism a million-dollar business, answered yes to both questions yesterday.

This was startling in itself, as Kearns has never been known to reply in the affirmative without thinking it over for at least a month. Tex Rickard says he usually took two months to nod his head and six months to sign his name.

But his reply was not nearly so startling as his remedies.

First, he would fire all the boxing commissions..

Second, he would place professional boxing under the control of one man.

Finally, he would remove all restrictions on champions, permitting them to fight as often as they desired without defending their titles.

Writer First Choice

Evidently the "Doctor" has devoted considerable thought to the subject for he was even prepared to suggest his candidate for the position of High Commissioner. He proposed a writer as his first choice, a California boxing commissioner as his second, and "Sunny Jim" Coffroth, the Tex Rickard of the early days of this century, as his third.

In his first group he named Damon Runyon and Robert Edgren.

"The trouble with boxing is that it has been choked to death by legislation," he said. "It wouldn't be so bad if the legislators knew their business, but nine out of every ten boxing commissioners wouldn't know a left hook from an end run. They may know how many yards there are in a bolt of ribbon, and they may know how many steaks there are in a side of beef, but they don't know boxing. In most cases they are appointed for political services rendered, and the knowledge of the sport they are asked to control has nothing to do with their selection. Boxing, as always, is the football of politics.

Favors Runyon

"Most of the bad legislation that has taken the life out of the sport would be repealed in ten minutes if a real boxing man took charge. I'd be in favor of a man who has grown up in the sport, like Runyon or Edgren. They've been around it all their lives. They know boxing, boxers and boxing men. I'd pick Runyon for my first choice. I don't know anyone in the country who knows the racket more thoroughly."

"I would like a man like Charley Traung, the California boxing commissioner. He's a standout among the commissioners of America. He was a boxer himself in his youth and he is a wealthy man. He's in boxing because he loves it.

"Jimmy Coffroth would be another good man. Jim's a dead square fellow and he's forgotten more about the game than most of the commissioners will ever know. Rickard is a palooka promoter compared to Jimmy Coffroth. He's the guy who brought out Jeffries, Peter Jackson, Bob Fitzsimmons, Nelson, Ritchie, Britt, Wolgast and all the really great fighters of the old days.

"With a real boxing man in charge, the champions would be able to box where they pleased and when they pleased. In the old days, before these commissions forced champions to defend their titles every time they started, good fighters appeared all over the country. Nowadays they are forced to confine their activities to the larger cities. I think the frequent appearances of champions in small towns would stimulate interest back to where it used to be."

PARACHUTE SAVES AMERICAN AIRMEN

100 Pilots Have Leaped To Safety From Disabled Aircraft.

WASHINGTON, D.C., Nov. 10.—(Canadian Press).—The product of the little silk worm has saved the lives of 96 American airmen in 100 successful jumps from disabled aircraft in flight.

The War Department announced to-day that the parachute jump made Tuesday at San Diego, Calif., by Lieut. Roger V. Williams of Spokane, Washington, when his airplane collided with one piloted by Lieut. W. L. Cornelius of Antlers, Okla., the second of the army's "three musketeers" killed recently, brought the life-saving parachute jumps in this country to an even hundred.

Airmen who leave disabled aircraft by the parachute route automatically become members of the caterpillar club. Col. Charles A. Lindbergh holds the record for four jumps while Captain Frank Hunter and the late Lieut. Eugene H. Barkdale each jumped twice, making up for the discrepancy between the number of jumps and lives.

Foyston Confident of Winning Hockey Honors

VIEWS ON SPORT

The big "Y" Harrier program of road races will start at ten o'clock Thanksgiving morning from the Y.M.C.A.

All indications point to a most successful meet in the Harrier road races Monday. The relay teams from local factories are in great shape with a strong entry from the C.G.E. in the senior event and a crack team wearing the De Laval colors in the junior. Teams are entered from Lindsay Monarch Athletic Club and as the boys are in good shape will make the local runners step.

* * * * * * *

The senior relay is a ten mile event with four men to a team each doing once around the route which is exactly two and a half miles, according to Doug. Loomis. The senior road race will likely create the most interest as many well known runners will step out in this event. It is rumoured around the "Y" that there is a dark horse in the city who does his training secretly that will set a hard pace.

* * * * * * *

Anyway the runners have been training faithfully and are in the best of trim and the races ought to be fast.

* * * * * * *

The P.C.I. rugby teams left this morning full of pep and confidence for their big games in Port Hope. Both games will be strenuous, fast contests. The Intermediates will have the toughest fight with the heavy Bowmanville team, but with a fast gridiron they should be able to out-speed their hefty opponents. All the seniors have to do is to play the same brand of fast rugby they have been displaying these last few games and they will carry off the crown.

* * * * * * *

The P.C.I. seniors are a great defensive team. They have only had one touchdown scored against them all season.

* * * * * * *

Montreal will be the focus of all football fans eyes to-day. No one is venturing an opinion on the outcome. Anything can happen this afternoon. A capacity crowd of fifteen thousand will be at the game and most of them will be pulling for a Varsity victory.

* * * * * * *

If McGill win they cop the championship of the Intercollegiate and they declare that in that event they would not continue into the playoffs for the Eastern Championship. If Varsity wins Queen's will get another chance and would likely win the honors in the deciding games.

* * * * * * *

It is rumoured that Alex Kay has umpired his last game behind the bat. Alex is without doubt the best and most popular umps who ever called them in the Central League. Alex has an abiding love for three sports, curling is one and baseball is the other two.

FAMOUS CANADIAN RUGBY GAMES, PLAYS AND PLAYERS

By NICK BAWLF— Former star football, lacrosse and hockey player, now coach at Cornell

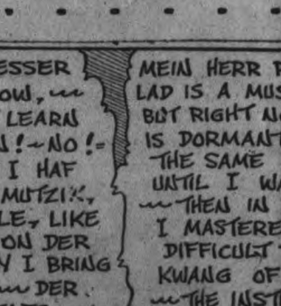
ARGOS-OTTAWA GAME

One of the hardest and most stubbornly contested games ever played on a Canadian gridiron was the match between the Argonauts of Toronto and the well named Rough Riders of Ottawa. The match was played on the Ottawa College oval, Nov. 16th, 1901, and to the winner went the championship of the Ontario Union. The Argonauts won 2 points to 1. Ottawa had a powerful set of forwards and a great scrimmage. So had the Argos. Joe Wright, Sr., held down the same position, centre scrimmage or snap, that his famous son now fills for the Double Blue. The Ottawas had good running backs. So had the Argos. But the Argos had Hardesty. What a punter!

The Ottawas kept the ball as long as possible in their mass play attack. There were snowbanks around the playing field and the gridiron itself was slippery. The tackling was the fiercest. At half-time the Ottawas were leading 1-0. Shortly after the second half opened Hardesty, standing on his own 50-yard line, punted the ball 20 yards over the Ottawa goal line. Before Pat Murphy could dig it out of the snow he and the ball were buried under an avalanche of Blue tacklers.

Then a dramatic incident happened. Hardesty, No. 1 in the diagram, again punted over the Ottawa goal line. Johnny Powers, No. 2 in the diagram, caught the ball and in his attempt to run it out slipped and fell into touch-in goal, giving the Toronto team its winning point and the championship. Powers told the writer he felt very keenly over his slip. It cost him $30 he had bet on the game.



The teams:

Argos—Fullback, Ardagh; halfbacks Hardesty, Darling, Henderson; quarters, Britton, Russell, Joe Wright, Boyd; insides, Langton, Grant, middles, Wilson, Hill; flying wing, Pud Kent (Capt.); outsides, Parmenter, Chadwick.

Ottawa—Fullback, Hamilton; halfbacks, Powers, Boyd, Murphy; quarters, P. Murphy; Bradley, Kennedy, Buckham; insides, M. Walter, Cameron; middles, Telford, Rayside; flying wing, Pulford; outsides, Austin, J. McGee.

"LEST WE FORGET"

In thees football memoirs, coverin gfive decades of Canadian rugby, you have read of the stirring deeds of the heroes of the past in their famous games.

When the call to arm came in 1914 thouand of athletes flocked to the colors ofr the great adventure, but when the whistle sounded for the last time in that great game of war, November 18, 1918, many of Canada's finest rugby players were left behind "midst poppies red."

Many of the players you have read about in these articles are now sleeping in peace, each in his hero's bed.

Lest we forget these rugby stars of other memorable autumn days and their stirring deeds on many a Canadian gridiron, there is given below two great teams picked from their ranks. They compare with the best. In the game of war as on the football field, they played hard and fair and played till the whistle blew.

The line-up:

Fullback—G. Southam, Varsity; Halfbacks—E. McDonald, Ottawa college; R. Binkley, Argos; K. Williams, Queen's. Quarter — Richardson, Queen's. Snap, Patterson, Argos Insides—Higgerty, Ottawa college; Muir, Varsity. Middles—Jeffrey, McGill; Taylor, Argos. Outsides—Ryan, Ottawas Lyon, Tigers.

Inside Sportin' Dope—By A. Wise Cracker

Mister Sporting Editor:

Well, Mac, there has been a little snow noticed in these parts, and the hockey players has started to train for the season, both of which is fair signs that winter is just around the corner. As for hockey, the prospects seem to be rosy, particularly if the securing of a good coach can be financed. And by good coach I mean just that. There have been birds what posed as such and drew down boocoop jack for looking wise and posing as experts, when a showdown woulda revealed the fact they didn't know as much about the game as the kids they was supposed to be teaching. A man what really knows his hockey groceries and how to sell them would make a big difference with the material here, provided he was given a free hand and plenty of authority.

We've got to the stage in hockey, Mac, when we gotta build up, and from now on the best bet to me looks like the jr. serious. The kids give you all they got, and they is more excitement in a battle between 2 well matched jr. teams than they is in most any clash. In a burg this size we should have a fighting jr. team in there every year, and this is as good a year to start as any. And while I don't want to lay down the law, Mac, it looks to me as if we oughta to give every kid in town a chance to make the team and plenty encouragement to turn out and battle for positions. It always seems to me, old-timer, a mistake to try to pick line-ups before the season opens. Just let the idea get around that Mister Whoisit is going to play right wing, for example, and right away Mister Whoisit begins to feel he's got his place cinched and to lay down on the job, while every other right-winger in town sez to himself, "What's the use turning out? Whoisit's going to play right wing." The same goes for other positions, of course, and the chance is that good boyswhat might develop fast if give a trial fade outa sight and their ability is lost. This year they will only be 1 jr. team as Saint John's ain't likely to operate, and if the available material is give a chance to show itself they ain't no reason why we shouldn't have a real snappy jr. outfit that will give all and sundry a battle here or anywhere. But make them all fight for a place, is my theory, Mac; they ain't nothing better to put a punch in any kinda team than the feeling that everybody's got to scrap for a berth in the line-up.

Well, that's plenty on that point, Mister Sporting Editor, and I hope it will be accepted as the vicar expressed it when a parishioner presented him with a bottle of brandied peaches and he said he appreciated the gift for the spirit in which it was sent.

And, by the way, Mac, last week I got to thinking out loud on the subject of the value of a good kicker to a football team and said something about not having glimpsed any great ability in that line on the local teams Well, Sat. afternoon I watched P.C.I. and Cobourg battle in the fog, and this young Mister Gemmell what run P.C.I. through their plays like nobody's business showed me some real nice kicking. He booted that wet ball 45 yds. or more several times, and if he can get a little more height along with the length, I'll hafta take it all back.

Mon. they is to be road races here, Mac, and the Harriers oughta put on quite a show. The boys has been training hard, and they will be plenty of battling for places, if the motorists will give the boys a fair chance to strut their stuff. If the cars keep outa the road the races will be well worth seeing, and citizens can get a good appetite for the Thanksgiving turkey—or what have you?—by turning out to watch the boys go.

Well, Mac, I gotta leave you now. Take care of yourself, old dear.

Sportfully yours,

A. WISE CRACKER.

OLYMPICS MAKE GOOD SHOWING IN THE CANPRO

Manager Pins Hopes For Championship On Ability of Three New Men.

STUART IN THE NET.

Two Players From Ottawa Amateur League Signed With Club.

DETROIT, Mich., November 10. — (Canadian Press.) — Building on the enthusiastic support of hockey fans last year and the hope of a similar reception this year, Manager Frank Foyston of the Detroit Olympics, the Canadian professional hockey league team, says that he feels that his minor league outfit will put up a better showing than the group which last winter fought a losing battle in the play offs with Stratford.

Foyston, who stepped out of the Olympics managership during the latter part of last season to hold down centre position with the Detroit Cougars, National League team, has returned to his full time job managing the junior league players.

He is impressed particularly with the work of three new men, Bernard Brophy, a forward purchased from Providence of the Canadian-American League, Bert McGineely and Ebbie Goodfellow, the latter two amateurs from Ottawa. It is still uncertain whether McGineely will be used in the forward line or on the defence —he can play either position with equal ability and for this reason will prove a valuable asset.

Bill Brydge, husky defence man, will captain the Olympics. Herbie Stuart will be in the net. Rockburn, who was expected to pair up with Brydge on the back line, is laid up with a bad foot, and Brydge's partner will be either McGineely or Roy Hinsperger. Brophy is expected to start at centre, with Pete Rellefeuille and Stan McCabe on the wings Goodfellow and Gillie will be on the reserve list

May Name Queen's To Enter the C.R.U.

MONTREAL, Que., Nov. 10.—The Canadian Intercollegiate Rugby Football Union, at the request of Canadian Rugby Union, meets to-day to nominate a representative in the Dominion playdowns in the event that McGill defeat Toronto Varsity here to-day and capture the senior challenge rugby title. McGill have definitely decided that should they be successful in winning the title, they will not enter the Canadian championship round.

Queen's are practically certain to be named on their season's showing, for although they divided their home and home games with the Blue, a loss for Toronto to-day will place the Varsity team in the cellar of the final

O. H. A. WOULD PROVIDE GRANT FOR THE ESTABLISHMENT OF TWO MORE SCHLORARSHIPS

Given Queen's and Western Students Holding Amateur Playing Certificates.

WILL ENLARGE SCOPE.

Commercial Organizations May Be Admitted As Associate Members.

TORONTO, Nov. 10.—The 39th annual meeting of the Ontario Hockey Association will be held on Saturday, November 17, at 10 a.m., at the Temple Building, Bay and Richmond streets, Toronto. It is expected that the business of the meeting will be transacted in time for the delegates to attend the football game in the afternoon and the N.H.L. game in the evening.

Always to the forefront in generosity towards deserving objects, the O.H.A. has this year a suggestion before the convention from the president and officers of the association to establish two more scholarships, which no doubt, will receive the unanimous endorsation of the club representatives.

The motion will be introduced by George B. McKay, president of the O.H.A., and seconded by Capt. Jas. T. Sutherland of Kingston, past president of the O.H.A., and reads as follows:

As an encouragement to the young men of Ontario to live up to the best traditions of amateur sport and to assist such as are playing members of the Ontario Hockey Association and are anxious to secure a college education.

Queen's and Western

"Resolved, that the sum of four thousand dollars be granted for the purpose of establishing scholarships of $2,000 each at Queen's University, Kingston, and at Western University, London, said scholarships to be known as the Ontario Hockey Association Scholarships, and to be along similar lines as the $2,000 O.H.A. Memorial Scholarship at University of Toronto. Said scholarships to be open to all players in the O.H.A. series who are in possession of a player's certificate and who have so conducted themselves, both on and off the ice, as to merit the recognition of the sub-committee of the Ontario Hockey Association, and who are qualified for entrance into either of the above-mentioned universities.

"Provided that such selection of the sub-committee shall embrace the player from O.H.A. players in Toronto and Eastern Ontario for the scholarship at Queen's University, and one player from Western and Northern Ontario for the Western Ontario University."

Declaration of Policy.

In a declaration of policy made necessary by changing conditions the following amendment is submitted by Sheriff J. T. Playton on behalf of the sub-committee:

"The Ontario Hockey Association has jurisdiction over all hockey in the Province of Ontario, under the authority of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association and the Amateur Athletic Union of Canada.

"It is empowered to foster, conduct and control amateur hockey in its own territory in a manner consistent with the constitution, by-laws, rules and regulations of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association.

"For the best interests of amateur hockey in the province, this association in convention assembled decrees that no amateur hockey games are to be permitted to be played in this territory, as defined by the C.A.H.A., without the consent and sanction of the O.H.A. through its executive committee church league games or games played on outdoor ice).

All Leagues and Clubs.

"For this purpose all hockey clubs of recognized amateur standing in O.H.A. territory may be admitted to full membership in the O.H.A., with all privileges, upon payment of the usual entrance and annual fee. Leagues and groups of clubs of this character already in existence and not at present under O.H.A. jurisdiction may be affiliated as such on the same basis as clubs."

Associate membership in the O.H.A. may be granted by the Association to clubs, leagues, or associations bearing the name of commercial organizations or of municipal, provincial or other civic services.

"'Associate membership' means full privileges of the association except participating in open competition. If desired, play-downs will be arranged by the O.H.A. executive.

Membership in the O.H.A. is purely voluntary, and application for or acceptance of membership entails acceptance of the governing authority of this association and of the Amateur Athletic Unoin of Canada.

Protests "Gentleman's Agreement."

There is an official protest to be made by the O.H.A. against the "gentlemen's agreement" of the National Hockey League. It is moved by James T. Sutherland, of Kingston, and reads as follows:

"That the Ontario Hockey Association views with a great deal of indignation the action of the governing body of the National Hockey Professional League, in having placed on record, according to reports, a clause whereby amateur players, without their knowledge or consent, are portioned off to the various clubs in the National Hockey League as their property.

"Believing that such action against the citizenship of our young Canadians is degrading and savors of the commonest form of athletic slavery, we desire to advise the National Hockey League that we will take every step possible to bring such action to the notice of the courts of Canada, in order to annul for all time such a restriction.

"And that the attention of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association be drawn to the action taken by this association.

Minor Amendments.

Sheriff Paxton introduces a number of amendments as follows:

To the constitution:

On page 43 of the rule book add the following to Clause 3:

No person who is actively connected with professional sport, either as a player or officer of a club, shall be permitted to direct a team during any game, nor may he even sit in the players' box.

Also make Clause 8, rules of competitioon, conform to this clause:

To the regulations:

Present rule. 13. The expenses of the travelling club shall be fixed at the rate of fifteen cents per mile for one way for 10 men,which expenditure must be guaranteed and paid by the home club.

Amendment: In third line strike out "ten" and substitute "twelve."

To Rules of Game.

To amend Clause 1, rules of the game, relating to players, permitting three extra players as substitutes instead of two, as has been the custom. This makes ten players altogether, including the substitute goalkeeper, but only six players shall be on the ice at any time during a match.

Addition to Clause 12, knocking on:

Any player of the defending team back of the 60-foot line may kick or carry the puck with his skate, but must not kick or carry it over his 60-foot line.

Change the word "deliberately" in third line of Clause 12, too "intentionally."

"THE CARDBOARD LOVER," NEW MARION DAVIES FILM, DEPICTS COMEDY AND DRAMA OF GIRL TOURISTS ABROAD.

Two Shows on Monday Night, 7 and 9 o'clock—Special Holiday Matinee.

With "Tillie the Toiler" and "The Patsy" still fresh in the public mind, Marion Davies tightens her grip on the title of leading comedienne of the screen with her current performance as Sally in "The Cardboard Lover," coming on Monday to the Regent Theatre. The Cosmopolitan star is funny, personable and appealing in her latest role, and she floored the audience last night with her own enjoyable brand of comedy.

The story of the new film is simple, but it provides a suitable framework for a succession of original gags, dramatic situations, and hilarious moments. Sally arrives in Monte Carlo with a group of other American college girls on a "personally conducted tour." Here she meets Andre, a tennis champion in the toils of Simone, a voluptuous adventuress. These two roles are played by Nils Asther and Jetta Goudal. Sally falls for Andre's dashing appearance and pursues him in an effort to obtain his autograph.

Andre discovers Signor Torino, played by Andres de Segurola, in Simone's apartment, throws him out and tells Simone that he is through with her for ever. Sally still pursues him for that autograph. She follows him to the Casino, takes the bank in a Baccarat game to be close to him, and loses ten thousand francs. She cannot repay this debt to Andre, but he, seeing Simone approaching, tells her that she can work out the debt by acting as his fiancee before her, and that under no condition must she allow him to weaken and go back to Simone. Sally promises, and then the fun begins.

But "The Cardboard Lover" owes most of its charm to Miss Davies' skill as a comedienne, and it is one of her pictures you can ill afford to miss.

AT THE CAPITOL.

TOM MIX AND VAUDEVILLE TEAM.

A snappy pair of vaudeville performers, in the Cole Brothers, provide a feature of the program at the Capitol Theatre for this week end. They do a singing, dancing and banjo act that brings down the house. Repeated encores greet their efforts in the musical and dancing line.

Tom Mix, whose shadow never grows less, as he continues to be one of the most popular of stars for children, as for adults, is the hero, Tom Blake, of "The Painted Post," a characteristic whirlwind romance, full of vim and action, of the west, with Tom as the sheriff.

In this picture, Blake takes over the management of a bankrupt hotel and then entertains a group of bandits who are watching for the arrival of a payroll for a neighboring mine. A girl from the East arrives, an artist who is intent on sketching the western cowboy in his native habitat. The bandit leader and Tom vie for her favour and the former appears to be winning out, when Fortune takes a turn and Blake captures the lady, after various thrilling episodes in which he and his wonder horse, Tony, figure in their usual startling manner.

BIG HOLIDAY PROGRAM AT THE CAPITOL—STEWART WIDDESS AND HIS "SILVER SLIPPER ORCHESTRA" ON THE STAGE, AND THE BIG SUPER-FEATURE "THE FOREIGN LEGION" ON THE SCREEN. THREE PERFORMANCES ON THE HOLIDAY, 2.30, 7.00, 9.00.

For Thanksgiving Day the Capitol will offer a big holiday program of both stage and screen attractions. Stewart Widdess and his "Silver Slipper Orchestra" composed of seven versatile artists of rhythm and syncopation, will be the stage attraction, and will appear at all three performances on the holiday, viz. in the afternoon at 2.30 and at the seven and nine o'clock performances in the evening. The Capitol Concert Orchestra will also be in attendance at all performances on Thanksgiving Day.

The most spectacular and powerful drama in many months is "The Foreign Legion," co-starring Norman Kerry and Lewis Stone, supported by beautiful Mary Nolan and June Marlowe.

This is without a doubt one of the finest pictures of the year and should rate high when the selection of the year's greatest pictures is made.

It is sheer drama, of romance and revolt, relieved with comedy masterfully placed at just the right spots. It cannot hurt your enjoyment by being told that the story revolves around the powerful situation of a son and his father opposed to each other, neither knowning who the other is.

The action takes place in the colorful locale of Algiers and is featured by sensational photographic beauty. On the dramatic side, highlights are the troops and the mutiny in the desert led by Kerry unknowningly against his father, the commanding officer. They also are pitted for the smiles of Mary Nolan, blonde and dangerous. Another powerful sequence is where the father is presiding judge at his son's trial.

Stone and Kerry give powerful characterizations. Mary Nolan is equally strong in her role and photographs beautifully. She brings a new type to the screen—the blonde whose kiss is disaster.

The comedy is largely supplied by Walter Perry who does well, while the romantic interest is furnished with sympathy, by June Marlowe. Crauford Kent is splendid in an unsympathetic role.

Edward Sloman, director, deserves thehighest praise for turning out one of the finest pictures of the year.

NEW COURSE IS DISCUSSED

If History is Not Interesting It Is Teacher's Fault, Says Speaker.

TELLS OF TRIP.

On Thursday afternoon at the Teachers' Convention, H. Langford discussed the "New Course in Public School History."

Mr. Langford said at the outset that if history is not interesting it is primarily the teacher's fault. Teachers must have a definite purpose in teaching the subject. To know a large mass of facts is not enough. They must have a clear understanding of the principles, ideals and tendencies that run through those facts. The bearing that any particular fact has on subsequent or modern history is a good test as to the value of that fact historically. The teacher must therefore sort out the facts to find what are of real worth. Many interesting stories are in reality of small importance although frequently they are the things best remembered.

The speaker thought that history would be better taught if the old custom of giving notes was abandoned. It is better to give pupils leading questions as they are more suggestive. Text-books are prepared for the pupils and not for the teacher. He should know more than the text book which will require wide reading. He should plan his whole course and select facts that fit in with his purpose.

Know about Empire.

Canadian children in studying British history should know of the building up of the Empire, the literature, and the gradual development of the parliamentary system of government. These then will be the guiding principles in teaching the subject. British history can readily be divided into certain definite periods, such as the Romans, the Anglo-Saxon, the feudal, etc. Deal only with the events that are of importance and typical of each period. Do not introduce unnecessary details that do not affect your purpose.

William I. introduced the feudal system and it formed the basis for more modern history The power of the king weakened gradually until in John's reign the barons could check the king. Edward I. prepared for the breakdown of the feudal system, and laid the foundations for the parliamentary system. The Wars of the Roses wiped out the nobles and feudalism. Then began a sort of struggle between the king and the parliaments through the Tudor and Stuart periods, until the parliament was supreme in the Hanoverian period. The government became central more particularly in the members of the cabinet. There is a golden thread running through these various periods leading up to our present system of government. Thus we see the topics that are important in discussing the political development. Similar plans would be used to discuss England's literary attainments and colonial expansion.

Canadian history lends itself also to discussion under topics such as the period of discovery, the growth of population, development of parliamentary institutions, dealings with United States, etc. These topics suggest the historical facts of importance.

Mr. Langford said that examinations are in many ways a hindrance to history and tend to spoil interest. History should not be studied with examinations constantly in view.

Discussion Follows.

In the discussion that followed it was pointed out that, as long as there were examinations in the subject it seemed necessary to give notes to help pupils organize their knowledge.

Misses Adams and Buck and Messrs. Park and Miller told of their trip to the Ottawa schools last fall. They did not think that ours suffered anything in the comparison. Discipline seemed more free and easy in the other city.

The beauties of the Parliament Buildings, the luxury of the Chateau Laurier, the interesting relics of the archives, the wonderful system of making coins in the Mint, and the delicate instruments seen in the Observatory were all duly appreciated.

COLLAPSED ON FIRST BED

Kidneys were terrible, Hamilton woman declares.

Blesses Gin Pills

To Mrs. Louisa Pike life was unbearable. She admits frankly, "I had backache almost continually—could not carry a pail of water without getting dizzy or giddy."

What a plight to be in! But this wasn't all. Mrs. Pike's letter states further, "I couldn't sweep the floor without sitting down frequently, or walk upstairs without collapsing on the first bed. I decided to try Gin Pills," she goes on, "and now I feel the best I have ever felt in my life."

Attention to your kidneys now may save you pain and money later. Take Gin Pills the very first time you notice symptoms of trouble—backache, dizzy spells, spots before your eyes, headaches, swollen joints, brick dust in urine, a burning sensation attendant on scanty or too frequent urination. Soothe and strengthen your kidneys. Stay healthy. 50c. a box at your drug store. National Drug & Chemical Co. of Canada Limited, Toronto, Canada.

If ye break faith with us who die,

Break faith we shall not! Holding high the sacred torch—the torch of British Justice and Freedom—we, Canadians, shall "carry on" with steadfastness and resource.

Break faith we shall not! Through honest endeavor, industrious efforts, loyalty to the British Commonwealth of Nations of which our nation is a part—we shall strive that we may qualify to receive the Torch from the hands of our heroes in Flanders fields.

Grain Values Increase Following Report Issue

CHICAGO, Nov. 10 (Canadian Press).—Bullish aspects of the Government crop report did much to send corn prices higher early to-day and other grains kept company. With buying active, March and May deliveries of corn outdid the season's high price record established only the day before. Opening at ¼ to 7-8 gain, corn later advanced a little more. Wheat started unchanged to 5-8 up, and afterwards rose moderately all around. Oats also were firmer.

Wheat, Dec. 114 7-8, March 120¼; corn, Dec. 84½, March 87 1-8; oats, Dec. 44 7-8, March 45 3-8.

Coming Year Holds Out Best Prospects For Car Companies For Many Years Past,—Canadian Car Company.

After a period of lean business in the car building line, equipment companies in Canada are entering a year which gives promise of being the most active experienced for a long time past. The recent orders awarded to the different companies by the two big Canadian railways, which important in themselves, are understood to be preliminary to a considerably larger program of adding to their rolling stock equipment.

In the case of Canadian National Railways, the present appropriation calls for the expenditure of some $16,000,000. Orders so far placed leaves a further margin to be used up, and additional contracts are expected to follow within a short time. The same applies to Canadian Pacific Railway. While no definite indication has been given as to the amount that has been appropriated by C.P.R., it is understood that it is substantially in excess of the amount involved in the contracts already let.

So far as Canadian Car & Foundry Company is concerned, the whole story is not told in the statement of car orders received. The company is understood to be experiencing very active conditions in its specialty departments, which turn out fittings of different kinds for all classes of railway cars and locomotives. The steel foundry branch is also reported to be operating at a high rate of activity.

Mild Weather Holds Up Winter Buying But Business in General Healthy.

Toronto reports to Bradstreet's say that the fact that the weather still remains rather mild is militating against the active movements of cold weather lines which should be in progress at this time of year. One or two days have been cold enough to cause the individual to wear a heavy overcoat but on many days there has been no incentive to purchase new coats or furnishings. Other lines however are in good demand. Groceries are moving well and the shops are now beginning to prepare for the Christmas trade which is expected to be a very active one. Industry is active and the employment situation continues very favorable. Building too is well maintained although new undertakings are now not so plentiful as they were earlier this year. It is expected, however, that the New Year will see many new projects announced. The implement trade, the rubber industry, textiles and iron and steel plants are all well employed. Collections are fair to good.

Canadian Bank of Commerce Plans For Standard Shareholders.

This indicates that Standard Bank dividends automatically cease on Oct. 31. This dividend is for shareholders of record Nov. 15, and is payable Dec. 1.

News From the Mines

Through Solloway, Mills & Company

KOOTENAY FLORENCE

The market for Kootenay Florence was consideraly more active Thursday than it has been for some time. Our Vancouver correspondent reports that conditions at the mine are a little more promising and that the outlook for the location of the downward extension of the orebodies found higher up was very good. It was reported from another source that at 3700 feet from the portal of the main adit a replacement body in limestone had been encountered in a crosscut.

Pioneer.

After eliminating free gold, channel assays up to $50 a ton have been obtained on the Jubilee break on Pioneer Mines, which is reported to be running in very rich sections A 25-ton test mill is being installed for the purpose of gauging the average content of the 75 foot wide orebody in which these spectacular sections occur. Jubilee Lake is being pumped out in order that the crosscut to the orebody can be continued to the hanging wall which has indicated rich ore with diamond drilling.

Lake Shore.

The annual report of Lake Shore Mines was given out on Thursday, and showed that the gold production for the 12 months ending June 30 last was $3,629,317.57. This amount is an increase approximately $525,000 over the previous year. Current assets of the company amounted to $1,466,436.17. Net profits were approximately $1,680,000, or $120,000 greater than the previous year. Dividends during the period amounted to $1,600,000. The only disappointing feature of the report was the statement by President Harry Oakes that the present capacity of about 1000 tons a day was not to be changed. This was a surprise to those who had visualized a large increase in milling facilities for the year 1929. Efforts are to be directed towards deeper development so that ore may be left in the upper levels for the purpose of safety.

Teck-Hughes.

Teck-Hughes Gold Mines Limited was another of the big Kirkland Lake producers that issued its annual report Thursday. The most noticeable feature of this report was the reduction in costs from $9.60 the previous year to $6.32 per ton milled for this year. Gold production to August 31 was $4,584,443, an increase of about $2,420,000 over the previous year. The net operating profit was $2,836,512, up nearly $1,800,000. The net operating profit was $10.25 per ton. Liquid assets were approximately $2,000,000. The mine was chiefly developed in the six levels from the 14th to the 19th. Excellent average grades, and good stoping widths were experienced on all six levels.

Calgary Oil Gossip.

McLeod directors decided to begin No 5 well as soon as possible. Will also deepen No. 2. No 3 drilling in lime.

Royalite No. 17 drilling 110 feet in lime.

McDougall No. 2 confirmed now that they got 1,000,000 cu. ft. gas.

Illinois-Alberta No 2 again drilling at 3351 feet.

East Crest No 2 at 800 feet. Said to be in hard band in Kootenays.

Okalta has blown in with 10,000,000 cu ft. of gas per day. Officials of the company state that this will probably mean 200 bbls of oil per day.

NEW COURSE IS DISCUSSED

cupied the chair. The opening address was given by Miss McConnachie on "The Mentally Retarded Child as a Primary Class Problem."

"All children three years or more retarded" should be placed in an auxiliary class. Very true—there are also many children who are not yet three years retarded, who should be getting the benefit of special class training. These children are in the primary classes of our schools.

The outstanding differences between these children and the normal primary children include:

Lack of sustained and controlled attention.

Inability to grasp the fundamentals of reading.

Poor number concepts.

Poor muscular co-ordination with resulting lack of motor control.

Probably poor emotional control.

Deportment—which may be either good, bad or indifferent, and may include bad personal habits.

In regard to deportment, these children must be taught prompt obedience, to recognize the person in authority, and rules, and law in general.

Helpful Suggestions.

Miss McConnachie then gave a number of helpful suggestions as to special course of study, and method of teaching it. The special child needs a special curriculum.

In conclusion, she stated that that mentally retarded children should be taught to do errands and to assist in the care of the school-room, since this sort of work may be the life-work of many of them. Training in personal habits, both at home and at school, in polite forms of greeting, in keeping clean and tidy, is all very important to these children because it tends to make them more like other children and less a class set apart.

Plenty of Equipment.

In the reports of the work observed at Ottawa last year, several teachers remarked on the abundance and variety of equipment used in the Ottawa schools.

The following are gleanings from a report of the primary section of the O. E. A., given by Miss V. Fussee:

The primary teacher does the pioneering in educational work. She assumes the responsibility for the children's mental and physical growth, and character development, during a most impressionable period in their lives. In addition she must introduce to them the course of study, of which the most important part is learning to read. The ability to read readily and with understanding, will be useful in every department of life. A large part of the primary teacher's burden is finding the method of approach which will produce this ease in reading.

Dr. Blatz, of the University of Toronto, says that teachers of to-day are spending too much time in studying how to teach, and not enough in finding out how children learn. The child must be given a motive before he may be expected to make the effort to learn. That motive may be a desire for success. We should so regulate effort, that it will be crowned by success. The difficulty lies in the fact that, with a large group of children it is next to impossible for the teacher to so regulate a common activity that all will achieve success. The slower and the dull pupils are the problem.

In a paper, "A Drive for Good English," daily practice in English for the first grade was advised. The child's vocabulary should be enriched by much story reading. A judicious effort should be made to eradicate slang, remembering, that too much discussion of slang in a class might impress it more forcibly.

Primary Work.

Miss Connolly then followed with a paper, in which she gave an outline of the primary work she endeavors to cover in the kindergarten. She showed by many helpful examples of interesting play how they adapt their methods in building the primary work from kindergarten principles and activities. The aim of the kindergarten-primary is to lay a foundation for more advanced primary work. The whole child is considered and every side of his nature is given a chance for training and growth.

A vocal solo by Miss Batten was much appreciated.

The meeting was then opened for discussion of difficulties, and many helpful suggestions were given.

Miss Margaret Eastwood gave excellent suggestions for bridging that break which comes between the kindergarten-primary and formal primary work. Some of the game and play methods of the kindergarten might well be carried over to the primary for the first few months. Oral phonics should precede the formal written phonics of primer grades. Valuable helps were given in conducting lessons in the former, also devices for making phonics easier during the first weeks of a term.

Methods were suggested for assisting little pupils to gain muscular control in writing. The helpful oral number work devices of primary kindergarten would develop accuracy in the later and formal arithmetic.

TONIC TREATMENT FOR INDIGESTION

Indigestion Comes With a Run-Down Condition — Relief Comes Through Enriching the Blood — Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Make New Blood.

There are many symptoms of indigestion such as acute pain after eating, belching of wind, nausea and vomiting, bloating and pains in the region of the heart, a dread of food for the misery it causes. Dieting and the use of pre-digested foods may give ease, but that is all, and meanwhile the stomach grows steadily weaker. The work of digestion depends upon the blood and nerves and the only way to get rid of indigestion is to tone up the stomach through the blood, to do the work nature intended it should do. The one thorough way to do this is through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, which renew the blood, strengthen the nerves and enable the stomach to do its work with ease and comfort. Neglected indigestion means prolonged misery. If you have any of the symptoms of this trouble try the tonic treatment with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills at once and you will be gratified with the results.

Among the many who have found new health through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills is Mrs. Ada Webb, R.R. No. 3, Prescott, Ont., who says:—"For a long time I went through the tortures of nervous indigestion; I call it torture because no other word can describe what I endured. If my stomach was empty I retched. If I took food I vomited. I did not sleep, and I was steadily growing weaker. I doctored for months but with no benefit One day my husband said, as the treatment you have had has not helped you, why not try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I consented and he got me a supply. After I had been taking the pills for a while I knew they were helping me as the pains and retching grew less and I slept better. I gladly continued the use of the pills and in a few months I felt like a new woman, better than I had felt for years, and able to work for my husband and children again. After such a wonderful experience how can I do anything else but recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills."

If you need a blood-building tonic begin taking Dr. Williams' Pinks Pills to-day. Sold by all medicine dealers or sent by mail at 50 cents a box by writing The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

IN MEMORIAM.

GRAHAM.—In ever loving memory of our dear daughter, Jessie, wife of Albert Graham, who died on Nov. 12, 1926.

Sadly Missed by Father and Mother, Mr. and Mrs. George Cummings.

Just a sad and sweet remembrance
Just a memory fond and true,
Just a token of affection
And a heartache still for you.

IN MEMORIAM.

In loving memory of my dear husband, Alfred Sherwood, who died November 11, 1926.

The depth of sorrow we cannot tell
Of the loss of one we loved so well.
And while he sleeps a peaceful sleep
His memory we shall always keep.

Days of sadness oft come over us
Tears of sorrow often flow
Memory keeps our loved one near us
Whom God claimed two years ago.

—Lovingly remembered by his Wife and Family.
